

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

THE Law of Trusts as administered in India closely resembles the English law in the general principles applied, although the system upon which it is administered is different; I propose, therefore, in the first place, to describe the origin and growth of trusts in England. In order to do this, it is necessary to go back to the time of the Norman conquest, and to consider shortly the tenures by Tenures.

LECTURE I. — which lands in England are held. At the time of the conquest, the greater part of the land was confiscated, and was granted by the conqueror to his followers according to what is known as the feudal system. The lands were held by the grantees from the sovereign, upon condition that they should, when called upon, perform certain military duties. The sovereign was considered to be the owner of the granted lands, and was called the lord paramount, while the services to be rendered were regarded as incident, or annexed to the ownership of the land; in fact, the rent to be paid for it.<sup>1</sup> At first the interest of the grantee in the lands granted did not extend beyond his own life. In course of time it gradually improved in stability and acquired an hereditary character, so much so, that the grantee, considering himself as substantially the owner, began to imitate the example of his sovereign by carving out portions of his land, to be held of himself by some other person, on terms and conditions similar to those of the original grant. This method of creating estates in the granted land was termed sub-infeudation. A continued chain of successive dependencies was thus established, connecting each stipendiary or vassal with his immediate superior or lord.<sup>2</sup> The grant, as we have seen, did not originally extend beyond the life of the first vassal; but, in process of time, grants were made to a man and his sons, and then to a man and his heirs. This method of holding lands gave rise to the fundamental maxim, which still prevails as regards land in England, that all land belonging to any subject in the realm is holden of some superior, and either mediately or immediately of the sovereign. And as all lands were holden, they were called tenements; the possessors, tenants; and the manner of their possession, a tenure.<sup>3</sup> There is no such thing, according to the English law, as the absolute ownership of land. All that a subject can have, is an estate in the land.

Estates of freehold. The only estates with which we need concern ourselves, are those which are called freehold estates, because they were the only estates which a free man would hold,—namely, estates for life, in tail, and in fee-simple. If land was granted to a man simply without more, that gave him an estate for his life only, and on his death the land escheated to the grantor. If land was granted to a man and the heirs of his body, he was said to have an estate tail, which descended on his death to his lawful issue, children, grandchildren, and more remote descendants, so long as his posterity endured. If the first owner, or any descendant who had succeeded to the estate, died without children, the estate escheated to the grantor or his heir. If land was granted to a man and his heirs, he had an estate in fee-simple. This estate descended on his death to his heirs. If he died without children, the estate went to his collateral relations, and only escheated on the failure of all persons who could possibly claim through him.<sup>1</sup> All these estates were originally inalienable either during the lifetime of the holder, unless with the consent of the lord, or by will. It would be foreign to the purpose of these Lectures to trace the steps by which the right of alienation was acquired, but I will endeavour shortly to explain the means used for the transfer of an estate from one person to another.

I.

The most ancient form of conveyance, was a feoffment with livery of seisin. The feudal doctrine that all estates in land are holden of some lord, necessarily implies that all lands must always have some feudal holder or tenant. This feudal tenant is the freeholder, or holder of the freehold. He has the feudal possession, called the seisin; and so long as he is seised, nobody else can be. The freehold is said to be in him, and until it is taken out of him and given to some other, the land itself is regarded as in his custody or possession. A feoffment with livery of seisin, was the gift of an estate in the land, accompanied with livery,—that is, delivery of the seisin or feudal possession. At the time of the gift, the nature of the estate to be taken by the person to whom it was given, or feoffee, was marked out or limited.<sup>2</sup> Before the reign of Henry VIII, a simple gift of lands to a man and his heirs, accompanied by livery of seisin, was all that was necessary to convey to that person an estate in fee-simple in the lands. The Courts of Law did not deem any consideration necessary; but if a man voluntarily gave lands to another, and put him in possession of them, they held the gift to be complete and irrevocable, just as a gift of money or goods, made without any consideration, is, and has ever been, quite beyond the power of the giver to retract, if accompanied by delivery of possession. In law, therefore, the person to whom a gift of lands was made and seisin delivered, was considered thenceforth to be the true owner of the lands,<sup>1</sup> and his estate was known as the legal estate. We have now to consider how another class of estates, known to English law as equitable estates, arose.

houses.

After the power of alienation had been acquired, it became a common thing for the grantees of estates to convey them to religious houses. The members of these houses were unable, by reason of their profession, to perform the military services required by the feudal law; they obtained great quantities of land, and an undue proportion of wealth and power. As religious houses fell under the legal description of corporations, who possess the character of perpetuity, the lord was deprived of the benefits he derived from escheats. Lands belonging to such bodies were consequently said to be in mortuâ manu, or in mortmain, because they produced none of the advantages to the feudal lords, which lands held by individuals did. In order to check conveyances to religious houses and corporations, various Statutes, called the Statutes of Mortmain, were passed, prohibiting corporations from purchasing land, unless a license in mortmain was procured from the lord. In order to evade these Statutes, the following device was resorted to by the ecclesiastical bodies. The grant, instead of being made direct to the religious house, was made to some person to the use of the religious house. A gift of this kind conferred no estate or interest whatever in contemplation of law on those whose benefit was designed, for the principle of feudal tenure was, to look no further than to the actual and ostensible tenant, and to consider him alone as the proprietor.<sup>2</sup> The use, therefore, declared upon such a gift, being in the view of the ordinary Courts of Justice a nonentity, escaped the operation of the Statutes of Mortmain.<sup>3</sup> "The laity were not long behind in resorting to this contrivance as regards both land and chattels, to enable them to defeat creditors of their executions and for other fraudulent purposes, frequently, it seems, selecting some person as their feoffee, who from his station and power might aid them in setting the law at defiance. Subsequently, conveyances to uses were put in practice by the laity for less objectionable purposes. During the civil

was occasioned by the claims of the rival Houses of York and Lancaster, every person who could be accused of having sided with the defeated party, was liable to attainder, and by consequence, to the confiscation of his estates. To avoid this hazard, secret conveyances to uses, or upon special trusts, appear to have been resorted to by persons of every rank and condition. In the reign of Edward IV, at which time this mode of conveyance had become fully established, the Judges expressly held, that a use was not forfeitable by attainder; this would of course confirm the practice.”<sup>1</sup> When a feoffment was made to uses in this way, the legal estate was in the feoffee. He filled the possession, did the feudal duties, and was, in the eye of the law, the tenant of the fee. The person to whose use he was seised, called by the law writers the cestui que use, had the beneficial property in the lands, had a right to the profits, and a right to call upon the feoffee to convey the estate to him and to defend it against strangers. This right at first depended upon the conscience of the feoffee; if he withheld the profits from the cestui que use, or refused to convey the estate as he directed, the cestui qui use was without remedy. To redress this grievance, the writ of subpoena was devised, or rather adopted from the Common Law Courts, by the clerical Chancellors, to oblige the feoffee to attend in Court and disclose his trust; and then the Court compelled him to execute it. This writ is said to have been first issued by John Waltham, Bishop of Salisbury, who was Lord Keeper in the reign of Richard the Second. “No sooner was this protection extended than half the lands in the kingdom became vested in feoffees to uses. Thus, in the words of an old counsellor, the parents of the trust were Fraud and Fear, and a Court of Conscience was the Nurse.”<sup>2</sup> “The power assumed by the clerical Chancellors in controlling the maxims and principles of the Common Law, cannot be considered as short of legislative; for not only, in virtue of a law created for private convenience and independent of the Common Law, was the person legally entitled deprived of all the beneficial incidents of property; but a distinct title to the enjoyment was introduced, not only unknown to, but at first repudiated by, the law: the legal title indeed was not directly affected, yet the legal owner was compelled to exercise his legal rights, so as only to be subservient to the protection and enjoyment of this equitable interest: although by this means, as regarded the real owner of the estate, the legal rights of third persons, including the Crown, were defeated, which indeed was one of the palpable objects for which trusts were introduced."<sup>1</sup> Uses were not considered as issuing out of or annexed to the land, as a rent, a condition or a right of common, but as a trust reposed in the feoffee, that he should dispose of the lands at the discretion of the cestui que use, permit him to receive the rents, and in all other respects have the beneficial property of the lands. Thus, between the feoffee and cestui qui use, there was a confidence in the person and privity in estate.<sup>2</sup> But this was only as between the feoffee and the cestui que use. To all other persons the feoffee was as much the real owner of the fee as if he did not hold it to the use of another. He performed the feudal duties, his wife was entitled to dower, his infant heir was in wardship to the lord, and upon attainment the estate was forfeited.<sup>3</sup> The doctrine of uses, as regulated and settled by the Court of Chancery, was so applied that it became productive of serious grievances. Persons who had a claim to the lands could not find out the legal tenant against whom it was necessary to proceed. Husbands were deprived of their curtesy, and widows of their dower, creditors were defrauded, purchasers for valuable consideration were frequently defeated, and the king and other feudal lords were deprived of their tenures, and other inconveniences attended the secrecy observed in making conveyances to uses, by which the beneficial interest belonged to one person and the legal estate to another.<sup>4</sup>

Statute of Uses.

To remedy these inconveniences, the Statute of Uses<sup>5</sup> was passed by which the possession was divested out of the persons seised to the use, and transferred to the cestui que use. By this Statute it was enacted, that where any person or persons shall stand seised of any lands or other hereditaments to the use, confidence, or trust of any other person or persons, the persons that have any such use, confidence, or trust (by which was meant the persons beneficially entitled) shall be deemed in lawful seisin and possession of the same lands and hereditaments for such estates as they have in the use, trust, or confidence. LECTURE

I.

The modern doctrine of uses, as distinguished from trusts, was introduced by this Statute. Uses, therefore, in the modern acceptation of the word, are such limitations of lands and other hereditaments as are executed by the Statute and confer on the beneficial owner the legal estate; and trusts are similar to what uses were at Common Law before the passing of the Statute. Uses, under the Statute, were subject to the jurisdiction of the Courts of Common Law, and trusts to that of the Courts of Chancery or Equity.<sup>1</sup>

The object of this Statute was to abolish the jurisdiction of the Court of Chancery over landed estates by giving actual possession at law to every person beneficially entitled in equity. But the Court of Chancery recovered its power in the following manner. Soon after the passing of the Statute of Uses, a doctrine was laid down, that there could not be a use upon a use. For instance, suppose a feoffment had been made to A and his heirs, to the use of B and his heirs, to the use of C and his heirs, the doctrine was, that the use to C and his heirs was a use upon a use, and was, therefore, not affected by the Statute of Uses, which could only execute or operate on the use to A and his heirs. So that B, and not C, became entitled under such a feoffment to an estate in fee-simple in the lands comprised in the feoffment. This gave the Court of Chancery an opportunity for interfering. It was manifestly inequitable that C, the party to whom the use was last declared, should be deprived of the estate which was intended solely for his benefit; the Courts of Chancery, therefore, interposed on his behalf, and constrained the party to whom the law had given the estate, to hold in trust for him to whom the use was last declared. So that whenever it is wished to vest a freehold estate in one person as trustee for another, the conveyance is made unto the trustee or some other person and his heirs, to the use of the trustee and his heirs, in trust for the party intended to be benefited (called cestui que trust) and his heirs. An estate in fee-simple is thus vested in the trustee by force of the Statute of Uses, and the entire beneficial interest is given over to the cestui que trust by the Court of Chancery. The estate in fee-simple which is vested in the trustee is called the legal estate, being an estate to which the trustee is entitled only in the contemplation of a Court of Law, as distinguished from equity. The interest of the cestui que trust is called an equitable estate, being an estate to which he is entitled only in the contemplation of the Court of Chancery which administers equity.<sup>1</sup> The cestui que trust is the beneficial owner of the property. The trustee, by virtue of his legal estate, has the right and power to receive the rents and profits; but the cestui que trust is able, by virtue of his estate, in equity, at any time, to oblige his trustee to come to an account and hand over the whole of the proceeds.<sup>1</sup> The general idea of a use or trust answered more to the fidei commissum than the usus fructus of the civil law, which latter was the temporary right of using a thing without having the ultimate property or full dominion of the substance; but the fidei commissum, which usually was created by will, was the disposal of an inheritance to one, in confidence, that he should convey it, or dispose of the profits, at the will of another. The right of the latter was originally considered in the Roman law as jus precarium,—that is, one for which the remedy was only by entreaty or request; but by subsequent institution, it acquired a different character,—it became jus fiduciarium, and entitled to a remedy from a Court of Justice, and it was the business of a particular magistrate, the praetor fidei commissarius, to enforce the observance of these confidences.

Trusts
among Hindus.Krishnamini Dasi's case.

We see, therefore, that, according to the English law, there may be two persons holding different estates in the same property. Both are entitled to convey their estates, both are entitled to the rents and profits: one, the legal owner, to receive them; the other, the equitable owner, to enjoy them. This concurrent existence of two systems of jurisprudence is known, I believe, only to the English law, and led to doubts as to whether trusts could be created by Hindus. "The Hindu law," said Peacock, C. J.,<sup>2</sup> "so far as I am acquainted with it, makes no provision for trusts. There is nothing in the Hindu law at all analogous either to trusts of the English law or to the fidei commissum of the Roman law, which were probably the origin of trusts in the English law." In S. M. Krishnaramini Dasi v. Ananda Krishna

Bose,<sup>1</sup> Markby, J., quoting the above case, decided, that trusts could not be created by Hindus. His Lordship said, that there was not the least ground for supposing that anything like the English law of trusts existed in Hindu law,—that is to say, a system according to which property subject to a trust has to be viewed under a double aspect,—that of the trustee on the one hand, who is declared by law to be the absolute and uncontrolled owner; and the cestui que trust on the other, who has a right in equity to interfere in the ownership and compel the trustee to abandon all or nearly all his rights in his (the cestui que trust's) favour. “There is not,” continued his Lordship, “a trace of it in any passage of any work on Hindu law that I have seen. There is not an indication of it in the habits of the people, and so far from the English system of trusts resting on principles of jurisprudence, which, though dormant, may be considered as universally present, it is undoubtedly one of the most anomalous institutions in the whole history of law—one that could never have possibly been conceived à priori, or worked out from any general principle, and is distinctly the product of our own time.” On appeal, however,<sup>2</sup> Peacock, C. J., explained the passage from his judgment cited above, saying, “I did not say, nor did I intend to say, that a devise upon trust for a purpose which might be legally carried into effect without the intervention of trustees would necessarily be void. There are many cases in which trusts have been enforced against Hindus both by the Courts in this country and by Her Majesty in Council upon appeal.” Macpherson, J., said in p. 284:—“I think that, for various reasons,—because there is nothing in Hindu law which is repugnant to, or inconsistent with, the idea of trusts,—because trusts are not unknown to the Hindu law,—and because trusts, as among Hindus, have been recognized and administered for the last century almost, by this Court and the late Supreme Court,—we are bound so to recognize trusts and to give effect to them. I think that, both by Hindu law, and the practice which has always prevailed in our Courts, a Hindu may legally deal with his property so as to create a trust—a relation in many respects similar to, although not necessarily identical with, that known in English law as the relation of trustee and cestui que trust. I concede that

LECTURE trusts, in the strict sense in which an English lawyer uses the term,—that is to say, trusts, to the existence of which a 'legal' estate and an 'equitable' estate, wholly separate from and independent of each other, are necessary, were unknown to the old Hindu law. There being no distinction in Hindu law between legal and equitable estates, it was, of course, impossible that there should be anything corresponding to the two estates which are so well known to the English law; nevertheless, trusts, in the wider sense of the term, were by no means unknown in the tenets of Hindu law. I do not speak of the various personal ordinary trusts, such as deposits and bailments, which are expressly recognized and dealt with by all the writers on Hindu law. The existence of such trusts does not affect the present question, which relates solely to special trusts, where the person to whom property is given is bound to use it for the benefit of another, or to apply it in a particular manner indicated, and not necessarily for his own advantage. But in the case of endowments for religious and charitable purposes, and gifts to idols, there is no doubt that trusts have always been known. It is said, that in a gift to an idol there is no trust, and that there is an actual gift to the idol. It may be so in words; but, by whatever name it is called, it is a mere setting apart of property which is to be held and used by the manager for the time being, whether he be a priest or whoever he may be, for the purpose, in the first instance, of providing for the worship of the idol, or of carrying out the religious or charitable objects of the original donor. Practically, if a trust were not recognized in such cases by Hindu law, no endowment or gift to an idol, or for religious or charitable purposes, could have any permanent effect; while, as a matter of fact, we see such endowments are very carefully preserved and are continued from generation to generation. But granting, for the sake of argument, that trusts are not expressly recognized by the old Hindu law, that is not, in my opinion, any reason why we should now conclude that they are invalid. There is nothing in Hindu law which forbids trusts, or is in any way repugnant to them or inconsistent with their existence. The Hindu law system is not, and does not profess to be, exhaustive; on the contrary, it is a system in which new customs and new propositions, not repugnant to the old law, may be engrafted upon it from time to time, according to circumstances and the progress of society. LECTURE Fiduciary relations extend as the transactions and inter- I. course between men extend. In all probability, trusts had,

 by degrees, sprung into existence before we find any record of them in our reports, just as I believe the custom of making wills, although it may be of no very ancient origin, prevailed among Hindus quite independently of any decisions in the Courts, or any intervention of English lawyers. The Supreme Court was called on to grant, and did grant, probate of the will of a Hindu within a few months after the Court was instituted; and we find the earliest legislation recognizing the wills of Hindus. There is not necessarily anything anomalous or unnatural in the constitution of trusts. The general position of trusts in English law with these two absolutely separate estates, the legal and the equitable, may be somewhat anomalous.
 But this is the result of the peculiar procedure in England, where the Court of Chancery has always been distinct from the Courts of Common Law, and equitable rights are kept wholly apart from legal. The peculiarity of the English law of trusts arises out of specialities of procedure. But questions of procedure cannot affect the question, whether trusts are to exist, or whether Courts are to give effect to them. I cannot see that the fact that this Court is a Court of Equity as well as of law, and that our procedure differs from that of the old Supreme Court, creates any difficulty in giving effect to, or administering, trusts, or in any way affects the question of substantive law as to whether trusts can or cannot be created." In fit of an unseen principal. If it be said that in these instances and others which might be mentioned, the guardian, manager or gomasta is only an agent, and differs from a trustee, in the strictest sense of the word, in this, namely, that his powers are referable to the authority of the person for whose benefit he acts, and not to any sort of ownership in himself, I would add that, in my opinion, this circumstance does not materially affect the essence of the trust. No doubt, in this country, where Courts of Justice are not distinguished by their functions into Courts of Law and Courts of Equity, and where law and equity are administered by the same tribunal, there is no occasion for the creation and maintenance of an equitable estate in property as separate from the legal estate. There is, consequently, no such thing here as a bare legal estate in one man descendible to heirs, side by side, with a beneficial estate of inheritance, or a succession of beneficial estates in the same property passing down another series of persons. And this, I understand, is all that the Chief Justice and Mr. Justice Markby intended to lay down in the two judgments to which I have been referred.<sup>1</sup> But I think, that whether a man accepts property on the terms of giving another person a specified benefit out of it, or whether he undertakes to manage property on behalf of another, our Courts will, in both cases alike, know how to make him discharge the obligation under which he comes; and I do not hesitate to believe that it is in entire accordance with the genius of the Hindu law that they should do so.

“Although our Courts know nothing of a legal title as distinguished from an equitable title, they can, I apprehend, easily understand the predicament of property placed under the dominion and control of one person, in order that he may deal with and manage it for special purposes involving the benefit of others. In few words, the non-existence of the English equitable estate does not necessitate the non-recognition of a trust. Except, perhaps, in the very rudest state of civilization, trust-ownerships will, most certainly, spring into being, and the interests of society require that, within certain limits at least, effect should be given to those by Courts of Justice.” On appeal,

Peacock, C. J., referring to his judgment in Kumara Asima Krishna Deb v. Kumara Kumara Krishna Deb,<sup>1</sup> said:—"Although the Hindu law contains no express provision upon the subject of uses or trusts, I see nothing contrary to the spirit and principles of the Hindu law in a devise to trustees, giving a beneficial interest to a person to whom it might have been given by a simple devise without the intervention of trustees . . . It is too late to contend that all gifts or alienations upon trust are void, because the ancient Hindu law makes no express mention of them. All that I laid down in the case of Asima Krishna Deb v. Kumara Kumara Krishna Deb<sup>2</sup> was, that a devise for a purpose which would be void as a condition, would be void in the shape of a trust." Finally, on appeal to the Privy Council, it was argued that an estate to be held in trust can have no existence by the Hindu law. Their Lordships, however, said:—"The anomalous law which has grown up in England of a legal estate which is paramount in one set of Courts, and an equitable ownership which is paramount in Courts of Equity, does not exist in, and ought not to be introduced into, Hindu law. But it is obvious that property, whether moveable or immoveable, must, for many purposes, be vested, more or less absolutely, in some person or persons for the benefit of other persons, and trusts of various kinds have been recognized and acted on in India in many cases. Implied trusts were recognized and established here in the case of a benami purchase in Gopee Krist Gosain v. Gunga Persaud Gosain;<sup>3</sup> and in the cases of a provision for charity or other beneficent objects, such as the professorship provided for by the will under consideration, where no estate is conferred upon the beneficiaries, and their interest is in the proceeds of the property (to which no objection has been raised), the creation of a trust is practically necessary. If the intended effect of the argument upon this point was to bring distinctly under the notice of their Lordships the contention that, under the guise of an unnecessary trust of inheritance, the testator could not indirectly create beneficiary estates of a character unauthorized by law, and which could not directly be given without the intervention of the trust, their Lordships adopt the argument upon the ground that a man cannot be allowed to do by

These cases show clearly that there is such a law as the law of trusts existing in this country, and it is difficult to imagine a state of civilization in which some system of trusts should not exist. Without such a system it would be impossible to provide for persons under disability, such as infants and lunatics. It would be impossible to provide for religious or charitable purposes, and for the many instances in which one person obtains control over the property of another, without, perhaps, actual force or fraud, but under circumstances which make it inequitable that he should retain such control. In this course of lectures, I shall confine myself to those principles of the law of trusts which must be applied equally to all cases in which a person, whether governed by English, Hindu, or Muhammadan law, is bound to apply property over which he has control for the benefit of some other. With those portions of the law of trusts which are founded upon the distinction between legal and equitable estates, or upon English Statutes, I shall not attempt to deal, such, for

Although trusts are fully recognized in this country, there has been very little legislation with regard to them. The Penal Code<sup>1</sup> contains<sup>2</sup> provisions for the punishment of criminal breach of trust; the Specific Relief Act<sup>3</sup> defines<sup>4</sup> 'trust' and 'trustee,' and provides<sup>5</sup> that a trustee may sue for the possession of property to the beneficial interest in which the person for whom he is trustee is entitled; the Civil Procedure Code<sup>6</sup> contains provisions<sup>7</sup> for the conduct of suits by and against trustees, executors, and administrators, and provisions<sup>8</sup> as to suits relating to public charities; the Limitation Act<sup>9</sup> provides<sup>10</sup> that no suit against an express trustee or his legal representatives or assigns shall be barred by any length of time, and contains provisions<sup>11</sup> for the limitation of suits to make good loss caused by the breach of trust of a person deceased, for contribution against the estate of a person deceased, against the purchaser of moveable property from a trustee, and against the purchaser of land from a trustee. With these exceptions the Indian Statute-Book is silent on the subject so far as regards the bulk of the population; for the Statute of Frauds, ss. 7 to 11, relating to declarations of trust, resulting trusts, transfer of trusts, and to judgments of cestui que trust, is in force only in the Presidency-Towns. The provisions of Acts XXVII and XXVIII of 1866, the Trustee Relief Acts, have always, up to a very recent date, been applied only in cases where the parties are European British subjects, as the Acts themselves state that they shall only be extended to cases to which English law is applicable. But it has been recently decided in Bombay, by West, J., in the case of In re Kahandas Narrandas,<sup>12</sup> that these provisions are applicable between Hindus. The object of the proceedings was to obtain the

It was admitted that this could be done by the more expensive process of a regular suit, and it was contended that the expression "cases to which English law is applicable" applies to all cases in which the principles of English law have to be referred to, and that as the administration of trusts in this country is governed by the rules of the English Courts of Chancery, the Act applied to the law to be followed, not merely to cases where the parties are English. West, J., granted the application, considering that English law was applicable if the principles recognized by the English Equity Courts were applicable.

Arrange-
subject.

You are aware, no doubt, that, in the year 1879, a bill codifying the law of Private Trusts was laid before the Indian Law Commission. The object of that bill was to codify the law relating to trusts in the wider sense which I have described. It saved the rules of Mahomedan law as to wuqf, and it left untouched religious and charitable endowments established by Hindus and Buddhists as being matters in which the Legislature could not usefully interfere further or otherwise than has been done by Act XX of 1863. This bill has not yet become law. I think, however, that my best course in arranging the subject of these Lectures is to follow the plan upon which the bill is framed. I shall, therefore, commence by defining a trust. I shall then consider the different kinds of trusts; the creation of trusts; the duties and liabilities of trustees; their rights and powers; their disabilities; the rights and liabilities of the cestui que trust; vacating the office of trustee; and the extinction of trusts. I shall also consider the subject of religious and charitable trusts among European British subjects, which is not dealt with by the Act. And I shall also consider the law of trusts as applicable to religious and charitable endowments established by Hindus and Buddhists, and the rules of Muhammadan law as to wuqf.

Definition
of trust.

A trust may be defined as an obligation imposed upon some person or persons having the ownership of property, whether moveable or immoveable, to deal with such property for the benefit of some other person or persons, or for charitable purposes. Mr. Lewin adopts Lord Coke's definition of a use, the term by which, before the Statute of Uses, a trust of lands was designated, and defines a trust to be "a confidence reposed in some other, not issuing out of the land, but as a thing collateral, annexed in privity to the estate of the land, and to the person touching the land, for which cestui que trust has no remedy but by subpœna in Chancery." But this definition is limited to trusts of lands only, whereas trusts may be declared of almost every kind of property. In the Specific Relief Act, I of 1877, the word 'trust' is defined "to include every species of express, implied, or constructive ownership."

There must be a confidence reposed in the trustee. It is not necessary that the confidence should be expressly reposed by the author of the trust in the trustee, for it may be raised by implication of law, as in the case of a constructive trust which is raised by a Court of Equity "whenever a person clothed with a fiduciary character, gains some personal advantage by availing himself of his situation as trustee; for, as it is impossible that a trustee should be allowed to make a profit by his office, it follows that so soon as the advantage in question is shown to have been acquired through the medium of a trust, the trustee, however good a legal title he may have, will be decreed in equity to hold for the benefit of his cestui que trust:"<sup>1</sup> as for example, when a trustee or executor renews a lease in his own name,—or where a factor, agent, partner or other person in whom confidence is reposed, takes advantage of such confidence to acquire a pecuniary benefit for himself,—in such cases he will be made to account to the person in whose interest he was bound to act, and will have to refund any profits he may have made, or make good any loss caused by his acts. These cases I shall deal with at greater length hereafter.

confidence.

"Further, the trustee of the estate need not be actually capable of confidence, for the capacity itself may be supplied by legal fiction, as where the administration of the trust is committed to a body corporate; but a trust is a confidence, as distinguished from jus in re and jus ad rem, for it is neither a legal property nor a legal right to property.

"A trust is a confidence reposed in some other; not in some other than the author of the trust, for a man may convert himself into a trustee, but in some other than the cestui que trust; for, as a man cannot sue a subpœna

- Merger. The person who reposes the confidence is called the author of the trust ; the person who accepts the confidence is called the trustee ; the person for whose benefit the confidence is reposed and accepted is called the cestui que trust, or beneficiary ; the subject-matter of the trust is called trust-property or trust-money ; and the instrument, if any, by which the trust is declared, is called the instrument of trust. These definitions I have taken from the draft code.
- Definition of terms.
- Kinds of trust. Having ascertained what is meant by a trust generally, I now propose to consider the different kinds of trusts. The most important division of trusts is into ' simple ' and ' special ' trusts.
- Simple trust. "The simple trust," says Mr. Lewin,<sup>3</sup> "is where property is vested in one person upon trust for another, and the nature of the trust, not being prescribed by the settlor, is left to the construction of law. In this case cestui que trust has jus habendi, or the right to be put in actual possession of the property, and jus disponendi, or the right to call upon the trustee to execute conveyances of the legal estate as the cestui que trust directs."
- Special trust. "The special trust is where the machinery of a trustee is introduced for the execution of some purpose particularly pointed out, and the trustee is not, as before, a mere passive depository of the estate, but is called upon to exert himself actively in the execution of the settlor's intention ; as where a conveyance is to trustees upon trust to sell for payment of debts."
- Ministerial and discretionary trust. "Special trusts have again been subdivided into ministerial (or instrumental) and discretionary. The former, such as demand no further exercise of reason or understanding than every intelligent agent must necessarily employ ; the latter, such as cannot be duly administered without the application of a certain degree of prudence and judgment."

"A trust to convey an estate must be regarded as ministerial; for, provided the estate be vested in the cestui que trust, it is perfectly immaterial to him by whom the conveyance is executed."

"A fund vested in trustees upon trust to distribute among such charitable objects as the trustees shall think fit,<sup>1</sup> is clearly a discretionary trust, for the selection of the most deserving objects is a matter calling for serious deliberation, and not to be determined upon without due regard to the merits of the candidates, and all the particular circumstances of the case."

"There is frequent mention in the books of a mixture of trust and power,<sup>2</sup> by which is meant, a trust of which the outline only is sketched by the settlor, while the details are to be filled up by the good sense of the trustees. The exercise of such a power is imperative, while the mode and its execution is matter of judgment and discretion."

Mixture of trust and power.

Trusts may also be divided into lawful and unlawful. What trusts are unlawful I shall consider more fully when dealing with the creation of trusts. It is sufficient to state now that all lawful trusts may be enforced by a Court of Equity; and, as a rule, it may be laid down that a trust is lawful until the contrary is shown. Where a trust is unlawful and fraudulent, a Court of Equity will remain neutral, and will neither enforce the trust, nor relieve the person creating it,<sup>3</sup> unless the illegal purpose fails to take effect.<sup>4</sup>

ful trusts.

Again, trusts may be divided into public and private. Trusts for public purposes are such as are constituted for the benefit either of the public at large or of some considerable portion of it answering a particular description. All charitable trusts come under the description of public trusts. "Public purposes," said Lord Romilly, M. R.,<sup>5</sup> "are such as mending or repairing the roads of a parish, supplying water for the inhabitants of a parish, making or repairing bridges over any stream or culvert that may be

It is true that, in a legal sense, they are all charities." A private trust, on the other hand, is a trust created only for the benefit of certain individuals who must be ascertained within a limited time.

Executed and exe-

Finally, trusts may be divided into executed and executory. Where the trust is complete in itself,—that is to say, when the author of the trust has formally and finally declared what interest in the trust-property is to be taken by the cestui que trust, leaving nothing to the discretion of the trustee, the trust is said to be an executed trust. But where directions are given for the execution of some future conveyance or settlement of trust-property, and the particular limitations are not fully or accurately specified, and the trust is, therefore, not complete in itself, but merely contains heads or minutes for the disposition of property which are to be carried into effect in a more formal manner according to the intention to be collected from the instrument, the trust is said to be executory.<sup>1</sup> The distinction between trusts executed and executory was questioned by Lord Hardwicke in Bagshaw v. Spencer;<sup>2</sup> but it has long been firmly established as one of the settled rules of the Court of Chancery. It was thus stated in Austen v. Taylor<sup>3</sup> by Lord Northington: "The words 'executory trust' seem to me to have no fixed signification. Lord King, in the case of Papillon v. Voice,<sup>4</sup> describes an executory trust to be, where the party must come to the Court (the Court of Chancery) to have the benefit of the will. But that is the case of every trust, and I am very clear that this Court cannot make a different construction on the limitation of trust than Courts of Law could make on a limitation in a will, for in both cases the intention shall take place. . . . The true criterion is this; whenever the assistance of the trustees, which is ultimately the assistance of this Court, is necessary to complete a limitation, in that case, the limitation in the will not being complete, that is sufficient evidence of the testator's intention, that the Court should model the limitation. But where the trusts and limitations are already expressly declared, the Court has no authority to interfere and make them different from what they would be at law." And in Jervoise v. The Duke of Northumberland,<sup>1</sup> Lord Eldon said: "Where there is an executory trust,—that is to say, where the testator has directed something to be done, and has not himself, according to the sense in which the Court uses these words, completed the devise in question, the Court has been in the habit of looking to see what was his intention; and if what he has done amounts to an imperfection, the Court inquires what it is itself to do, and it will mould what remains to be done so as to carry that intention into execution."<sup>2</sup> In Coape v. Arnold,<sup>3</sup> Lord Cranworth, L. C., said: "In a certain sense, and to some extent, all trusts are executory, i.e., in all trusts the legal interest is in some person who is bound in conscience, and so is compellable by this Court, to employ that legal interest for the benefit of others. To this extent his duties are executory. Where the subject-matter of the trust is a real estate held by a trustee for the benefit of others, and the trustee has no active duties to perform, such as paying debts, raising portions, or the like, the same rules which would have decided the rights of parties, if the beneficial interest had been legal, will, in general, prevail in deciding for whose benefit the trustee is to hold the estate. The rule is, equity follows the law—a rule essential to the convenient enjoyment of property in this country, where the artificial distinction of legal and equitable estates so extensively prevails."

The cases in which executory trusts usually arise are where articles are entered into previous to a marriage, the parties intending that a more formal document shall be drawn up afterwards to carry out the provisions which are indicated in the articles; or where a testator intends that his property shall be settled in a particular way upon certain persons, but does not in his will state precisely the nature of the estate which he wishes to devise. In these cases the Court is obliged to construe the instrument and to declare between them.

Marriage
articles.

Blackburn
v. Stables.

A material distinction has been recognized in equity between an executory trust founded on marriage articles, and one voluntarily created, as by will. In the former case, the object of the settlement is usually to provide for the issue of the marriage. Therefore, unless the contrary clearly appear, equity presumes that it could not have been the intention of the parties to put it in the power of the parent to defeat the object of the settlement by appropriating the whole estate; and on this presumption the articles will usually be decreed to be executed by limitations in strict settlement. In Blackburn v. Stables,<sup>1</sup> Sir W. Grant, M. R., said:—"I know of no difference between an executory trust in marriage articles and in a will, except that the object and purpose of the former furnish an indication of intention which must be wanting in the latter. When the object is to make a provision by the settlement of an estate for the issue of a marriage, it is not to be presumed that the parties meant to put it in the power of the father to defeat that purpose and to appropriate the estate to himself. If, therefore, the agreement is to limit an estate for life, with remainder to the heirs of the body, the Court decrees a strict settlement in conformity to the presumable intention; but if a will directs a limitation for life, with remainder to the heirs of the body, the Court has no such ground for decreeing a strict settlement. A testator gives arbitrarily what estate he thinks fit. There is no presumption that he means one quantity of interest rather than another; an estate for life rather than in tail or in fee. The subject being mere bounty, the intended extent of that bounty can be known only from the words in which it is given; but if it is to be clearly ascertained from anything in the will, that the testator did not mean to use the expressions which he has employed in their strict, proper, technical sense, the Court, in decreeing such settlement as he has directed, will depart from his words in order to execute his intention; but the Court must necessarily follow his words, unless he has himself shown that he did not mean to use them in their proper sense; and have never said that merely because the direction was for an entail, they would execute that by decreeing a strict settlement." And in Jervoise v. The Duke of Northumberland,<sup>1</sup> Lord Eldon said:—"In marriage articles, the object of such settlement, the issue to be provided for, the intention to provide for such issue, and in short, all the considerations that belong peculiarly to them, afford prima facie evidence of intent, which does not belong to executory trusts under wills. But I take it according to all the decisions, allowing for that an executory trust in a will is to be executed in the same way."<sup>2</sup> In the case of a will, the Court endeavours to carry out the intentions of the testator as apparent on the will, and is not necessarily bound to give technical words their strict signification; and if, therefore, the directions of the testator as to the disposition of the trust-estate show that he could not have intended the expressions to have their strict technical operation, the Court, in decreeing a settlement, will depart from the words in order to execute the intent.<sup>3</sup> Where a testator directs his trustees to settle or convey an estate without more, the Court is obliged to interfere and to point out the estate to be taken by the cestui que trust. But if a testator merely directs the purchase of an estate by his trustees, and himself declares the uses of the estate when purchased, the Court has no power to alter or modify his words;<sup>4</sup> it is only when something is left incomplete and executory by the author of the trust, that a Court of Equity will mould or modify the words in order to give effect to the intentions of the party. For, if the limitations of the trust-estate are definitely and finally declared by the instrument itself, that will be an executed trust, and it must be carried into execution as strictly and literally as if it were a limitation of the legal interest.<sup>5</sup>

If the executory trust, which the testator has attempted to create, is one which is void for illegality, as where it violates the rule against perpetuities, the Court will carry out the testator's intention cy prés, that is, as nearly as possible, and will direct the property to be strictly settled.<sup>6</sup>

LECTURE I.
Intention. We have seen that the Court will endeavour to carry out the intentions of the author of the trust, and in so doing is not bound to give their strict meaning to technical expressions which may be used in the instrument creating the trust. Upon this principle of carrying the intentions of the testator into effect, the Court will endeavour to construe expressions which have no strict technical operation, and this whether the instrument of trust be a deed or will.<sup>1</sup>

But the expressions used must be directory and certain; mere precatory expressions, or words of recommendation, will not be enforced.<sup>2</sup>

rules.

In conclusion of this subject, it may be stated generally for the guidance of trustees, that where an executory trust arises on marriage articles, whose object is to provide for the husband and wife, and their issue, the trustees will be justified in executing the trust by limiting the estate in strict settlement, although it would certainly be the more prudent course for them to obtain a declaration of the Court for their guidance even in these cases.

But where the trust is created by will, and the testator has not himself distinctly and accurately specified the limitations which are to be inserted, trustees could seldom or ever be advised to take upon themselves the responsibility of putting a construction on the direction of the testator by the execution of any particular settlement; this can be done with safety only under the sanction of the Court. And the same remark applies to executory trusts created by any voluntary deed or instrument operating inter vivos.

If a husband have entered into articles on his marriage, binding himself to make a particular provision for his wife and children, it will not be competent for the trustees of their own authority to accept any other provision in lieu of that contemplated by the articles; although they will be justified in instituting a suit for the purpose of bringing the propriety of such a substitution before the Court.<sup>3</sup>

The next point to consider after defining the different kinds of trusts, is, the property which may be made the subject of a trust. As a general rule it may be laid down, that every kind of property, whether moveable or immovable, which may be legally transferred or disposed of, may be the subject of a trust. It is not necessary that the person creating the trust should have the legal estate,—that is to say, should be the absolute owner, for the equitable owner of property, or the person having the beneficial interest, may create a trust of such beneficial interest:<sup>1</sup> and a trust may be created of property which is not in the actual possession of the author of the trust, such as property to which he will become entitled on the death of a third person.<sup>2</sup>

Subject-matter of trust.

In Green v. Folgham,<sup>3</sup> the sole possessor of a recipe for making a medicine assigned it, on the marriage of his daughter, to trustees, upon trust for her and her husband for their lives; and directed that, after their decease, it should be sold for the benefit of their children. The mother destroyed the recipe, and verbally communicated the contents to her eldest son for the benefit of his brothers and sisters. In a suit brought against him by some of the younger children, he was declared to hold the secret upon the trusts of the settlement, and was decreed to account for the profits made by him by the sale of the medicine after his mother's death: and as a sale was impracticable, an issue was directed to ascertain the value of the secret. In Jenks v. Holford,<sup>4</sup> Lord Northington, on an attempt being made to make a child bring some chemical recipes given to her by her father into hotchpot, said, he would not countenance these sorts of recipes, which he thought in most cases savoured of quackery, so as to put a value on them in Chancery; as for aught he knew a recipe to make mince pies or catch rats might be as valuable. If, however, the recipe is valuable, even though it is for a trivial matter, there does not seem to be any good reason why it should not be made the subject of a trust.

Title of honor.

No trust can be declared of a title of honor or of a peerage. These are from their very nature personal possessions, and belong only to the person to whom they are granted or on whom they descend, and cannot be held by one person upon trust for another.<sup>1</sup>

Trusts of immoveable property without the jurisdiction of a Court.

As a general rule, a Court of Justice has no control over immoveable property situate without the local limits of its jurisdiction. But a Court administering equity, as the Courts in this country are bound to do, may, where a person against whom relief is sought is within the jurisdiction, make a decree upon the ground of a contract or any equity subsisting between the parties respecting property situated out of the jurisdiction. The leading case on this point is that of Penn v. Lord Baltimore,<sup>2</sup> where specific performance was decreed of an agreement respecting lands in America.

Act X of 1877, ss. 15, 16.

The Code of Civil Procedure, Act X of 1877, ss. 15, 16, provides, that—“Every suit shall be instituted in the Court of the lowest grade competent to try it.

Subject to the pecuniary or other limitations provided by any law, suits

(f) for the recovery of immoveable property under distraint or attachment, shall be instituted in the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the property is situate :

Explanation.—In this section ‘property’ means property situate in British India.

This section does not apply to the High Courts in the exercise of their ordinary or extraordinary civil jurisdiction.<sup>1</sup> The jurisdiction of the High Courts of Calcutta, Bombay, and Madras, with regard to land without the limits of their ordinary original civil jurisdiction, is provided for by the Charter Act<sup>2</sup> and the Letters Patent granted under it. Section 9 of the Charter Act provides, that each of the High Courts to be established under the Act shall have such jurisdiction as Her Majesty may, by Letters Patent, grant and direct, subject, however, to such directions and limitations as to the exercise of original civil and criminal jurisdiction beyond the limits of the Presidency-Towns as may be prescribed thereby. Section 12 of the Letters Patent provides that the High Court, in the exercise of its ordinary original civil jurisdiction, shall be empowered to receive, try, and determine suits of every description, if, in the case of suits for land or other immoveable property, such land or property shall be situated, or in all other cases, if the cause of action shall have arisen, either wholly, or, in case the leave of the Court shall have been first obtained, in part, within the local limits of the ordinary original jurisdiction of the High Court, or if the defendant, at the time of the commencement of the suit, shall dwell or carry on business, or personally work for gain within such limits. The High Courts have jurisdiction, under this clause, to entertain suits for land, whether the land is situated wholly, or in part only, within the local limits of their ordinary original jurisdiction, leave of the Court having been first obtained in the latter case.<sup>3</sup> But if leave has not been obtained they have no jurisdiction, even though the parties are personally subject to the jurisdiction.<sup>4</sup> Thus the Courts

But every suit having reference to land is not necessarily a suit 'for land,' and the Courts have jurisdiction if the object of the suit is not to recover possession of the land or to deal with the land itself;<sup>7</sup> and it has been held, that a suit to declare that a person resident in Calcutta holds lands in the mofussil subject to certain trusts, is not 'a suit for land.'<sup>8</sup> A suit in personam can be entertained if the defendant resides within the jurisdiction, as for example, a suit to restrain a nuisance.<sup>9</sup>

of jurisdiction.

In order to found the jurisdiction of the Court some one of three circumstances must exist; either the defendant must be within the jurisdiction of the Court, or the subject-matter in dispute must be situated within the jurisdiction of the Court, or the contract must have been entered into within the jurisdiction of the Court.<sup>10</sup> The fact that the defendant may be served with the summons, although he is residing abroad,<sup>11</sup> does not extend the jurisdiction of the Court.<sup>12</sup> In Edwards v. Warden,<sup>13</sup> a suit was instituted against four trustees in India of a fund in India, and one formal defendant in England, to recover money payable in England. The trustees were served out of the jurisdiction, appeared and answered, and entered into evidence; and it was held, that as they had not demurred, or pleaded, or moved to discharge the order for service, the Court of Chancery had jurisdiction to determine the questions between the parties.

The Court, in enforcing equitable rights over, or titles to land situated without the limits of its jurisdiction, operates upon the conscience of the defendant or in personam,<sup>1</sup> not upon the property or in rem, and the decree, therefore, does not directly affect the property;<sup>2</sup> but a trust of such land is supported against a trustee resident within the jurisdiction by a decree operating in personam.<sup>3</sup> It is immaterial whether the lands are situated within the limits of the British empire or are in a foreign country. The Court of Equity will exercise its authority if the defendant is within its jurisdiction.<sup>4</sup> In Angus v. Angus,<sup>5</sup> a bill was brought for possession of lands in Scotland, and for a discovery of the rents and profits, deeds and writings, and fraud in obtaining the deeds was charged. The defendant pleaded the 19th article of the Treaty of Union, and that the lands in question, and the matter prayed by the bill, were out of the jurisdiction of the Court. Lord Hardwicke said:—"This Court acts upon the person as to the fraud and discovery, therefore the plea must be overruled. To have made this a good plea, there ought to have been a further averment, that the defendant was resident in Scotland. This had been a good bill as to fraud and discovery if the lands had been in France, if the persons were resident here; for the jurisdiction of the Court as to frauds is upon the conscience of the party."<sup>6</sup> Of course the Court of one country has no jurisdiction over the Court of another. In Lord Cranstown v. Johnston,<sup>7</sup> the plaintiff sued to set aside a sale made in pursuance of a decree fraudulently obtained in the absence of the debtor by the creditor, who himself purchased the property at the execution-sale. The property was situated

LECTURE in the Island of St. Christopher in the West Indies.
 I. Sir R. P. Arden, M. R., said:—"Upon the whole it comes to this,—that, by a proceeding in the Island, an absentee's estate may be brought to sale, and for whatever interest he has, without any particular upon which they are to bid; the question is, whether the Court will permit the transaction to avail to that extent. It is said, this Court has no jurisdiction, because it is a proceeding in the West Indies. It has been argued very sensibly that it is strange for this Court to say, it is void by the laws of the Island, or for want of notice. I admit I am bound to say that, according to those laws, a creditor may do this. To that law he has had recourse, and wishes to avail himself of it: the question is, whether an English Court will permit such an use to be made of the law of that Island or of any other country. It is sold, not to satisfy the debt, but in order to get the estate, which the law of that country never could intend, for a price much inadequate to the real value, and to pay himself more than the debt for which the suit was commenced, and for which only the sale could be holden. It was not much litigated that the Courts of Equity here have an equal right to interfere with regard to judgments or mortgages upon lands in a foreign country as upon lands here. Bills are often filed upon mortgages in the West Indies. The only distinction is, that this Court cannot act upon the land directly, but acts upon the conscience of the person living here.<sup>1</sup> Those cases clearly show that, with regard to any contract made, or equity, between persons in this country respecting lands in a foreign country, particularly in the British dominions, this Court will hold the same jurisdiction as if they were situated in England. Lord Hardwicke lays down the same doctrine.<sup>2</sup> Therefore, without affecting the jurisdiction of the Courts there, or questioning the regularity of the proceedings as in a Court of Law, or saying that this sale would have been set aside either in law or equity there, I have no difficulty in saying, which is all I have to say, that this creditor has availed himself of the advantage he got by the nature of those laws, to proceed behind the back of the debtor upon a constructive notice which could not operate to the only point to which a constructive notice ought, that there might be actual notice without wilful default: that he has gained an advantage, which neither the law of this nor of any other country would permit. I will lay down the rule as broad as this: this Court will not permit him to avail himself of the law of any other country to do what would be gross injustice."

Acting upon these principles, the Court of Chancery in England has decided questions relating to trusts of lands in Ireland,<sup>1</sup> in the Island of Sark,<sup>2</sup> in South America,<sup>3</sup> and in the West Indies.<sup>4</sup> It has ordered a sale of lands abroad,<sup>5</sup> and has given relief against a fraudulent conveyance.<sup>6</sup> In Paget v. Ede,<sup>7</sup> it was held, that a foreclosure decree being a decree in personam depriving the mortgagor of his personal right to redeem, the Court had jurisdiction to make such a decree in respect of a mortgage between an English mortgagor and mortgagee of land in one of the colonies.

There must be a privity between the plaintiff and defendant, and it must appear that some contract or personal obligation has been incurred moving directly from the one to the other.<sup>8</sup>

The jurisdiction of the Court is founded like all other jurisdiction of the Court, not upon any pretension to the exercise of judicial and administrative rights abroad, but on the circumstance of the person of the party on whom the order is made being within the power of the Court. And, acting upon the foregoing principles, it can restrain the party within the limits of its jurisdiction from doing anything abroad, whether the thing forbidden be a conveyance or other act in pais, or the instituting or prosecution of an action in a foreign Court.<sup>9</sup>

Injunction

And therefore the Court of Chancery in England has restrained persons within the jurisdiction from suing in

If, however, a contract relating to land situated out of the jurisdiction be one which the lex loci rei sitae renders incapable of fulfilment, the Court will not enforce the contract against the proceeds of a sale of such land coming to the possession of parties within the jurisdiction, though they take such proceeds bound by the same equities as affected the party to the contract under whom they claim.<sup>7</sup>

The decree of the Court does not, as we have seen, affect the property directly. It is a personal decree ordering the defendant to do certain things. If he neglects or refuses to obey these orders, he can be imprisoned for an indefinite period for contempt of Court, and his property within the jurisdiction can be seized, and thus "his conscience is operated upon." If, however, he is able to evade the process of the Court for arrest and has no property in the country which can be seized, the decree is of course practically useless.<sup>8</sup>

moveable property
abroad.

Moveable property has no locality, but is subject to the law which governs the person of the owner. Accordingly, moveable property abroad belonging to a British subject may become the object of a trust, which will be recognized in this country.<sup>9</sup>

Object
lawful.

I shall now deal with the object for which the trust is created. We have seen already, ante, p. 19, that trusts may be divided into lawful and unlawful, and that all lawful trusts may be enforced by a Court of Equity, and that, as a rule it may be laid down, that a trust is lawful until the contrary is shown; and that where a trust is unlawful and fraudulent, a Court of Equity will remain neutral, and will neither enforce the trust nor relieve the person creating it, unless the illegal purpose fails to take effect. In considering whether the object of the trust is one permitted by the law, the general rule to be followed is, that the intention of the author of the trust is to be carried into effect, where it is not against good policy;<sup>1</sup> "it is the intention of the party that creates and governs uses and trusts,"<sup>2</sup> "a trust is created by the contract of the party, and he may direct it as he pleaseth."<sup>3</sup> "What the Court looks at in all charities" (and the rule applies equally to all other trusts) said Romilly, M. R.,<sup>4</sup> "is the original intention of the founder, and apart from any question of illegality and various other questions, this Court carries into effect the wishes and intentions of the founder of the charity: and where it sees that those intentions have not been carried into effect, it rectifies the existing administration of the charity for that purpose. If it cannot carry them into effect specifically, it carries them into effect as nearly as may be, and with as close a resemblance to them as it can." This rule has been applied to trusts created by Hindus.<sup>5</sup>

I.General rule for ascertaining whether trust lawful.

In considering whether the object of a trust is legal or not, it will be useful to bear in mind the provisions of s. 23 of the Indian Contract Act:—

Indian Contract
Act, s. 23.

"The consideration or object of an agreement is lawful, unless—it is forbidden by law, or is of such a nature that, if permitted, it would defeat the provisions of any law; or is fraudulent; or involves or implies injury to the person or property of another; or the Court regards it as immoral or opposed to public policy.

In each of these cases, the consideration or object of an agreement is said to be unlawful. Every agreement of which the object or consideration is unlawful is void.

I.

(b.) A promises to pay B 1,000 rupees at the end of six months, if C, who owes that sum to B, fails to pay it. B promises to grant time to C accordingly. Here the promise of each party is the consideration for the promise of the other party, and they are lawful considerations.

(c.) A promises for a certain sum paid to him by B to make good to B the value of his ship, if it is wrecked on a certain voyage. Here, A's promise is the consideration for B's payment, and B's payment is the consideration for A's promise, and these are lawful considerations.

(d.) A promises to maintain B's child, and B promises to pay A 1,000 rupees yearly for the purpose. Here, the promise of each party is the consideration for the promise of the other party. They are lawful considerations.

(e.) A, B, and C enter into an agreement for the division among them of gains acquired, or to be acquired, by them by fraud. The agreement is void, as its object is unlawful.

(f.) A promises to obtain for B an employment in the public service, and B promises to pay 10,000 rupees to A. The agreement is void, as the consideration for it is unlawful.

(g.) A, being agent for a landed proprietor, agrees for money, without the knowledge of his principal, to obtain for B a lease of land belonging to his principal. The agreement between A and B is void, as it implies a fraud by concealment by A on his principal.

(h.) A promises B to drop a prosecution which he has instituted against B for robbery, and B promises to restore the value of the things taken. The agreement is void, as its object is unlawful.

(i.) A's estate is sold for arrears of revenue under the provisions of an Act of the Legislature, by which the defaulter is prohibited from purchasing the estate. B, upon an understanding with A, becomes the purchaser, and agrees to convey the estate to A upon receiving from him the price which B has paid. The agreement is void, as it renders the transaction in effect a purchase by the defaulter, and would so defeat the object of the law.

(j.) A, who is B's mukhtar, promises to exercise his influence, as such, with B in favour of C, and C promises to pay 1,000 rupees to A. The agreement is void, because it is immoral.

(k.) A agrees to let her daughter to hire to B for concubinage. The agreement is void, because it is immoral, though the letting may not be punishable under the Indian Penal Code."

It appears, therefore, that if the object of the trust is contrary to the policy of the law, or if it is founded upon an illegal or immoral contract, it will be void.<sup>1</sup> For example, if the trust is based upon a transaction forbidden by the law,<sup>2</sup> or is intended as a fraud upon an act of the Legislature,<sup>3</sup> such for instance, as a fictitious and fraudulent conveyance for the purpose of obtaining a property qualification to enable the grantee to vote at elections,<sup>4</sup> it will be void. In May v. May,<sup>5</sup> a conveyance of property by a father to his son, to give him a qualification to vote, was held not invalid, but a bounty. In Groves v. Groves,<sup>6</sup> property was purchased by one person and conveyed to another in order to give the latter a vote at Parliamentary elections, and the Court refused to assist the purchaser, and a suit by him, seeking to make the grantee a trustee, was dismissed.<sup>7</sup> So an assignment of the half pay of an officer in the army is bad. For half pay is intended by the State to provide decent maintenance for experienced officers, both as a reward for their past services, and to enable them to preserve such a situation that they may always be ready to return into actual service. It materially differs, therefore, from the general case of expectancies, which may be assigned; for in the latter case, no public interest is thwarted. Thus a pension is equally uncertain as half pay; but as no future benefit is meant to arise to the State from granting it, a material difference arises between them.<sup>8</sup> So also an attempt by a Hindu to create any estate,—such for instance, as an estate tail,—which is unknown and repugnant to the Hindu law, is void.<sup>9</sup>

Among trusts which, according to English law, are void as being contrary to public policy, may be mentioned those to provide for future illegitimate children. Such trusts are held to be void, because they tend to encourage immorality. The law on this point, so far as regards per-

 I. Occleston v. Fullalove.<sup>1</sup>

There a testator, who had gone through the ceremony of marriage with Margaret Lewis, his deceased wife's sister, who had two daughters, Catherine and Edith, by him, and who was enceinte with a third at the date of the will, gave a moiety of his property to trustees in trust for Margaret Lewis for life, and after death, for his reputed children Catherine and Edith, and all other children which he might have or be reputed to have by Margaret Lewis, then born or thereafter to be born. The third child, Margaret, was born before the testator's death, and was acknowledged by him as his child. Wickens, V. C., considering that the case was governed by the decision in Pratt v. Mathew,<sup>2</sup> held that Margaret was not entitled to share in the testator's property. On appeal, Lord Selborne, L. C., differing from James and Mellish, L. JJ., agreed with the decision of Wickens, V. C., thinking that he was bound by the authorities. The Lord Justices, however, held, that there was nothing in the authorities to prevent a child coming into existence between the date of execution of the will and the death of the testator from taking under the will, and that Margaret was entitled to share.

The principle of the decision is, that a gift by a testator or testatrix to one of his or her children by a particular person, is perfectly good, if the child has acquired the reputation of being such a child as described in the will before the death of the testator or testatrix.<sup>3</sup>

illegitimate children in being, or en ventre
sa mère,

But a trust for an illegitimate child in being, or en ventre sa mère, at the time of the creation of the trust, is good if the child is clearly designated as the object of the gift.<sup>4</sup> "In order," said Stuart, V. C.,<sup>5</sup> "that any legatee—whether the legacy be to a class or to an individual—may take, it is necessary that the person or the class should be clearly described. Where a gift is made to a child or to children as a class, the natural and proper meaning of the word 'child' or 'children' is legitimate child or legitimate children; but if the object of the gift is clearly described and clearly ascertainable from the words of the will, it matters nothing whether the object of the gift be legitimate or illegitimate, because an illegitimate child, or a number of illegitimate children as a class, if properly described, may be a legatee or legatees just as well as legitimate children."<sup>1</sup> It is merely a question of designation.<sup>2</sup> The principle which may fairly be extracted from the cases upon the subject is this, the term 'children' in a will prima facie means legitimate children; and if there is nothing more in the will, the circumstance that the person whose children are referred to has illegitimate children will not entitle those illegitimate children to take. But there are two classes of cases in which that prima facie interpretation is departed from. One class of cases is, where it is impossible from the circumstances of the parties that any legitimate children could take under the bequest. The other class of cases is, where there is, upon the face of the will itself, and upon a just and proper construction and interpretation of the words used in it, an expression of the intention of the testator to use the term 'children' not merely according to its prima facie meaning of legitimate children, but according to a meaning which would apply to, and would include, illegitimate children.<sup>3</sup> In order to interpret the words of the will, it is always not only allowable, but it is the duty of the Court, to obtain the knowledge which the testator had of the state of his family, so as to ascertain whether the testator intended illegitimate children to take under general expressions used in the will.<sup>4</sup>

A trust for a purpose which is forbidden by law is unlawful. As an example may be mentioned section 13 of Beng. Regulation of 1793, which forbids Collectors from conferring on their public officers any private trust relating to their personal concerns.<sup>5</sup>

Another class of trusts, which are void as being against public policy, are those in which an attempt is made to postpone the enjoyment of property for an indefinite period, or to prevent the alienation of property for ever. Such trusts are considered to be injurious to the good of

LECTURE I. the State, and will not be enforced.<sup>1</sup> "A perpetuity," said Lord Guildford,<sup>2</sup> "is a thing odious in law, and destructive to the commonwealth: it would put a stop to commerce, and prevent the circulation of the riches of the kingdom; and therefore is not to be countenanced in equity."<sup>3</sup>

In England the rule is, that no remainder can be given to the unborn child of a living person for his life, followed by a remainder to any of the issue of such unborn person, the latter of such remainders being absolutely void.<sup>4</sup> The effect of this rule is to forbid the tying up of lands for a longer period than can elapse until the unborn child of some living person shall come of age; that is, for the life of a party now in being, and for twenty-one years after, with a further period of a few months during gestation, supposing the child should be of posthumous birth. In analogy, therefore, to the restriction thus imposed on the creation of contingent remainders, the law has fixed the following limits to the creation of executory interests: it will allow any executory estate to commence within the period of any fixed number of now-existing lives, and an additional term of twenty-one years; allowing further for the period of gestation, should gestation actually exist. This additional term of twenty-one years may be independent or not of the minority of any person to be entitled;<sup>5</sup> and if no lives are fixed on, then the term of twenty-one years only is allowed.<sup>6</sup> By the Statute 39 and 40 Geo. III, c. 98, the accumulation of income is forbidden for any longer term than the life of the grantor or settlor, or twenty-one years from the death of any such grantor, settlor, deviser, or testator, or during the minority of any person living, or en ventre sa mère, at the death of the grantor, deviser or testator, or during the minority only of any person who, under the settlement or will, would for the time being, if of full age, be entitled to the income so directed to be accumulated. The law was the same as regards trusts created by will in India up to the passing of the Indian Succession Act, X of 1865. By section 101 of that Act it is provided as follows :—

LECTURE

“No bequest is valid whereby the vesting of the thing bequeathed may be delayed beyond the lifetime of one or more persons living at the testator's decease, and the minority of some person who shall be in existence at the expiration of that period, and to whom, if he attains full age, the thing bequeathed is to belong.

Illustrations.

(a.) A fund is bequeathed to A for his life, and after his death to B for his life, and after B's death, to such of the sons of B as shall first attain the age of 25. A and B survive the testator. Here the son of B, who shall first attain the age of 25, may be a son born after the death of the testator; such son may not attain 25 until more than 18 years have elapsed from the death of the longer liver of A and B; and the vesting of the fund may thus be delayed beyond the lifetime of A and B, and the minority of the sons of B. The bequest after B's death is void.

(b.) A fund is bequeathed to A for his life, and after his death to B for his life, and after B's death to such of B's sons as shall first attain the age of 25. B dies in the lifetime of the testator, leaving one or more sons. In this case the sons of B are persons living at the time of the testator's decease, and the time when either of them will attain 25 necessarily falls within his own lifetime. The bequest is valid.

(c.) A fund is bequeathed to A for his life, and after his death to B for his life, with a direction that, after B's death, it shall be divided amongst such of B's children as shall attain the age of 18; but that if no child of B shall attain that age, the fund shall go to C. Here the time for the division of the fund must arrive at the latest at the expiration of 18 years from the death of B, a person living at the testator's decease. All the bequests are valid.

(d.) A fund is bequeathed to trustees for the benefit of the testator's daughters, with a direction that if any of them marry under age, her share of the fund shall be settled so as to devolve after her death upon such of her children as shall attain the age of 18. Any daughter of the testator to whom the direction applies must be in existence at his decease, and any portion of the fund which may eventually be settled as directed, must vest not later than 18 years from the death of the daughter whose share it was. All these provisions are valid.”

The rule in this section, it will be seen, does away altogether with the absolute term of twenty-one years, and,

LECTURE owing to the definition of minority, reduces to eighteen
I. years (or to eighteen and the period of gestation when the — person in being is unborn) the twenty-one years which went to make up the period according to the English law.<sup>1</sup>
 This section of the Succession Act<sup>2</sup> applies to Hindus, Jains, Sikhs, and Buddhists.

Perpetui-ties among Hindus.

According to Hindu law, a perpetuity, save in the case of religious and charitable endowments, is illegal. Thus trusts to accumulate property for ninety-nine years,<sup>3</sup> to accumulate until the fund reached three lakhs,<sup>4</sup> and to postpone enjoyment until the testator's children reached the age of twenty-one,<sup>5</sup> have been held to be void; and the rule cannot be avoided by means of a colourable dedication to an idol.<sup>6</sup> The law of wills among Hindus is analogous to the law of gifts; a person capable of taking under a will must be such a person as could take a gift inter vivos, and therefore must either in fact or in contemplation of law be in existence at the death of the testator, and therefore a gift to an unborn child, except in the case of an infant in the womb, or an adopted son, is void.<sup>7</sup> And what cannot be done by a gift, cannot be done by the intervention of a trust.<sup>8</sup> So a trust for the maintenance of a family for ever is void.<sup>9</sup> But a father may delay the rights of his issue by interposing a valid estate previous to theirs.<sup>10</sup>

Restraint
on alienation.

It is against the policy of the law to permit a trust to be created with a condition restraining alienation of the interests of the cestui que trust generally. For instance, a devise to trustees upon trust for daughters for their "separate and inalienable use" is too remote and void.<sup>11</sup> And such a restriction is void by both Hindu and Mahomedan law. Thus, when a father, during his son's minority, gave certain property to him, and on delivery of possession got from him a document stipulating that he would not alienate the property, and that, on his death, the property should return to the father,—it was held, that the condition against alienation was absolutely void.<sup>1</sup> So, trusts prohibiting or restricting the right of partition are void.<sup>2</sup> Alienation to a particular person may be restrained, but alienation generally, being repugnant to the estate, cannot.<sup>3</sup> So a trust may be created in favour of a man, to determine and go over on his bankruptcy,<sup>4</sup> but a trust to continue after bankruptcy would be void.<sup>5</sup> For instance, a proviso in a will that the cestui que trust shall not have power to sell, mortgage or anticipate the income of the trust fund, will not prevent the assignee from taking the income on the bankruptcy of the cestui que trust.<sup>6</sup> Such a condition is inconsistent with, and repugnant to, the gift. It is one of the incidents of property that it shall vest in the assignees of a bankrupt for the benefit of his creditors, and this incident cannot be taken away by the author of the trust.<sup>7</sup> So the right of alienation is one of the incidents of the absolute ownership of property; and therefore, if an absolute gift without the intervention of trustees is followed by a condition restricting the right of alienation, the condition is wholly void.<sup>8</sup>

LECTURE trust. The life-interest enures for the benefit of the creditors, and any attempt to continue the insolvent in the enjoyment of the property is in fraud of the law.<sup>1</sup>

I.

But where a testatrix bequeathed a share of her residue in trust for her nephew for life, and by a codicil, after reciting that her nephew had become bankrupt and insane, she directed the trustees to apply during his life the whole or such part of the interest of the fund, at such times, in such proportions, and in such manner, for the maintenance and support of her nephew, and for no other purpose whatsoever, as they, in their discretion, should think most expedient,—it was held, that the nephew's assignees were not entitled to any portion of the provision made for him. The cases of Green v. Spicer,<sup>2</sup> Snowdon v. Dales,<sup>3</sup> and Piercy v. Roberts<sup>4</sup> were distinguished, on the ground, that in those cases the gift took effect before the donee became bankrupt, and the income of the fund was either to be paid to the donee or to be applied for his benefit generally. Whereas in the case now under consideration, the trustees were only to apply such sums as they thought fit for maintenance and support, there was a trust created for the mere special purpose of supporting and maintaining the nephew, and under such a trust the assignees could take no interest.<sup>5</sup>

If a trust is created for the benefit of two or more persons, and one becomes bankrupt or insolvent, the assignee will be entitled only to his proportionate part. In Page v. Way,<sup>6</sup> freehold and personal property belonging to the husband was conveyed to trustees upon trust to receive the rents and profits, “and pay and apply the same when received, unto or for the maintenance and support of the husband, his wife, and children, or otherwise if the trustees should think proper, to permit the same to be received by the husband during his life, without power to charge or anticipate.” The husband became bankrupt, and in a suit by the assignees claiming the whole income of the trust-property,—it was held, that a trust had been created for the maintenance and support of the wife and children out of the property during the husband's life. Lord Langdale, M. R., said:—“I am of opinion that, so long as the wife and children were maintained by the husband, the trustees had a discretion to give him the whole income, but that it was their duty to see that the wife and children were maintained. The assignees take everything subject to what is proper to be allowed for the maintenance of the wife and children." Again, where property was vested in trustees upon trust to pay the rents and profits to a certain person for life, provided that, if he became bankrupt, the trustees should apply the rents and profits in or towards the maintenance, clothing, lodging, and support of the cestui que trust, and his then or any future wife and his children, or any of them, as the trustees should, in their discretion, think fit,—it was held, on the bankruptcy of the cestui que trust, that his life-estate was forfeited at the time of his discharge,—that, from the date of the vesting order to the time of the discharge, the rents and profits of the estate belonged to the assignee; that, upon the discharge taking place, the discretionary powers given to the trustees by the settlement might be exercised by them in favour of the insolvent, his wife, and children collectively, or in favour of any of those persons to the exclusion of the others,—and that to whatever extent the power might be exercised in favour of the insolvent, the benefit which he would take by the appointment would vest in the assignee.<sup>1</sup>

Again, where a testator bequeathed his residuary estate to trustees, and, after making a provision out of it, for the benefit of his son and for his life, and, after the son's death, for his wife and children, directed that, if his son should assign or charge the interest to which he was entitled for life, or attempt or agree to do any act whereby the same, or any part thereof, might, if the absolute property thereof were vested in him, be forfeited to, or become vested in, any person or persons, then the trustees should pay and apply the said interest for the maintenance and support of his son and of any wife and child or children he might have, as the trustees in their discretion should think fit,—it was held, on the bankruptcy of the son, that the trust for the benefit of the son, his wife, and children was valid, and that the assignees were not entitled to any part of the provision. Shadwell, V. C., said:—"There is nothing in point of law to invalidate such a gift that I am aware

LECTURE I. of. It does not follow that anything was of necessity to be paid; but the property was to be applied; and there might have been a maintenance of the son, and of the wife, and of the children, without their receiving any money at all. For instance, the trustees might take a house for their lodging, and they might give directions to tradesmen to supply the son and the wife and the children with all that was necessary for maintenance: and, therefore, my opinion is, that I am not at liberty to take this as a mere gift for the benefit of the son simply; but it is a gift for his benefit in the shape of maintenance and support of himself jointly with his wife and children: and if that is the true construction of the gift in question, the result is, that the assignees are not entitled to anything.”<sup>1</sup> In Kearsley v. Woodcock,<sup>2</sup> Wigram, V. C., in a similar state of circumstances said, that it was not of necessity that any part of the trust-funds, under such a gift, must be applicable for the separate benefit of the bankrupt; the whole property might not be more than sufficient for the support and maintenance of the wife and children; and the benefit which the bankrupt derived from the property might not be capable of severance; it might be of such a kind that no definite portion of the principal or income could, in respect thereof, be diverted from its application for the benefit of the other members of the family, e.g., the joint occupation of a house, which was necessary for the habitation of the wife and children, the expense of which was not increased by the circumstance, that it was also the abode of the bankrupt.<sup>3</sup>

A trust for the benefit of a person until his bankruptcy or insolvency, then in the discretion of the trustees for the subsistence of himself and family, was held in Rippon v. Norton,<sup>4</sup> on the insolvency taking place, to entitle his three children to three-fourths of the fund, and the assignees to the remaining fourth. This case goes further than Page v. Way<sup>5</sup> and Kearsley v. Woodcock.<sup>6</sup> In Wallace v. Anderson,<sup>7</sup> the trustees were, after the bankruptcy of the husband and the death of the wife, to pay the income in such manner, for the maintenance and support, or otherwise for the benefit of the husband and the issue, as they might think proper. It was held, that the discretionary power of the trustees, as to the application of the income, was not taken away by the bankruptcy, so as to entitle the objects to take equally. An inquiry was directed as to what had been properly applied for the maintenance of the issue, and the assignees were declared to be entitled to the surplus. Romilly, M. R., said:—"I am not satisfied that the point which has arisen in the present case was argued in Rippon v. Norton.<sup>1</sup> To say that the discretion of the trustees as to the application of the income was gone by the bankruptcy, is to say that it never arose, and the object of the trust would thereby be defeated. I am not sure that the Court would not, in a case like the present, follow the rule laid down in Kearsley v. Woodcock."<sup>2</sup>

Although, as appears from the above authorities, a trust restraining alienation of the interests of the cestui que trust generally, or attempting to continue the interest of the cestui que trust after his bankruptcy, is void, yet there is no objection to a trust to determine, in case the cestui que trust shall become bankrupt or insolvent,<sup>3</sup> or shall attempt to assign or incumber his interest.<sup>4</sup> The interest of the cestui que trust in such a case determines as soon as the act forbidden is done, even though the interest is still in expectancy. Thus, where property was settled in the year 1823 on a wife for life, with remainder to the husband, "until he should make any composition with his creditors for the payment of his debts, although a commission of bankruptcy should not issue against him;" and in 1842, the husband's principal creditors agreed to take a composition on their debts secured by bills, and the wife did not die until 1852,—it was held, that the composition, though it was not made with the whole of the husband's creditors, and was made during the wife's life, and did not affect the trust-property, nevertheless operated as a forfeiture of the husband's interest.<sup>5</sup> So the interest will determine upon the execution of a composition deed by the cestui que

 — trust, even though he does not become bankrupt or insolvent, or execute any assignment of the property for the benefit of his creditors.<sup>1</sup> If a sum of money is left for the purpose of purchasing an annuity for a particular person, with a condition that it shall determine if the annuitant shall at any time sell, assign, incumber, or in anywise dispose of or anticipate the same, the annuitant will not be entitled to the value of the annuity.<sup>2</sup> The rules to be followed in determining questions of this class were thus laid down by Turner, V. C., in Rochford v. Hackman.<sup>3</sup> First, that property cannot be given for life any more than absolutely, without the power of alienation being incident to the gift; and that any mere attempt to restrict the power of alienation, whether applied to an absolute interest or to a life-estate, is void, as being inconsistent with the interest given; and secondly, that although a life-interest may be expressed to be given, it may be well determined by an apt limitation over. And he also expressed an opinion that the life-interest might be well determined by a proviso for cesser, although it be not accompanied by any limitation over, for no greater effect could, he thought, be given to a limitation over than to an express declaration that the life-interest should cease. This latter point was expressly decided by Wood, V. C., in Joel v. Mills.<sup>4</sup>

 cease on happening of particular event.

A clause providing for the determination of the interest of the cestui que trust upon the happening of a particular event within a specified time, whether the time is certain or uncertain, is good, e.g., a clause providing against disposition during the life of a third person,<sup>5</sup> or before attaining a certain age.<sup>6</sup>

When property is settled on A for life, and after her death on B for life, until he shall become insolvent, and then over, the gift over takes effect on B's insolvency in A's lifetime.<sup>7</sup>

 forfeiture construed strictly.

Clauses of forfeiture will be construed strictly, and therefore the very act provided against must have been done. Thus a proviso giving property over, if the cestui que trust should alienate, or attempt to alienate, it does not come into effect on his bankruptcy, which is an alienation by operation of law, and not a voluntary act.<sup>1</sup> It would, however, come into effect if he presented a petition in insolvency, see infra, note 10; and the penalty of forfeiture on bankruptcy is not incurred by a composition with creditors.<sup>2</sup> The words of the clause, however, may be so wide as to show that the author intended that it should come into effect upon the cestui que trust doing any act which would affect the life-estate.<sup>3</sup>

So the giving a warrant of attorney will not work a forfeiture, unless done as a contrivance to evade the prohibition against alienation;<sup>4</sup> nor, even in England, will the marriage of a feme sole cause a forfeiture of an annuity which is to determine upon the annuitant's doing any act by which the property "should be vested or become liable to be vested in any other person."<sup>5</sup> So a charge on arrears of an annuity is good,<sup>6</sup> or a charge on the income as it accrues.<sup>7</sup>

A general assignment of property will not include property liable to forfeiture.<sup>8</sup>

Where there is a clause of forfeiture on bankruptcy, and the cestui que trust becomes bankrupt, and the bankruptcy is annulled before any beneficial interest in the property has come to the assignee, the clause will not take effect.<sup>9</sup>

The presentation of a petition in insolvency by the insolvent himself is a voluntary act, and as the property of the insolvent vests in the Official Assignee, the presentation of a petition would be an alienation of his property, and would work a forfeiture.<sup>10</sup>

able, cannot create a trust of it for his own benefit to go over in case of his bankruptcy or insolvency.<sup>1</sup>

Any trust, as well as any contract for immoral purposes, is of course void.<sup>2</sup>

If the purpose for which the trust is created fails, because it is unlawful or fraudulent, a Court of Equity will not act. It cannot enforce the trust in favour of the cestui que trust, for that would be to declare the trust to be good; and it will not restore the property to the author of the trust, because a man cannot be allowed as plaintiff to plead his own wrong. A right of action cannot arise out of fraud. In such a case, therefore, if the property has got into the hands of the trustee, the author of the trust is without remedy, for where there is an equal wrong, the title of the holder shall prevail.<sup>3</sup> But though the author of an unlawful or fraudulent trust cannot recover the property from the trustees, persons claiming through him may sue for the purpose. "There is a great difference," said Lord Eldon, "between the case of an heir coming to be relieved against the act of his ancestor in fraud of the law, and of a man coming upon his own act under such circumstances."<sup>4</sup> A defendant cannot set up the fraud of his ancestor.<sup>5</sup>

failing.

There is an exception to the general rule that where a trust has been created for an unlawful or fraudulent purpose, the Court will not interfere; for it will do so where the illegal purpose fails to take effect, and nothing is done under it. The mere intention to effect an illegal object will not deprive the author of the trust of his right to recover the property.<sup>6</sup>

If the defendant wishes to rely on the illegality of the transaction as a defence, he must plead it in distinct terms.<sup>1</sup>

In order to a complete trust, there must be a cestui que trust, a person to be benefited by the trust, otherwise the trust fails, and the property appropriated for the purpose results to the author of the trust or his representatives. In England, it has been repeatedly held, that a trust, merely for the purpose of keeping up tombs or buildings, which are of no public benefit, but only an individual advantage, is not a charitable use, but a perpetuity, and is void.<sup>2</sup>

The object of a trust must, as we have seen, ante, p. 33, be lawful. Where the object is clearly unlawful, no difficulty arises, for the Court will not enforce an illegal trust. But the object may be in part lawful and in part unlawful, and the question then arises as to whether the whole trust fails, or whether the lawful part remains good. In England the rule is, that if property be given to trustees, to apply part thereof for an unlawful purpose, and to hold or apply the residue for a lawful purpose, then, unless the amount intended to be applied for the unlawful purpose can be ascertained, the whole gift will fail; but the fact that the amount to be applied for the unlawful purpose has not been expressly stated in the gift, will not make the whole gift void; and the Court will, if it be practicable, ascertain the amount which would have satisfied the unlawful purpose, and hold the gift good as to the residue.<sup>3</sup> The Contract Act<sup>4</sup> provides, that where persons reciprocally promise, firstly, to do certain things which are legal, and secondly, under certain specified circumstances, to do certain other things which are illegal, the first set of promises is a contract, but the second is a void agreement; and that, in the case of an alternative promise, one branch of which is legal, and the other illegal, the legal branch alone can be enforced.

If a trust is created of immoveable property in a foreign country, the better opinion seems to be that the James* — Execution of deed by creditors — Deed not communicated to creditors — Trust by will for payment of debts.

I now propose to treat of the manner in which a trust may be declared. Declaration of trust.

As regards moveable property beyond the limits of the ordinary original civil jurisdiction of the High Courts, whether belonging to European British subjects, Hindus or Mahomedans, trusts may be declared by parol, or by an instrument in writing, which may be either testamentary or non-testamentary. The Hindu law, in no transaction, absolutely requires a writing;<sup>1</sup> nor, so far as I am aware, does LECTURE II. the Mahomedan law. With regard to European British subjects resident without the limits of the jurisdiction of the High Courts, it is doubtful whether they would be governed by the Statute of Frauds or not.<sup>1</sup> If not, they would be governed by the English Common Law as it stood before the Statute, and at Common Law a trust, whether of real or personal property, was averable,—that is, might be declared by parol.<sup>2</sup> So much of the Statute of Frauds as relates to the creation of trusts is still in force within the Presidency-Towns, and trusts of lands created by European British subjects must conform to the provisions of the Statute. The seventh section provides that all declarations or creations of trusts or confidences of any lands, tenements, or hereditaments shall be manifested and proved by some writing to be signed by the party who is by law enabled to declare such trust, or by his last will in writing, or else they shall be utterly void and of none effect. Trusts of moveable property are not within the Statute, and may therefore be declared by parol.<sup>3</sup>

to create trust must be shown.

Valuable
consideration.

It is only necessary that the person creating the trust shall clearly show his intention to create the trust,<sup>4</sup> and shall point out the subject-matter of the trust and the persons who are to benefit by it. Technical words are not necessary, but if they are used, their technical meaning must be given to them.<sup>5</sup> Where there is valuable consideration, and a trust is intended to be created, formalities are of minor importance, since, if the transaction cannot take effect by way of trust executed, it may be enforced by a Court of Equity as a contract.<sup>6</sup> Where immovable property was given into the possession of the defendant under an order of a revenue officer, which directed the defendant to sell the crops, and after payment of the Government dues, to account for the profits to the plaintiff on his claiming it, it was held that the defendant was not a depositary, but a trustee.<sup>7</sup>

It is not necessary there should be any consideration to support a trust.<sup>1</sup> If a trust has been perfectly created, it is not necessary that there should have been a transmutation of possession, and it cannot afterwards be defeated by any act of the settlor.<sup>2</sup> As a general rule, it may be laid down that, in order to make a voluntary declaration of trust binding upon the author of the trust, he must have completely parted with all his interest in the property to the trustee, or have declared himself to be a trustee of the property for the benefit of the cestui que trustent.<sup>3</sup> It is not necessary, in order that the trust may be binding, that it should be communicated to, or accepted by, the volunteer.<sup>4</sup>

II.

Consideration not necessary.

Transmutation of possession.

The leading case with reference to settlements and trusts in favour of a volunteer,—that is to say, a person who has not given any consideration, is Ellison v. Ellison.<sup>5</sup> “I take the distinction to be,” said Lord Eldon, “that, if you want the assistance of the Court to constitute you cestui que trust, and the instrument is voluntary, you shall not have that assistance for the purpose of constituting you cestui que trust; as upon a covenant to transfer stock, &c., if it rests in covenant and is purely voluntary, this Court will not execute that voluntary covenant. But if the party has completely transferred stock, &c., though it is voluntary, yet the legal conveyance being effectually made, the equitable interest will be enforced by this Court. . . . If the actual transfer is made, that constitutes the relation between trustee and cestui que trust, though voluntary, and without good or meritorious consideration.”

Voluntary settlements

But although a voluntary settlement or grant may be valid as against creditors and purchasers, it may be incomplete; and then will not be enforced against the settlor.”<sup>6</sup>

LECTURE II. A volunteer has no equity to enforce a mere voluntary promise to assign against the assets of the person who made the promise.<sup>1</sup> A voluntary covenant to transfer stock is a mere imperfect gift which equity will not assist.<sup>2</sup> So is a voluntary covenant to transfer shares.<sup>3</sup> A voluntary settlement is incomplete unless the interest of the donor has been completely parted with, and therefore a voluntary agreement to declare a trust will not be enforced.<sup>4</sup> Even if the settlor has executed a deed purporting to pass his interest, and he intends to carry out the transaction, yet if, for any reason, he has not in fact parted with his interest, the trust cannot be executed.<sup>5</sup> But when a covenant or other instrument creates such a complete obligation on the part of the covenantor, that damages would be recoverable in case of breach, effect will be given to it, as when a person covenants to pay a sum of money or an annuity.<sup>6</sup> So a settlement or gift by the bond of the settlor may be enforced against the obligor's estate;<sup>7</sup> and a person claiming under such a bond is within the Statute 13 Eliz., c. 5, and is entitled to the protection of the Statute like any other creditor.

In Hervey v. Audland,<sup>8</sup> it was held that a covenantee under a voluntary covenant for further assurance could not prove under an administration suit against the covenantor's estate. But, in Cox v. Barnard,<sup>9</sup> this was allowed, upon the ground that though the Court might not specifically execute the covenant as damages were wanted, it could give damages.<sup>10</sup> The delivery of property or securities passing by delivery is valid.<sup>11</sup>

If, however, the grantor adopts some other mode of transfer than that which is necessary to effect a complete assignment of the property, the transferee will not be entitled unless the instrument can be construed as a declaration of trust. For instance, an attempt to transfer shares or property of that description by some other mode than that which is effectual by the rules of the company or society in which the shares are held is not an effectual transfer: as, for instance, where the owner of shares endorsed on the certificates the words, "I hereby assign, &c.," to others, but no transfer was executed, he was held to have a locus pœnitentiæ so long as the gift was incomplete. So a power-of-attorney given to the trustee to transfer will not be sufficient unless he acts upon it.<sup>1</sup> Again, where the transfer is in other respects imperfect and does not operate on the whole property,<sup>2</sup> and if the assignment or other mode of gift or settlement is incomplete and the gift is intended to take effect by it, the Court will not construe it as a declaration of trust, and upon this ground give effect to it, for then every imperfect instrument would be made effectual by being converted into a perfect trust.<sup>3</sup> Where a cheque was given to one in trust for another, with a verbal direction that the amount was to be in trust instead of a legacy given by will to the proposed cestui qui trust, the declaration was held to be inoperative;<sup>4</sup> and where a cheque was given by the owner to his young child with a declaration before witnesses, but was afterwards retained by the owner till his death,<sup>5</sup> no trust was created. But an instrument executed as a present and complete assignment (not being a mere covenant to assign at a future time) is equivalent to a declaration of trust; therefore, such an instrument will pass promissory notes of the grantor, though neither specifically mentioned in the deed, nor indorsed by him.<sup>6</sup> This case, and the observations in Grant v. Grant,<sup>7</sup> would seem, to a

If nothing more to be done by settlor, trust is complete.

if nothing more remains to be done or can be done by the grantor or donor,—if, as far as he is concerned, the conveyance or assignment is complete, and he has done all that is necessary to be done, having regard to the nature of the property,—the assignment or other assurance will be valid in equity.<sup>2</sup> Thus, an assignment of a policy of assurance by deed is valid, although the grantor may retain the deed and give no notice of the assignment to the office.<sup>3</sup> And where there was a voluntary assignment of a chose-in-action, followed by a power-of-attorney to receive it, this would seem to be sufficient to give a right in equity to have the deed enforced even after the death of the assignor.<sup>4</sup>

After a valid declaration of trust, the fact that the trust-fund is found at the settlor's death mixed up with his own moneys, does not affect the validity of the trust.<sup>5</sup>

Assignment by cestui que trust.

Notice.

When property is vested in a trustee, the cestui que trust may make a valid assignment of his beneficial interest, and the assignee will have the right to enforce it by proceeding against the trustee.<sup>6</sup> Notice to the trustee is not necessary to perfect the trust, even as against a subsequent volunteer who does give notice. As against the settlor an equitable interest is perfectly transferred without notice.<sup>7</sup> But a voluntary assignment of a mere expectancy in an equitable interest, not communicated to the trustees, does not amount to the creation of a trust.<sup>8</sup> If notice is not given, the trustee will be justified in paying over the fund to the grantor.<sup>9</sup> And if the settlor conveys his equitable interest to trustees, and directs them to hold it upon trust for another, that will be as effectual as if he had declared himself a trustee.<sup>1</sup> So it will be sufficient if he directs his trustees to stand possessed of the property upon the new trusts,<sup>2</sup> or even if he assigns it to the new cestui que trust without the intervention of a trustee.<sup>3</sup>

II.

A voluntary settlement may be effected by a declaration of trust, by which the owner of property declares either himself, or another person in whom the property is vested, a trustee for the voluntary grantee.<sup>4</sup> A declaration of trust is not confined to any express form of words, but may be indicated by the character of the instrument.<sup>5</sup> If the settlor shows no intention of keeping a control over the settled property otherwise than as a trustee for the objects of his bounty, the trust will be effectual.<sup>6</sup> The tendency of modern decisions is to construe a voluntary settlement or gift inoperative, as a complete transfer of the property as a declaration of trust, if this can be done consistently with the previous authorities.<sup>7</sup>

amounts to a valid
of trust.

A direction by the beneficial owner of property to his trustees to hold it for others than himself acted upon by the trustees is valid as a declaration of trust. Thus, where the cestui qui trust of money in the hands of a trustee, by deed without consideration, directed part of the dividends to be paid by him for the maintenance of an infant, or stranger, and covenanted to indemnify him, and agreed to allow the same out of the dividends, and the trustee accepted the new trust and acted upon the deed, it was held that there was a valid executed trust created which could not be revoked.<sup>8</sup>

A receipt in the form "received of A, for the use of B, £100, to be paid to B at A.'s death" is a sufficient declaration

LECTURE II. of trust.<sup>1</sup> In Grant v. Grant,<sup>2</sup> Lord Romilly said, that if A, having a sum of consols, were to say to B, "I give you that sum," or to C "I have given that sum to B," that would be sufficient to make A trustee for B. See also Milroy v. Lord.<sup>3</sup> In Morgan v. Malleon,<sup>4</sup> the donor made and signed a memorandum, "I hereby give and make over to A a bond," specifying it, but retaining it in his own possession; and it was held, that there had been a sufficient declaration of trust in favour of A.<sup>5</sup>

A banker, who debits himself in his books with money in favour of another, thereby declares himself a trustee of it.<sup>6</sup> So, where a person deposits securities for money in the hands of a trustee, stating that he intends them as a provision for the voluntary grantee.<sup>7</sup>

Ineffectual assignment. An assignment, or attempted assignment, by the grantor, of property, in a way which is ineffectual to pass the interest, will be good if the assignment is upon trust for the grantee in such terms that the Court can construe it as a declaration of trust by the grantor.<sup>8</sup>

Chose-in-action. An assignment of a chose-in-action, with a power-of-attorney to enforce payment, coupled with a declaration that the fund shall be held upon certain trusts for the benefit of the assignor, and ultimately of the assignee, is valid.<sup>9</sup> And a declaration of trust will be valid though the settlor may retain a control over the fund<sup>10</sup> or keep the instrument declaring the trust in his possession.<sup>11</sup> A mere expression of intention to be carried into effect by some future act does not amount to a declaration of trust.<sup>12</sup>

Subsequent disclaimer by trustee. If a settlor conveys his property to a trustee in such a manner as to completely divest himself of it, and the trustee subsequently disclaims, the accident of the disclaimer has been held not to vitiate the deed, but the Court will appoint a new trustee.<sup>1</sup>

II.

If the person in whose favour a voluntary gift is made incurs expense in respect of the property, the subject of the gift, with the sanction of the donor, he may call for a conveyance of it.<sup>2</sup>

A complete voluntary settlement cannot be revoked by a subsequent voluntary settlement, even if the property becomes re-vested in the settlor, for he will then take it not absolutely, but as a trustee.<sup>3</sup>

cannot revoke
rily.

According to Shiah law, a man who devotes property to charitable or other uses, and transfers the proprietary right therein to a trustee, cannot, at his pleasure, take it back from the trustee, whom he has constituted the owner, and give it to another person, unless, on the creation of the trust, he has reserved to himself the right to do so in express terms.<sup>4</sup>

But if a person, without the privity of any one, and without receiving consideration, makes a disposition as between himself and trustees for purposes connected with himself, he is merely directing the mode in which his own property shall be applied for his own benefit, and the deed will operate merely as a power to the trustees and will be revocable by the party making it, for the settlor being the only cestui que trust, may direct the disposition of his own trust-fund.<sup>5</sup>

If a voluntary settlement has been obtained by fraud or undue influence, or has been executed under a mistake, it may be set aside.<sup>6</sup>

aside voluntary settlement.

A voluntary settlement made with the intention of defrauding creditors will be void as against them under the Statute 13 Eliz., cap. 5.<sup>7</sup> This Statute is in force in the LECTURE II. Presidency-Towns.<sup>1</sup> In Sham Kissore Shaw v Cowie<sup>2</sup> it was held to be applicable to persons other than European British subjects; and in Gnanabhai v. Srinivasa Pillai,<sup>3</sup> the Court say that the principles applied in the English cases may fully be made applicable to voluntary transactions between natives.<sup>4</sup> But in Azimunnissa Begum v. Dale,<sup>5</sup> Bittleston, J., seemed to think that the Statute did not apply.

The absence of consideration is taken to be comprised in the term 'fraudulent,' though the Act does not specially refer to voluntary conveyances in so many words.<sup>6</sup> But the extent of the value given is not taken into consideration; the question is, whether the transaction was one of bargain or of gift merely, and the fact that some value, e.g., a covenant to indemnify against expenses, was given, may be proved aliunde.<sup>7</sup> Volunteers, who are creditors, for instance, under bonds or obligations given without valuable consideration, are as much entitled to the benefit of the Statute as any other creditors.<sup>8</sup>

property
Statute
applicable.

An assignment of property which cannot be taken in execution is not, within the words of the Statute, an assignment of property with the intent to delay creditors, inasmuch as creditors could never have had execution or satisfaction out of such property.<sup>9</sup> An assignment of choses-in-action is not within the Statute during the lifetime of the assignor, except as regards such as can be taken in execution.<sup>10</sup>

The question as to whether the assignment was with the intent to hinder, delay, or defraud creditors, is one of fact; circumstances of suspicion do not amount to proof of fraud,<sup>11</sup> even when the conveyance is absolute and the grantor remains in possession, though this is generally considered to be an indication or badge of fraud.<sup>1</sup> But where the conveyance is not absolute, to take effect immediately, as in the case of mortgage, and the mortgagee is not to take possession until a default in the payment of the mortgage-money, then, as the nature of the transaction does not call for any transmutation of possession, the absence of such transmutation seems to be no evidence of fraud.<sup>2</sup> If it be found as a fact that there was no fraud, the conveyance will, as a rule, be good under the Statute.<sup>3</sup>

II.

When the assignment is not absolute, but by way of mortgage, as the retention of the possession by the mortgagor until default in payment is in accordance with the deed, the assignment is not fraudulent.<sup>4</sup>

Assignment by

A valuable consideration will not support a conveyance if there be mala fides, and an intent to delay or defraud creditors. Even an ante-nuptial marriage settlement may be set aside. Of course, those who undertake to impeach for mala fides a deed which has been executed for valuable consideration, have a task of great difficulty to discharge.<sup>5</sup> So, if the object of the conveyance be to place the property beyond the reach of process, or to defraud future creditors, it will be void, though it may be, or may purport to be, for value.<sup>6</sup> An assignment by a prisoner, on the eve of trial for felony, of all his effects upon certain trusts, is within the Statute, and void as against the Crown;<sup>7</sup> but otherwise, if made bond fide and for value, for instance, to secure an existing debt.<sup>8</sup>

LECTURE II. — generally is not within the Act, though made with the intent to delay an individual creditor.<sup>1</sup> But an absolute assignment, in consideration of a past debt, of property of much greater amount than the debt, by a person in a dying state, is void as against other creditors under the Statute.<sup>2</sup> The Statute only mentions feigned and fraudulent gifts and conveyances. But, however, voluntary conveyances or settlements have been held to be within the Statute if made to hinder or defraud creditors. The mere fact that the settlement is voluntary will not invalidate it. The principle is this: The language of the Act being, that any conveyance of property is void against creditors if made with intent to defeat, hinder, or delay creditors,—the Court is to decide in each particular case whether, on all the circumstances, it can come to the conclusion, that the intention of the settlor in making the settlement was to defeat, hinder, or delay his creditors.<sup>3</sup> Nor will the fact that the settlement comprises all the settlor's property be sufficient ground for setting it aside.<sup>4</sup> And extrinsic evidence is admissible to show, that valuable consideration was in fact given for a deed which appears on the face of it to be voluntary,<sup>5</sup> or that the settlement was bond fide, though the practice of framing deeds so as not to show the real nature of the transaction carried out by them ought to be discouraged.<sup>6</sup> The indebtedness of the settlor at the time of the settlement is usually relied upon as showing the intent to delay and defraud creditors; but it is only one of the circumstances which the Court has to consider.<sup>7</sup> The indebtedness need not be to the extent of insolvency, though this was formerly held to be necessary.<sup>8</sup> But this is not the law now. "With respect to voluntary settlements," said Wood, V. C.,<sup>9</sup> "the result of the authorities is, that the mere fact of a settlement being voluntary is not enough to render it void against creditors: but there must be unpaid debts which were existing at the time of making the settlement, and the settlor must have been at the time not necessarily insolvent, but so largely indebted as to induce the Court to believe that the intention of the settlement, taking the whole transaction together, was to defraud the persons who, at the time of making the settlement, were creditors of the settlor.<sup>1</sup>

On the other hand, although indebtedness to this extent may not exist, and the property of the grantor, not subject to the conveyance, may be enough to pay his debts existing at the time of the conveyance, it will not necessarily be good. "If," said Lord Westbury, C.,<sup>2</sup> "the debt of the creditor by whom the voluntary settlement is impeached existed at the date of the settlement, and it is shown that the remedy of the creditor is defeated or delayed by the existence of the settlement, it is immaterial whether the debtor was or was not solvent after making the settlement. But if a voluntary settlement or deed of gift be impeached by subsequent creditors whose debts had not been contracted at the date of the settlement, then it is necessary to show either that the settlor made the settlement with express intent 'to delay, hinder, or defraud creditors,' or that, after the settlement, the settlor had no sufficient means or reasonable expectation of being able to pay his then existing debts,—that is to say, was reduced to a state of insolvency; in which case the law infers that the settlement was made with intent to delay, hinder, or defraud creditors, and is therefore fraudulent and void. It is obvious that the fact of a voluntary settlor retaining money enough to pay the debts which he owes at the time of making the settlement, but not actually paying them, cannot give a different character to the settlement or take it out of the Statute. It still remains a voluntary alienation or deed of gift, whereby in the event the remedies of creditors are delayed, hindered, or defrauded."

The mere fact that the settlement has in the event prevented a creditor, who was such when it was made, from debts.

Although the settlor may be indebted, yet if the debts are secured,<sup>2</sup> or if they do not exceed such ordinary debts as every person must incur, as for instance, for ordinary household expenses, and if the settlor has the means of paying them,<sup>3</sup> the settlement will not be void, and à fortiori the settlement will be good, if the settlor was solvent at the time he made it.<sup>4</sup>

Consideration paid to third person.

A conveyance, if otherwise within the Statute, will not be taken out of it merely because the consideration for it is not for the benefit of the grantor, but of another person. Thus, where a person in insolvent circumstances sold his business in consideration, in part, of an annuity to his wife, it was held that the wife was not entitled to the annuity as against her husband's creditors.<sup>5</sup>

settlement
only void as against existing creditors.

A merely voluntary settlement would seem to be void only as against existing creditors,<sup>6</sup> but subsequent creditors may sue to set it aside if any of the antecedent debtors remain unsatisfied.<sup>7</sup> If it can be shown that the settlor, though indebted at the time he made the settlement, has since paid every debt, it is difficult to say that he executed it with an intention to defeat or delay creditors, since his subsequent payment shows that he had not such an intention.<sup>8</sup>

fraud.

A deed, in fact fraudulent, and executed expressly to hinder and delay future creditors, may be impeached by them, though there were no creditors at the date of the deed, or they have subsequently been paid. And it may be set aside without proof of actual intention to defeat or delay creditors, if the circumstances are such that it would necessarily have that effect.<sup>9</sup>

It is not necessary that a creditor should have obtained a judgment, lien, decree or charging order; without any of these he may sue to impeach the validity of a fraudulent conveyance. But he must have obtained such a judgment, &c., before he can have execution against the property comprised in the deed.<sup>1</sup>

II.

The settlement is only void to the extent necessary to deal with the estate for the satisfaction of the creditors, the creditors of the settlor,<sup>2</sup> and is good as against the grantor and his assignees,<sup>3</sup> parties who assent to, and concur in, it;<sup>4</sup> such as volunteers claiming under him, for instance, devisees<sup>5</sup> and strangers.<sup>6</sup>

How far

In all other respects it is good, and will not be set aside merely because it is voluntary.<sup>7</sup>

If the conveyance or settlement be voidable, the voluntary grantee may, before it is avoided, make a valid transfer to a purchaser for value.<sup>8</sup>

The Insolvent Act 11 and 12 Vict., cap. 21, provides, section 9, that if any person who would be deemed a trader liable to become bankrupt, with intent to defeat or delay his creditors, shall make any fraudulent gift, grant, conveyance, delivery, or transfer of any of his lands, tenements, money, goods, or chattels, such an act may be deemed an act of insolvency on which his creditors may petition.

To constitute a fraudulent preference, two things must concur—1st, the act of preference must be voluntary on the part of the debtor; 2ndly, it must have been done by him when in such a state of insolvency, as that, it may or must be inferred, that bankruptcy was then in his consideration. And therefore when an assignment or conveyance is made by a debtor to a creditor upon the demand of the latter for payment or security, it will not be fraudulent.<sup>1</sup>

The Statute 13 Eliz., cap. 5, with which we have been dealing, relates to creditors. Another Statute of the same reign, which applies in India to the same extent as 13 Eliz., cap. 5<sup>2</sup> (27 Eliz., cap. 4), made perpetual by 30 Eliz., cap. 18, section 3, relates to purchasers. This Statute, in substance, enacts, that all conveyances, grants, charges, leases, estates, incumbrances, and limitations of use or uses, of, in, or out of any lands, tenements, or other hereditaments whatsoever, made for the intent to defraud and deceive such person or persons, bodies politic or corporate, as had purchased, or should purchase, in fee-simple, fee-tail, for life, lives or years, the same lands, tenements, or hereditaments, or any part thereof, or to defraud and deceive such as had or should purchase any rent or commodity in or out of the same or any part thereof, shall be deemed or taken only as against that person and persons, bodies politic and corporate, his and their representatives, and persons claiming under them for good consideration, utterly void, frustrate, and of none effect, any pretence, colour, feigned consideration, to the contrary notwithstanding.

The Statute (s. 4) does not extend to defeat any conveyance, assignment of lease, assurance, grant; charge, lease, estate, interest or limitation of use, of, on, or out of any lands, &c., for good consideration and bond fide. LECTURE II.

The Statute does not extend to settlements of personal estate,<sup>1</sup> being in this respect unlike the 13 Eliz., cap. 5; and therefore a voluntary settlement of chattels, personal, will not be defeated by a subsequent sale.<sup>2</sup> Mortgagees<sup>3</sup> and lessees<sup>4</sup> are purchasers pro tanto; but a judgment-creditor is not, and has, therefore, no title on that ground to set aside a prior voluntary settlement.<sup>5</sup> Statute does not extend to personal estate.

The settlor himself cannot defeat the settlement by an admission of the receipt of money,<sup>6</sup> and if he has contracted to sell, the contract may be specifically enforced against him;<sup>7</sup> but a Court of Equity will not, as against an unwilling purchaser, assist a vendor to defeat a prior voluntary settlement made by himself, though it will if the purchaser is willing to complete on having a good title,<sup>8</sup> or if there has been part performance by the purchaser receiving possession and payment of part of the purchase-money;<sup>9</sup> and notice to the purchaser of the settlement is immaterial.<sup>10</sup> But the purchaser may sue the vendor and trustees and cestuis que trustent to enforce specific performance,<sup>11</sup> though he cannot require the voluntary deed to be delivered up to him to be cancelled.<sup>12</sup> The voluntary grantee has no equity to the purchase-money as against the vendor.<sup>13</sup> When settlor may defeat settlement.

To avoid a prior conveyance, however, to a volunteer, the subsequent purchase must be for value, and the consideration must not be grossly inadequate, or a presumption Subsequent purchase must be for value.

How far voluntary settlement defeated. The operation of the Statute is to destroy the estates created by the voluntary conveyance as against the purchaser, who cannot, therefore, be affected by the trusts of those estates.<sup>4</sup> But the voluntary settlement will be defeated so far only as may be necessary to give effect to the subsequent conveyance.<sup>5</sup> A purchaser from the heir or devisee of a person who has made a voluntary settlement is not entitled to set aside the settlement.<sup>6</sup>

Personalty settled. If personalty be settled on certain specified trusts in favour of volunteers, and the trusts are acted upon, the settlement cannot be altered by any subsequent settlement.<sup>7</sup>

Subsequent will. As a person claiming under a will is a volunteer, a voluntary settlement will not be revoked by a subsequent will disposing of the settled property, even if the object is the payment of the settlor's debts;<sup>8</sup> And a purchase in the name of a wife or child is not within this Statute.<sup>9</sup>

Conveyances with power of revocation. The 5th section of the Statute 27 Eliz., cap. 4, in substance declares, that if any person shall make any conveyance, gift, grant, devise, charge, limitation of use or assurance of, in or out of any lands, tenements, or hereditaments, with any clause of revocation, determination, or alteration at his will or pleasure, and after such conveyance, gift, &c., shall convey or charge lands, &c., for money or other good consideration—the said first conveyance or grant not being revoked—the said former conveyance, grant, &c., shall, as against those claiming under the latter conveyance, &c., be deemed void.

The Act does not apply to mortgages made bond fide and for value (s. 6). It avoids the first conveyance, though to a purchaser for value,<sup>1</sup> and cannot be evaded by making the exercise of the power apparently conditional, as that the consent of a third person appointed by the grantor shall be obtained.<sup>2</sup>

II.
Effect of Statute.

The reservation of an unlimited power of leasing is in effect a general power of revocation.<sup>3</sup> So, a power to mortgage, unless it be limited to a specified sum upon an estate of much greater value.<sup>4</sup>

A settlement with power of revocation is void as against a subsequent purchaser, although the settlor has released or extinguished the power previously to the sale;<sup>5</sup> unless the release was for value, the settlement containing the power being also for value.<sup>6</sup>

Conveyances or settlements will not be void as against purchasers or creditors if supported by a valuable consideration, except in cases where a power of revocation is reserved to the settlor, the mere quantum of consideration is in general not material.<sup>7</sup>

tion.

Marriage, according to English law, is a valuable consideration, and will support a settlement.<sup>8</sup> Though, as a general rule, a settlement after marriage even upon a wife or children is voluntary, there being merely a moral consideration which will not support a promise or settlement.<sup>9</sup> But an additional portion received by the wife after the marriage will support a post-nuptial settlement on her and her children.<sup>10</sup>

LECTURE II. of dower,<sup>1</sup> or a charge by her upon her own estate,<sup>2</sup> will support a settlement by her husband. So the payment of the settlor's debts by a third person is a good consideration for a settlement upon his wife and children,<sup>3</sup> and a loan to him will be a good consideration for a settlement upon himself for life with remainder to his children.<sup>4</sup>

So if a person incur expenses on the faith of a settlement, and in addition enters into a covenant to indemnify the settlor against certain incumbrances, there will be a good consideration for a settlement.<sup>5</sup>

The release or surrender of a voluntary bond is a good consideration to support a substituted bond, unless with a fraudulent design, as by an insolvent to substitute an available security for one that could not avail against creditors.<sup>6</sup>

Settlements founded upon immoral considerations are of course void. See ante, p. 48.

Extrinsic evidence admissible to show consideration.

A settlement in form voluntary may be shown from extrinsic evidence to have been made for valuable consideration.<sup>7</sup> And, if necessary, an inquiry may be directed as to whether the settlement was founded on any and what valuable consideration, for the consideration need not actually appear.<sup>8</sup>

In Bayspoole v. Collins,<sup>9</sup> the owner of property, which was worth, beyond an incumbrance to which it was subject, about £1,300, was persuaded by A, a relative of his wife, to make a post-nuptial settlement of it on his wife and children. As an inducement to do this, A lent him £150 on his promissory note. The settlement was executed, but no mention was made in it of the advance of £150. It was held, that the loan was a sufficient valuable consideration to support the settlement against a subsequent mortgagee of the settlor.

A conveyance to a trustee in trust to pay the debts of the grantor, although it may be void as regards them, will,

II.

Where a settlement or conveyance, whether by transfer of property or declaration of trust respecting it, is effectual, and not open to objection upon any of the foregoing grounds, the grantor cannot avoid it, nor will the Court set it aside. Although the Court will not assist the completion of voluntary deeds, it does not lay down, as a rule, that they are always void; the mere alteration of intention is not sufficient to induce the Court to interfere and cancel an instrument which was fully understood and deliberately executed by the grantor.<sup>2</sup>

Settlement not set aside as against grantors.

And a settlement will not be revoked though the trustees of the property re-convey it to the grantor,<sup>3</sup> in which case they will be guilty of a breach of trust.<sup>4</sup>

So the settlement will remain in force, though the settled property may come back into the hands of the settlor.<sup>5</sup>

In Forshaw v. Welsby<sup>6</sup> it was held, that a voluntary settlement containing no power of revocation, made by a person in expectation of death, ought to be set aside at his instance, as it was not intended to be operative in the event of his recovery. Each case, however, must depend upon its own circumstances. The absence of a power of revocation in voluntary settlements is an important circumstance in considering them. When they are not intended to be irrevocable, such a power should be inserted. Where it is wanting, the argument is usually urged that the non-insertion is contrary to the intention of the settlor, particularly where the settlement is for the benefit of persons to be ascertained at a future time.<sup>7</sup>

ing settlement. The Court will not rectify a voluntary settlement at the instance either of the grantor or of the grantee, unless there has been a mistake common to all parties:<sup>2</sup> and where it does not express the intention of the parties, and is impeached, it cannot be reformed except with the consent of the donor.<sup>3</sup>

The mere retention of the instrument of settlement or gift by the settlor is immaterial, if there is nothing to show that the settlor did not intend it to operate immediately.<sup>4</sup>

ment. So is its destruction and the non-communication of its contents to the trustees or cestui que trust,<sup>5</sup> and if found cancelled among the papers of the grantor after his death, it will be enforced against his representatives upon the presumption that it was improperly cancelled.<sup>6</sup>

An instrument vesting property in trustees for the benefit of the grantor for his life, and after his decease, for the benefit of other persons, with a power of revocation, is valid, and is not testamentary.<sup>7</sup>

binding. A settlement complete and valid, having regard to the abovementioned rule, is binding on the settlor or grantor, and on his heirs and legal representatives and devisees,<sup>8</sup> and persons claiming under them though for value.<sup>9</sup>

A person who takes by title paramount to the settlement, who does no act to repudiate it, will, in general, be considered to have acquiesced in it.<sup>10</sup>

unborn children is, according to English law, binding and irrevocable unless a power of revocation be reserved.<sup>1</sup>

A question frequently arises how far deeds for the payment of creditors are revocable. As to this it has been held, that a conveyance for the benefit of creditors is revocable if it has not been communicated to them,<sup>2</sup> but not if communicated to them, or some of them, and they assent to it.<sup>3</sup> A conveyance even to one creditor in trust for himself and others cannot be revoked after it has been communicated to him unless he has dissented.<sup>4</sup>

The principles applicable to creditors' deeds were fully discussed by the Lords Justices in the recent case of Johns v. James.<sup>5</sup> There a debtor conveyed all his property to the defendants upon trust to pay thereout a sum of £5,000, which they were to raise on his behalf, and all other debts due from the assignor, including a debt due to the plaintiff. The defendants realized the property of the assignor, and alleged that they had paid some of the debts out of the proceeds. The plaintiff brought an action against the defendants, asking for an account of the property, and that the debts of the plaintiff and the other creditors might be satisfied thereout. The statement of claim contained no allegation that the assignment had been communicated to the plaintiff. It was held, that the defendants were not trustees for the plaintiff. James, L. J., said :—"It appears to me to be too late now to question the principle of Garrard v. Lord Lauderdale.<sup>6</sup> That case seems to me to have proceeded upon the plainest notion of common sense. It is quite obvious that a man in pecuniary difficulties having a great number of debts which he could not meet, might put his property in the hands of certain persons to realize and pay the creditors in the best way they could. It was held by the Vice-Chancellor, and it has been affirmed, that really after all that is only making those particular persons who are called trustees his agents or attorneys. There might be a power-of-attorney from him to realize all his property, and relieve him from the difficulties he was in. If it were

II.
—Johns v.
James.

supposed that such a deed as that created an absolute irrevocable trust in favour of everyone of the persons who happened at the time to be a creditor, the result might have been very often monstrous. It would give him no opportunity of paying a creditor who was pressing; no opportunity of settling an action; no opportunity of getting any goods for himself or his family the next day, or redeeming property pledged. So, where there was an actual conveyance on trust, it was held in Wallwyn v. Coutts,<sup>1</sup> that where it was for all the creditors, it must be assumed from the very nature of the transaction, and from the position of the assignor, that it was a thing for his own benefit, and not for the benefit of numbers of persons whom the trustees would probably have no means of ascertaining, and whose debts the trustees would probably have no means of knowing. If you once assumed that this was an absolute trust in favour of every creditor, every person who had a right to claim to be a creditor, or had some demand against him, everyone of those might have filed a bill, and the unfortunate trustee under those circumstances (who might have acted the part of a friend to the impecunious person) might have been liable to a thousand bills in Chancery, for he could not stop any of them until a decree was made in favour of all the creditors.

Those are some of the reasons that appear to me to have led the Court to say that such a deed as this is to be construed as a mandate, the same sort of mandate that a man gives when he gives his servant money, with directions to pay it in a particular way; it does not create any equitable or legal right in favour of a particular creditor. The right to the direction of the money is the right of the person who has put the money in the hands of his agent or steward, or whoever he may be. Wallwyn v. Coutts<sup>1</sup> laid that down as the law where the deed was for creditors generally. Garrard v. Lord Lauderdale<sup>2</sup> only extended it to the case where the names of the creditors were scheduled, and the amounts due were scheduled, and that was held not to make any difference; and from that time to this I believe that has been the doctrine of the Court. The deed itself does not create a trust in favour of all and every or any of the creditors. But circumstances may have occurred, circumstances may have existed, which did make the assignment a trust or an obligation in favour of some particular person. If the creditor has executed the deed himself, and been a party to it, and assented to it—if he has entered into obligations upon the faith of the deed, of course that gives him a right, just as in the case where a man receives money from a person, on a direction from his creditor to pay some other person instead of paying him, and he communicates it to this person. The person to whom he communicates it of course has a legal right to have the money so applied, but that does not enure for the benefit of any other person or persons to whom no such communication has been made. It seems to me that on principle you cannot create a right in A where the deed has not given him a right, because something has occurred giving B a right, who originally was in the same position as A. That was in fact the principle of the decision in Acton v. Woodgate,<sup>1</sup> for in that case there being beyond all question a trust deed in favour of all the creditors, including certain post obit creditors, whom the settlor was afterwards minded not to put on the same footing as his other creditors, the settlor directed that they should be excluded from the benefit of the deed; and it was held by the Court that it was perfectly in his power to do so, and the deed remained still as a deed to be executed in favour of all the creditors except the post obit creditors, and they were not cestuis que trustent by the deed. It has been called a partial revocation. It is not a case of revocation in one sense; you cannot revoke the deed, and cannot get the property out of the hands of the trustee until, at all events, you have satisfied all the charges and expenses he has incurred, and any right he has acquired in the property. It is not a revocation of the deed, but it is a revocation of the directions given by the deed to the assignor's agent as to what he shall do with the proceeds. It appears to me that this is clearly a case of the same kind as Wallwyn v. Coutts,<sup>2</sup> and Garrard v. Lord Lauderdale,<sup>3</sup> viz., the case of a creditor to whom no communication has been made, who has never been induced to act by anything that occurred by reason of the execution of the deed."

If a time be limited for the execution of the deed by the creditors, those who refuse to execute it will be excluded

LECTURE from its benefits.<sup>1</sup> So if they claim adversely to it,<sup>2</sup> or act
 II. inconsistently with it.<sup>3</sup> And a creditor cannot be said to — have acceded to the provisions of a composition deed unless he has put himself in the same situation with regard to the debtor as if he had actually executed the deed.<sup>4</sup>

But mere delay in executing the deed by creditors who nevertheless act under it will not disentitle them to participate in its benefits,<sup>5</sup> if they do eventually execute the deed or show in some way that they accept it.<sup>6</sup>

A creditor having security, who assents to, and executes, the deed, which contains a release by the creditors of the debts due to them, must share rateably with the other creditors and give up his security, unless the deed provides for his retaining it.<sup>7</sup>

 communicated to creditors.

If there has been no communication to creditors, the trust, if not fully executed at the time of the settlor's death, would seem then to be at an end, subject to any special interest of the trustee himself; but not if the deed has been communicated to the creditors and acted upon, as this would constitute them cestuis que trustent, and make the deed irrevocable.<sup>8</sup>

 will for payment of
 debts.

A trust by will for the payment of the debts of a third person in the discretion of trustees applies, it has been held, for the benefit of creditors subsequent to the death of the testator.<sup>9</sup> A debt barred by limitation will not be revived by a direction to pay debts;<sup>10</sup> but if not barred at the date of the deed or time of the death, the trust will prevent the operation of the Statute afterwards.<sup>11</sup>

A trustee of an estate devised for payment of debts, although he is executor, has no right of retainer, but must share rateably with the other creditors.<sup>12</sup>

HITHERTO we have dealt with express trusts only. A person, however, may show an intention to create a trust, and this will be carried out by the Court by means of an implied trust. <sup>Implied trusts.</sup>

The general rule as to implied trusts is thus laid down by Mr. Lewin,<sup>1</sup>—"Wherever a person having a power of disposition over property, manifests any intention with respect to it in favour of another, the Court, where there is sufficient consideration, or in a will where consideration is implied, will execute that intention through the medium of a trust, however informal the language in which it happens to be expressed."

In such cases the Court will enforce the implied trust in favour of the person named or indicated,<sup>28</sup> and compel the person in whom the confidence is reposed to give effect thereto. LECTURE

III.

The property must be described with certainty.<sup>1</sup> For the objects, property, and way in which it shall go must be pointed out.<sup>2</sup> Objects, property,
and trust
described.

For instance, a bequest of property to a certain person "hoping that he will continue it in the family," does not create a trust, as the beneficiary is not indicated with reasonable certainty.<sup>3</sup> So, for the same reason, a bequest to A requesting him to distribute it amongst such members of B's family as B shall think most deserving, does not create a trust.<sup>4</sup> Again, a bequest to A desiring him to divide the bulk of it among B's children, does not create a trust, for the trust property is not indicated with sufficient certainty;<sup>5</sup> and a bequest of a shop and stock-in-trade to A on condition that he pays the testator's debts and a legacy to B, is a condition and not a trust for the testator's creditors and B.<sup>6</sup> So also a direction to remember certain persons without specifying any sum or property,<sup>7</sup> or to make ample provision for them,<sup>8</sup> to give what shall remain at the legatee's death,<sup>9</sup> or to divide and dispose of the savings,<sup>10</sup> to consider certain persons,<sup>11</sup> or to be kind to them,<sup>12</sup> will not create a trust.

Such words and expressions, however, as have been mentioned, particularly where they indicate recommendation or entreaty, are of a flexible character, and will not create a trust, if that is inconsistent with other positive provisions in the will.<sup>13</sup> And words of expectation do not amount to a recommendation, and do not create a trust.<sup>14</sup> Words of recom-
and entreaty.

LECTURE
III.Intention to give absolutely.

If it is clear that the author of the trust intended that the devisee should take absolutely, precatory words will not cut down the absolute gift, and create a trust; they are then regarded merely as the expression of a wish.<sup>1</sup> Thus where property is given to A for his own use, benefit, and disposal absolutely, the author of the trust nevertheless conjuring,<sup>2</sup> desiring,<sup>3</sup> or recommending<sup>4</sup> him to make a particular disposition, no trust will be created.<sup>5</sup>

diate class
of cases.

If a testator has, by his will, recommended or desired that a particular person shall be employed as an agent or manager of an estate, or the like, this will not in general impose a trust or obligation upon the devisee of the estate.<sup>6</sup>

There would seem to be an intermediate class of cases between those in which the Court holds that a trust has been created and those in which it holds that it has not been created. Thus there may be an absolute gift subject only to the performance of a particular trust, and the Court may look dehors the will to see what the trust is. In Irvine v. Sullivan<sup>7</sup> the testator bequeathed his property to A absolutely, trusting that she would carry out his wishes, but there was no further reference to them in the will. A had written down what the testator desired to give to various persons; but the paper had not been seen by the testator. It was held that A took beneficially subject to the performance of the testator's wishes.<sup>8</sup>

ance.

Occasionally the trusts of a will with reference to the maintenance of children are so ambiguous that it is doubtful whether the testator meant to create a trust, or merely to indicate the motive of the gift. Thus, if a legacy be given to a father that he may support himself and his children,<sup>9</sup> or better to enable him to provide for his children,<sup>10</sup> or to assist his children or the like,<sup>11</sup> or if a legacy be given to A to maintain and bring up B,<sup>1</sup> the gift is absolute without any trust or obligation being imposed on the legatee. So no trust is created when there is an absolute gift, having full confidence that the legatee will make sufficient and judicious provision for the children,<sup>2</sup> or will husband the means left for the children.<sup>3</sup> But a bequest of the income of property that the legatee may use or dispose of it for the benefit of himself and the maintenance and education of his children, in general, creates a trust, not exclusively, however, for the children, but for the parent and children.<sup>4</sup> The trust is imperative to this extent, that the parent must perform the obligation. Provided he does this, he may retain any surplus beyond what is required for this purpose, for himself, and is not bound to account for the application of the fund.<sup>5</sup> But failing in the performance of the trust he will not be allowed to receive the income.<sup>6</sup> Where there is a bequest of a fund to A for the maintenance of her children, and there are none, she will herself be entitled to the income.<sup>7</sup> So also if they have since died.<sup>8</sup> The obligation to maintain the children, if there are any, will not be at an end when they attain twenty-one or marry. Whether it would, if they ceased to reside under the parent's roof, is doubtful.<sup>9</sup> The cases on this point are conflicting.<sup>10</sup>

In Scott v. Key,<sup>11</sup> under a bequest to the testator's widow to be at her sole and entire disposal for the benefit of herself and children, it was held, that the trust for maintenance did not cease absolutely on a daughter, an only child, attaining twenty-one and marrying; but that on her becoming a widow and requiring maintenance, she would be entitled to it.

LECTURE
III.

A direction that A shall reside with and be maintained by B, will not be enforced as a trust in the event of A not choosing to reside with B, and although A may reside with B, the trust will terminate at the death of the latter.<sup>1</sup> Where an annuity was given to the testator's widow (in addition to another provision for her) as long as she and her son should live together, but if they ceased to live together it should cease, it was held that the annuity did not terminate upon the son's death in the widow's lifetime.<sup>2</sup> There are cases, however, somewhat varying in terms from those just noticed in which the Court has come to the conclusion that the trustee or parent was not intended to take any interest. As if there is a gift to A to dispose of among his children,<sup>3</sup> or the better to enable him to maintain his children until their shares should become payable.<sup>4</sup>

Again, the terms of the bequest may show that the parent or trustee was intended to take jointly, or in common, with the other objects of the trust, as where a fund is given to a parent with her children for their joint maintenance.<sup>5</sup> And where the bequest was to the testator's wife for the use and benefit of herself and all his children by her, or by a former wife, it was held that the widow and children took as joint tenants.<sup>6</sup> In some cases it has been held, that where there is a gift to a parent to be disposed of for the benefit of himself or herself and children, the parent takes an estate for life with a power of disposition in favour of the children.<sup>7</sup> But this cannot be relied upon as a general rule. Where a testator gave a house and all his estate to his widow "to be at her disposal in any way she may think best for the benefit of herself and family," and the widow gave part to an illegitimate son of one of the testator's children, the gift was held valid. deciding the question, seem to have had little or no doubt that no trust at all was created by the testator's will.<sup>1</sup>

III.

An implied trust will arise when a person agrees for valuable consideration to settle certain property, whether moveable or immoveable,<sup>2</sup> and the property may be followed into the hands of a third person.<sup>3</sup>

Agreement to settle
property.

So if a person enters into a valid contract for the sale of property, he is from that time a trustee of the property for the purchaser, and must account for the rents and profits, and will be liable in damages if he neglects the property, for being a trustee he is bound to take care of the trust estate, and commits a breach of trust if he does not do so.<sup>4</sup>

Vendor trustee for vendee.

The next class of trusts to consider are those created by operation of law. These again may be subdivided into resulting trusts and constructive trusts. I will first deal with the rules of English law as to resulting trusts, and then with benami transactions. When the instrument creating the trust, whether a deed or will, does not direct how the whole of the property, made subject to the trust, is to be disposed of, the undisposed of interest results to the settlor or his heirs or representatives.<sup>5</sup> If a will fails to make an effectual and complete disposition of the whole of the testator's real and personal estate, the undisposed of interest devolves upon the person or persons on whom the law, in the absence of disposition, casts that species of property. So on the same principle, where lands are devised upon particular purposes, as for payment of debts, or with a direction to pay to A for life, and no further trust is declared, all the unexhausted beneficial interest results to the heir. This doctrine is so well settled, that if the character of trustee be plainly and unequivocally affixed to the devisee, no question can be raised respecting its application; but the difficulty in these cases generally is to determine whether it is intended that the interest

LECTURE in the land beyond the purpose to which it is devoted III. shall belong to the devisees in a fiduciary character, or for — their own benefit.<sup>1</sup>

Where the whole legal interest of a grantor is given for the purpose of satisfying trusts expressed, and those trusts do not in their execution exhaust the whole, so much of the beneficial interest as is not exhausted results to the grantor or to his heir or legal personal representatives. But where the whole legal interest is given for a particular purpose, with an intention to give to the grantee of the legal estate the beneficial interest, if the whole is not exhausted by that particular purpose, the surplus goes to the grantee, and there is no resulting trust. Thus, a devise to A and his heirs charged with the testator's debts is a beneficial devise, subject to a particular purpose, and there will be no resulting trust; but if the devise is upon trust to pay debts, that being a devise for a particular purpose only, a trust will result for the heir.<sup>2</sup>

In Lallubhai Bapubhai v. Mankuvarbai,<sup>3</sup> Westropp, C.J., said: "Where there is a devise upon trusts which do not exhaust the property devised, the mere conferring of a legacy, or other benefit, upon the heir does not prevent there being a resulting trust of the residue for him, unless there be other circumstances sufficiently strong to turn the scale in favour of the devisee. On the same principle the mere gift, by a testator, of an annuity to his wife has been held not to be sufficient without other circumstances demonstrative of his intention that she should not have both it and dower, to induce the Courts in England to put her to her election between the annuity and dower. Even where there is an expressed intention to exclude the next-of-kin from the residue of personalty, or the heir from the residue of realty, there must be a distinct devise away from them, otherwise there will be a resulting trust in their favour."

Even where there is an expressed intention to exclude the next-of-kin or heir, there must be a distinct devise away from them, otherwise there will be a resulting trust in their favour.<sup>3</sup>

Parol evidence is admissible to rebut the presumption of law in the case of an instrument made inter vivos, and to show the settlor's intention to give the surplus interest beneficially.<sup>4</sup>

If property is assigned for an illegal purpose which is not carried into effect, and nothing is done under it, the mere intention to effect an illegal object when the assignment was executed, does not deprive the assignor of his right to recover the property from the assignee who has given no consideration for it.<sup>5</sup>

Where estates are devised to executors upon trust, to sell and to invest part of the proceeds of the sale for a particular purpose, but no trust is declared of the sum so reserved after the purpose is satisfied, there will be a resulting trust for the heir.<sup>6</sup>

Under a devise of all the residue of the testator's estate and effects whatsoever, and wheresoever, of what nature or kind soever, to trustees upon trusts applicable only to personal property, the real estate will pass with a resulting trust for the heir.<sup>7</sup> But if the trusts may be applicable to real estate, then the real estate will pass.<sup>8</sup>

- LECTURE III. executed,<sup>1</sup> or if they lapse,<sup>2</sup> or are void because of unlawfulness,<sup>3</sup> or if property is devised on trusts to be thereafter declared, and no declaration is made,<sup>4</sup> a trust will result.
- Trusts vague. So also a trust will result when the instrument creating the trust shows that it was not intended that the grantee should take beneficially, as where the conveyance, devise, or bequest is to A "upon trust," and no trust is declared.<sup>5</sup>
- No trust declared. If a trust is declared of a part only of an estate, whether by conveyance, inter vivos, or by will, the undisposed of interest results to the grantee or testator, or his heirs or representatives.<sup>6</sup> According to English law, the undisposed of residue, in the case of personalty, vests in the executors beneficially. But that rule does not apply to Hindus.<sup>7</sup>
- Trust declared of part only of estate. A trust will result where stock or money is transferred to another, unless it can be inferred from the surrounding circumstances that a gift was intended;<sup>8</sup> and where the transfer is into the joint names of the grantor and grantee, the grantee will have a beneficial interest for life.<sup>9</sup>
- Transfer of stock or money into name of another. No trust will result where a person invests money in the names of the trustees of his marriage settlement, the presumption being in such cases that he intended to benefit the persons interested under the settlement.<sup>10</sup>
- Purchase in name of trustees. Though cestuis que trustent may claim the whole of an estate which is wholly purchased out of trust monies, they can, if the estate be only partially purchased with trust money, claim only a charge for the amount of the trust monies employed in the trust.<sup>11</sup>

Where property is bought by one person in the name of a stranger, to whom the conveyance is made, there will be a resulting trust for the person who paid the purchase-money. "The clear result of all the cases," said Eyre, C. B.,<sup>1</sup> "without a single exception, is, that the trust of a legal estate, whether freehold, copyhold, or leasehold; whether taken in the names of the purchasers or others jointly, or in the names of others without that of the purchaser; whether in one name or several; whether jointly or successivé, results to the man who advanced the purchase-money. This is a general proposition supported by all the cases, and there is nothing to contradict it; and it goes on a strict analogy to the rule of the common law, that where a feoffment is made without consideration, the use results to the feoffor."<sup>2</sup>

III.Purchase in name of stranger.

The person who advances the money must do so in the character of purchaser.<sup>3</sup>

No resulting trust will be created by the mere expression of a wish on the part of the grantor, that the purchase-money may be applied in a certain way.<sup>4</sup>

wish.

The rights of a purchaser may be barred by negligence or delay.<sup>5</sup>

Delay.

The rule that a trust results for the person who pays the purchase-money applies to the case of a joint purchase in the name of one. In Crop v. Norton,<sup>6</sup> Lord Hardwicke seemed to think that the application of the rule was confined to an advance by one individual. In Wray v. Steele,<sup>7</sup> however, Sir T. Plumer decided that a resulting trust arose upon a joint advance, the purchase being taken in the name of one. "Lord Hardwicke," said his Honour, "could not have used the language attributed to him. What is there applicable to an advance by a single individual, that

To personal as well as real estate.

The foregoing doctrines apply as well to personal as to real estate,<sup>2</sup> even though when the property consists of shares in a company, the rules of the company provide that there shall be no benefit of survivorship.<sup>3</sup>

Purchase in fictitious name.

Where money has been invested in the purchase of stock in a fictitious name, for the purpose of defrauding creditors, the Court will order the fictitious name to be erased and the stock to be transferred to the person who paid the purchase-money.<sup>4</sup> Where an intestate had executed transfers of railway shares and stock to a fictitious person, the Court, in a suit by his administrator, declared that the intestate used the fictitious name as another designation of himself, and that the plaintiff, as administrator, was entitled to a transfer of the shares and stock in question, and to receive the dividends thereof.<sup>5</sup>

Parol evidence admissible on part of person paying purchase-money.

Parol evidence is admissible on behalf of the person paying the purchase-money to show that it belonged to him. In Sir John Pechy's Case,<sup>6</sup> Sir E. Clarke, M. R., laid it down, that if A sold an estate to C, and the consideration was expressed to be paid by B, and the conveyance made to B, the Court would allow parol evidence to prove that the money was paid by C.<sup>7</sup> But such parol proofs must be very clear.<sup>8</sup>

Parol evidence on behalf of person to whom conveyance made.

Parol evidence is admissible on behalf of the person to whom the conveyance is made, to rebut the presumption of a resulting trust for the person paying the purchase-money. In Beecher v. Major,<sup>9</sup> A purchased and transferred £1,000 stock in the name of her niece, and wrote her a letter, saying that she had done so, and that she intended it for the niece's benefit; and in the letter A inclosed a bank-power, which she stated was to enable her to receive the dividends for her life, which power she requested the niece to execute and return to her, and also to destroy the letter, both of which the niece accordingly did. It afterwards turned out that the bank-power authorized A to sell out stock as well as receive the dividends. It appeared that A had always been very kind to the niece, and by her will, made before the transfer, had given her an annuity of £30. It was held, that parol evidence of the contents of the letter was admissible to rebut the presumption that the stock still belonged to A.<sup>1</sup> Parol evidence is admissible for the purpose of rebutting the presumption of a resulting trust as to a part, as well as to the whole of the property.<sup>2</sup>

tion as to

Frauds.

In a suit between persons governed by English law in the Presidency-towns, I apprehend that parol evidence would not be admissible to show that, where land has been paid for by one person, the purchase was made on behalf of another, for the seventh section of the Statute of Frauds requiring declarations of trust to be in writing is still in force there. This was decided in Bartlett v. Pickersgill,<sup>3</sup> where Lord Keeper Henley said: "I think the allowing this evidence would be to overturn the Statute. The Statute says there shall be no trust of land unless by memorandum in writing, except such trusts as arise by operation of law. Where money is actually paid, there the trust arises from the payment of the money, not from any agreement of the parties. But this is not like the case of money paid by one man and the conveyance taken in the name of another; in that case the bill charges that the estate was bought with the plaintiff's money. If the defendant says he borrowed it of the plaintiff, then the proof will be whether the money was lent or not; if it was not lent, the plaintiff bought the land; but as here the trust depends on the agreement if I establish the one by parol, I establish the other also. . . . If the plaintiff had paid any part of the purchase-money, it would have been a reason for me to admit the evidence, or if there had been any fraud used by the

without consideration.

In some cases it has been held, that where a conveyance is made to a stranger without any valuable consideration being expressed, that a resulting trust arises for the grantor.<sup>2</sup> In Young v. Peachy,<sup>3</sup> Lord Hardwicke said: "If a trust by implication was to arise in the present case, it would be to contradict the Statute of Frauds; for it might be said in every case where a voluntary conveyance is made, that a trust shall arise by implication; but that is by no means the rule of the Court.<sup>4</sup> Trusts by implication, or operation of law, arise in such cases, where one person pays the purchase-money, and the conveyance is taken in the name of another, or in some other cases of that kind; but the rule is by no means so large as to extend to every voluntary conveyance."<sup>5</sup>

Where a son conveyed an estate to his father nominally as purchaser, but really as a trustee, and in order that the father, who was in better credit than the son, might raise money on it by way of mortgage for the use of the son, and the father died shortly afterwards, and before any money was raised, having by a will subsequent to the conveyance made a general devise of all his real estates, it was held, that the case was within the Statute, and that parol evidence was not admissible to prove the trust; but that the son had a lien on the estate as vendor for the apparent consideration, no part of which was paid.<sup>6</sup>

If a mortgage is made in the joint names of a husband and wife, this will be considered as being in the nature of a joint purchase, and the wife will, if the husband dies, be entitled to the mortgage money by survivorship.<sup>1</sup>

III.

A purchase in the name of the purchaser and of a woman with whom he has gone through the ceremony of marriage, but who could never become his lawful wife, does not come within the rule, and therefore such a purchase will not raise a presumption that it was intended as an advancement or provision for her.<sup>2</sup>

wife.

The presumption of advancement may arise in the case of a purchase by a person who has placed himself in loco parentis to the person in whose name the purchase is made. Thus the presumption has been held to apply in the case of an illegitimate son.<sup>3</sup>

Person in
tis.

But the presumption of advancement will not arise in the case of a purchase in the name of an illegitimate grandchild, although the grandfather has placed himself in loco parentis to the child.<sup>4</sup>

In the case of Re De Visme,<sup>5</sup> it was said that a mother does not stand in such a relationship to a child as to raise a presumption of benefit for the child. In Sayre v. Hughes,<sup>6</sup> a mother, after making her will in favour of her two daughters, transferred stock, which had stood in her own name, into the names of herself and one of the daughters, and died. It was held, that there was a presumption of intended benefit to the daughter which was unrebutted, and that the stock belonged absolutely to her. Re De Visme<sup>7</sup> was cited as an authority for the proposition, that there could be no presumption of advancement as between a mother and child; but Stuart, V. C., pointed out that the word 'father' does not occur in Lord Chief Baron Eyre's judgment in Dyer v. Dyer,<sup>8</sup> and said that it was not easy to understand why a mother should be presumed to be less disposed to

Where stock was transferred by a mother into the names of herself, her daughter, and the daughter's husband, and the dividends on the stock were received by the son-in-law and paid over to the transferrer during her life, and the mother died leaving the son-in-law only surviving, it was held, that there was no resulting trust, and that the son-in-law was entitled to the stock, the Court being of opinion that the evidence showed that the mother intended to create a beneficial interest in each of the three persons into whose name the stock was transferred.<sup>1</sup>

Purchase in name of nephew. Where one of two brothers purchased an estate in the name of his nephew, and paid the whole of the purchase-money, and enjoyed the rents and profits, it was held, in a suit by the purchaser to recover possession, that he must be presumed to have purchased on his own account.<sup>2</sup>

Fiduciary relationship. Where a fiduciary relationship, such as that of solicitor and client, subsists between a parent and child, and the parent's money is advanced by the child in her own name, the ordinary presumption in favour of the transaction being a gift, is excluded, and the onus is thrown upon the child of proving that a gift was in fact intended.<sup>3</sup>

Purchases void as against creditors. Purchases in the name of a wife or child by way of gift, or advancement, are, it appears, within the 13 Eliz., c. 5, and may be avoided as against creditors.<sup>4</sup>

Rules apply to personal estate. The rules of English Courts of Equity as to resulting trusts apply also to personal estate, and therefore, where a husband transfers stock into the names of himself and his wife, no resulting trust will arise for the husband, but the wife will be entitled to the whole of the fund by survivorship;<sup>5</sup> so also in the case of a transfer of stock into the names of a parent and child, the stock will belong to the child surviving.<sup>6</sup>

The mere circumstance that the name of a wife or child is inserted on the occasion of a purchase of stock is not sufficient to rebut the presumption of a resulting trust in favour of the purchaser, if the surrounding circumstances lead to the conclusion that a trust was intended. Although a purchase in the name of a wife or a child, if altogether unexplained, will be deemed a gift, yet the surrounding circumstances may be taken into consideration so as to say that it is a trust, and not a gift. Thus in Marshall v. Crutwell,<sup>1</sup> the husband of the plaintiff, being in failing health, transferred his banking account from his own name into the joint names of himself and his wife, and directed the bankers to honour cheques drawn either by himself or his wife, and he afterwards paid in considerable sums to their account. All cheques were afterwards drawn by the plaintiff at the direction of her husband, and the proceeds were applied in payment of household and other expenses. The husband never explained to the plaintiff what his intention was in transferring the account, but he was stated by the bank manager to have remarked at the time of the transfer that the balance of the account would belong to the survivor of himself and his wife. After the death of her husband (which took place a few months after the transfer), the plaintiff claimed to be entitled to the balance. It was held, that the transfer of the account was not intended to be a provision for the plaintiff, but merely a convenient mode of managing her husband's affairs, and consequently that she was not entitled. Jessel, M. R., said: "In all the cases in which a gift to the wife has been held to have been intended, the husband has retained the dominion over the fund in this sense, that the wife during the lifetime of the husband has had no power independently of him, and the husband has retained the power of revoking the gift. In transferring a sum of stock, there is no obvious motive why a man should put a sum of stock into the name of himself and his wife. She cannot receive the dividends, he can and must, and it is difficult to see any motive of convenience or otherwise which should induce a man to buy a sum of stock or transfer a sum of stock (if there is any difference between the two) in or into the names of himself and his wife, except the motive of benefiting

III. fact, that the man was in such a state of health that he — could not draw cheques, and the wife drew them. Looking at the fact that subsequent sums are paid in from time to time, and taking into view all the circumstances (as I understand I am bound to do) as a juryman, I think that the circumstances show that this was a mere arrangement for convenience, and that it was not intended to be a provision for the wife in the event which might happen, that at the husband's death there might be a fund standing to the credit of the banking account."

Purchase- Where a purchase, either of moveable or immoveable money un- property, is made in the name of a wife or child, and the paid. purchaser dies before the whole of the purchase-money is paid, the purchase will enure for the benefit of the wife or child, and the unpaid purchase-money is payable out of the purchaser's personal estate.<sup>1</sup>

Joint ten- A purchase in the joint names of a father and son creates ancy when a joint tenancy.<sup>2</sup> In one case, where the father had no other created. estate to which a judgment-creditor could resort, the creditor was relieved in equity against the survivorship at law.<sup>3</sup>

Purchase If a purchase is made by a parent in the name of a child in the name and of a stranger, whether of real or personal estate, it will of a child be considered as an advancement; the stranger will be and a stran- treated as a trustee for the child, and there will not be any ger. resulting trust to the father.<sup>4</sup>

Evidence In certain cases where a purchase is made in the name to rebut of a child, the presumption of advancement may be rebutted.<sup>5</sup> presump- The antecedent and contemporaneous acts and declarations
tion of ad- of the parent are admissible in evidence to rebut the pre-

In Devoy v. Devoy,<sup>1</sup> the presumption that the transfer by a father of stock into the joint names of himself, his wife, and child, was intended to be an advancement, was allowed to be rebutted by the evidence of the transferor that no trust was intended, but that the transfer was made under a misapprehension of its legal effect.<sup>2</sup>

Although subsequent acts and declarations of the parent are not evidence to the support of the trust, subsequent acts and declarations of the child may be so.<sup>3</sup>

The presumption of advancement will not be rebutted by the fact of the father having continued in possession of the estate during his life,<sup>4</sup> nor by the fact that he has expended money in repairs on the estate.<sup>5</sup>

Where a father purchases stock or shares in the name of a child, and receives the dividends during his life under a power from the son, this alone will not rebut the presumption of advancement.<sup>6</sup> In Smith v. Warde,<sup>7</sup> a father directed stock to be purchased in the names of himself and his wife in trust for his infant son. The purchase was made in the joint names without any trust being declared, and the father received the dividends down to his decease. It was held, that neither his son nor his wife (who survived him) were entitled to the stock, but that it formed part of his assets.<sup>8</sup>

If, after a purchase of property by a parent or by a husband in the name of a child or wife, the purchaser devises or bequeaths it,<sup>9</sup> or leases it,<sup>10</sup> the prima facie presumption of advancement will not be rebutted.

It will be convenient in this place to consider what is known as a benami transaction,—that is to say, the practice of putting property into a false name. However objectionable the system may be, it is legal and in common use.<sup>1</sup>

“The Law of Benami,” says Mr. Mayne,<sup>2</sup> “is in no sense a branch of Hindu law. It is merely a deduction from the well-known principle of equity, that where there is a purchase by A in the name of B, there is a resulting trust of the whole to A ; and where there is a voluntary conveyance by A to B, and no trust is declared, or only a trust as to part, that there is a similar trust in favour of the grantor as to the whole or as to the residue, unless it can be made out that an actual gift was intended.

“In the English Courts an exception is made to this rule, where the person in whose name the conveyance is taken or made is a child of the real owner, when the transaction LECTURE IV. is presumed to have been made by way of advancement to him. But this exception has not been admitted in India. There the rule is well established that in all cases of asserted benami the true criterion is to ascertain from whose funds the purchase-money proceeded. Whether the nominal owner be a child or a stranger, a purchase made with the money of another is prima facie assumed to be made for the benefit of that other,"<sup>1</sup> whether a daughter or a son.

"The wives and mothers of the members of a joint undivided Hindu family, so long as they continue to live in the family, and are supported out of its income, are just as much members of that family as their husbands and sons; and as unity of possession is one of the essential characteristics of a joint undivided Hindu family, no difference in the nature of the interests possessed by the different members thereof can affect the presumption with which we have to deal in this case. So far as the ordinary and usual course of things is concerned, the practice of making benami purchases in the names of female members of joint undivided Hindu families is just as much rife in this country as that of making such purchases in the names of male members and . . . the presumption against such acquisition is no less strong in the former case than in the latter."<sup>2</sup>

Burden of proof.

The burden of proof lies on the party in whose name the property was purchased, to prove that he was solely entitled to the legal and beneficial interest in such purchased estate.<sup>3</sup> But although the habit of holding land benami is inveterate in India, that does not justify the Courts in making every presumption against apparent ownership.<sup>4</sup>

Strangers.

If the person in whose name the purchase is effected, is a stranger in blood or only a distant relative, he will be undoubtedly prima facie a trustee; and if he desires to contend that the prima facie character of the transaction was not its real character, the burthen is on him. In Gopeekrist Gosain v. Gungapersaud Gosain,<sup>1</sup> the purchase was made in the name of an only son, and it was argued that this circumstance changed the presumption, and that what would be the presumption in the case of a stranger does not exist between father and son; that the presumption is advancement, and that, therefore, the burden of proof was shifted. But the Judicial Committee held, that there was no authority in Indian law, no distinct case or dictum establishing or recognizing such a principle or such a rule. "It is clear," said Knight Bruce, L. J.,<sup>2</sup> "that in the case of a stranger the presumption is in favour of its being a benami transaction, that is a trust; but it is clear also that in this country, where the person in whose name the purchase is made is one for whom the party making the purchase was under an obligation to provide, the case is different; and it is said that that ought to be deemed the law of India also, not because it is the law of England, but because it is founded on reason and the fitness of things, if I may use the expression, or natural justice, that on such grounds it ought to be considered the law of India. Now, their Lordships are not satisfied that this view of the rule is accurate, and that it is not one merely proprii juris. Probable as it may be, that a man may wish to provide for his son to a certain extent, and though it may be his duty to do so, yet there are other considerations belonging to the subject; among others, a man may object to making his child independent of him in his lifetime, placing him in such a position as to enable him to leave his father's house and to die, leaving infant heirs, thus putting the property out of the control of the father. Various reasons may be urged against the abstract propriety of the English rule. It is merely one of positive law, and not required by any rule of natural justice to be incorporated in any system of laws, recognizing a purchase by one man in the name of another to be for the benefit of the real purchaser. Their Lordships, therefore, are not prepared to act against the general rule, even in the absence of peculiar circumstances; but in India there is what would make it particularly objectionable, namely, the impropriety or immorality of LECTURE IV. making an unequal division of property among children. . . . Their Lordships are, therefore, satisfied that, according to the law by which this case must be governed, the presumption in favour of its being a benami transaction is different from that which would have existed by the law of England."

Benami transactions among Mahomedans.

In so far as the practice of holding and buying lands in the name of another exists, that practice exists in India as much among Mahomedans as among Hindus; and the judgment in Gopeekrist Gosain v. Gungapersaud Gosain<sup>1</sup> and the cases therein referred to are, at all events, authority for the propositions that the criterion of these cases in India is to consider from what source the purchase-money comes; that the presumption is, that a purchase made with the money of A, in the name of B, is for the benefit of A; and that, from the purchase by a father, whether Mahomedan or Hindu, in the name of his son, you are not at liberty to draw the presumption which the English law would draw, of an advancement in favour of that son.<sup>2</sup> Although a purchase by a Mahomedan with his own money of an estate in the name of his son, raises a presumption of the son's name being used benami for his father, proof that the father's object was to affect the ordinary rule of succession as from him to that property is sufficient to give, as respects strangers, a title to the son independent of, and adverse to, the father.<sup>3</sup>

Assent of benamidar unnecessary.

The knowledge and assent of the person in whose name the purchase is made is immaterial; in the greater number of instances of benami purchases they are made in the names of persons ignorant at the time of their being so made.<sup>4</sup>

Disputing landlord's title.

As a general rule, a tenant cannot dispute his landlord's title.<sup>5</sup> The rule is founded upon the doctrine of estoppel, which is, as Lord Coke says, "a curious and excellent sort of learning." But it has been decided that the doctrine of estoppel does not apply to benami transactions, and that in this country a lessee may deny that the person in whose favour he has executed a lease was the real lessor, and beneficially entitled to the rent, and that he may prove by parol evidence that the person who granted the lease was only a benamidar for a third party. In Donzelle v. Kedarnath Chuckerbutty,<sup>1</sup> Paul, J., said: "In England, where the usage denoted by benami transactions is wholly unknown, it is supposed, and therefore assumed, that all deeds and conveyances truly represent the titles of parties set forth in them. Deeds are called solemn instruments; they are executed after considerable deliberation, and under the guidance, and with the advice, of able legal advisers. In England, and in fact wherever the English law prevails, and English institutions exist, it is right to suppose that what is stated in deeds and other similar documents represents the true state of things, and consequently, parties should not be allowed afterwards to question the truth of what has been deliberately stated. But in this country, it being well known that documents are neither so drawn nor executed as in England, and it being equally well known that persons make statements wholly regardless of the truth for present and ulterior purposes, it would be unsafe and unjust to hold parties strictly to statements made by them in deeds and other documents, and to apply the technical doctrine of estoppel in the manner in which that doctrine is applied in cases governed by English law."

The Courts look with jealousy on benami transactions, and a person who claims under such a title must prove his case strictly, and he can only recover on the strength of the case he asserts; mere inferences will not be sufficient to induce the Court to take away property from the person in whose name it is held.<sup>3</sup>

may be in the evidence circumstances which may excite suspicion, and doubt may be entertained with regard to the truth of the case made, it is essential to take care that the decision of the Court rests, not upon suspicion, but upon legal grounds, established by legal testimony.<sup>2</sup> If it is once established that a transaction is benami, the fact that the deeds and proceedings bear the benamidar's name, is perfectly consistent with the benami case, and is of no essential weight on the one side or the other in considering who is the principal.<sup>3</sup> It is not necessary that the nature of the transaction should be proved by writing, but oral evidence is admissible.<sup>4</sup> The persons who seek to prove that a transaction was benami, must prove the payment of the purchase-money; and if they do so, any subsequent acts done in the name of the nominal owner, will be explained by reference to the original transaction; whereas if they cannot prove that payment, their case must necessarily fail.<sup>5</sup>

The real owner of property, who is actually in possession, may plead in answer to a suit for redemption by a certified purchaser under s. 317 of the Civil Procedure Code, that the purchase was made benami by the plaintiff on his behalf. This section corresponds with s. 260 of Act VIII of 1859, and it was decided by the Privy Council that that section should be construed strictly and literally; that it was applicable only to a suit brought against the certified purchaser to assert the benami title against him; that the Statute did not make benami purchases illegal; and that the real owner for whom the purchase was made, if in possession, and if that possession had been honestly obtained, might defend a suit brought by the holder of the certificate, and show that he was the apparent owner only and a mere trustee.<sup>6</sup>

The provisions of s. 260 of Act VIII of 1859 apply to ordinary benami purchases at execution-sales, but do not affect purchases of property by one member of a Hindu family in his own name, but with the joint funds. Those provisions, say the Privy Council, "were designed to check the practice of making what are known as benami purchases at execution-sales, i.e., transactions in which A secretly purchases on his own account in the name of B. Their Lordships think that they cannot be taken to affect the rights of members of a joint Hindu family, who by operation of law, and not by virtue of any private agreement or understanding, are entitled to treat as part of their common property an acquisition howsoever made by a member of a family in his sole name, if made by the use of the family funds."<sup>1</sup>

A purchase at a sale for arrears of revenue made by a managing member of a joint Hindu family in his own name, is not affected by the 21st section of Act I of 1845, which provides that "any suit brought to oust the certified purchaser as aforesaid on the ground that the purchase was made on behalf of another person not the certified purchaser, though by agreement the name of the certified purchaser was used, shall be dismissed with costs;" and notwithstanding anything contained in that section, the members of the joint family may sue to enforce rights acquired by them under such a purchase as against the managing member, though he is the sole certified purchaser.<sup>2</sup>

Purchase
at sale for arrears of revenue.

If property is purchased in the name of a benamidar, and all the indicia of ownership are placed in his hands, and the benamidar sells to a purchaser for valuable consideration, the true owner can only get rid of the effect of the alienation by showing that it was made without his own acquiescence, and that the purchaser took with notice of that fact. If the purchaser bought in good faith, and without notice, he acquires a good title as against the true owner and his heirs, or any subsequent purchaser from them.<sup>3</sup>

Purchaser with notice.

If a purchaser of an estate at its full value takes with notice of a trust, he is bound to the same extent and in the same manner as the person of whom he purchased, for, knowing another's right to the property, he throws away his money voluntarily and of his own free will.<sup>2</sup> Notice is either actual or constructive. What is sufficient to put a purchaser upon inquiry is good notice,—that is, where a man has sufficient information to lead him to a fact, he shall be deemed cognizant of it. It is sufficient to charge a man with knowledge that he had that before him, which, if he had used due diligence, would have afforded the knowledge he desires.<sup>3</sup> And where there is a person in possession of the estate other than the nominal owner, the person in whose name the title-deed is, the purchaser is bound to enquire what is the nature of his possession. If he does not think fit to do so, he takes subject to the rights of the person in possession.<sup>4</sup>

Real owner may sue benamidar.

The real owner of property may sue the benamidar, either to declare his title to the property, or to recover possession of it, and may prove the benami nature of the transaction.<sup>5</sup> Thus where a portion of a taluq, which was confiscated by Government, really belonged to an innocent person who had allowed her property to remain in the name of the taluqdar, she was allowed to sue the Government and the taluqdar to recover the confiscated property, the Privy Council saying “the decree of confiscation against her trustee could on no principle of law, equity, or good conscience, be made to affect her, and certainly not to justify a sentence which, in effect, made her the sufferer for his offence.”<sup>6</sup> of a trustee may prove the benami nature of the transaction in a suit by the trustee to obtain possession of the property.<sup>1</sup> LECTURE

IV.

Creditors may enforce their claims against the property of their debtor held for him benami.<sup>2</sup> Thus it has been held, that a conveyance to female members of a Hindu family, the father continuing in absolute and uncontrolled possession during his life, and his son entering into possession after his death, could not exclude the claim of the son's creditors.<sup>3</sup> Suit by creditors
benamidar.

In many cases the object of the benami transaction is avowedly to defraud creditors, and against them it is, as we have seen,<sup>4</sup> void.<sup>5</sup> But as between the true owner and the benamidar the question arises, whether the owner can sue for the restitution of the property, alleging that the sale was fraudulent, or can set up the defence of his own fraud in an action by the benamidar. Formerly it was considered that no title could be founded upon fraud, and that if a man chose to convey his property to another admittedly for the purpose of deceiving the public, defrauding his creditors, and avoiding the ends of justice, he disentitled himself to any relief,<sup>6</sup> even though no person had been defrauded.<sup>7</sup> And the Courts refused to recognize any distinction in favour of an ignorant female.<sup>8</sup> Transaction their property for fraudulent purposes, such as defeating their creditors, that they are entering on a dangerous course, and that they must not expect the assistance of the Courts to extricate themselves from the difficulties in which their own improbity has placed them.”<sup>1</sup>

So the Courts refused to allow a defendant to plead, that a deed which was admittedly executed by him, was executed for the purpose of defrauding his creditors, on the ground that, though a deed may be avoided on the ground of fraud, the objection must come from a person neither party nor privy to it, and that no man can allege his own fraud to invalidate his own deed.<sup>2</sup> And the principle was applied equally to persons claiming through the author of the fraud.<sup>3</sup>

But in the later cases these principles have not been followed, and the original owner of property has been allowed to plead that the transaction was fraudulent, the reason being, that the real rights of the parties are to be ascertained, and if the plea were disallowed, the Courts would assist the benamidar to obtain property by means of fraud. Thus, in a suit brought by the plaintiff for registration of her name in the place of a person from whom she said she had purchased the property, one of the defendants contended that the plaintiff's vendors had purchased the property benami for her (the defendant), and that she had been in possession of it from the date of her purchase. It appeared that there had been no consideration for the sale to the plaintiff, and that it had been executed by the defendant's husband for the purpose of defrauding his creditors. In a previous suit the defendant had stated that the plaintiff's vendors were really the purchasers of the property. It was held that she was not estopped by this statement from now showing the real truth of the transaction. “In many of these cases,” said Couch, C.J., “the object of a benami transaction is to obtain what may be called a shield against a creditor; but notwithstanding this, the parties are not precluded from showing that it was not intended that the property should pass by the instrument creating the benami, and that in truth it still remained in the person who professed to part with it. . . . Although, no doubt, it is improper that transactions of this kind should be entered into for the purpose of defeating creditors, yet the real nature of the transaction is what is to be discovered, the real rights of the parties. If the Courts were to hold that persons were concluded under such circumstances, they would be assisting in a fraud, for they would be giving an estate to a person when it was never intended that he should have it."<sup>1</sup>

A suit will lie in which the plaintiff does not sue to render void an act done by him in fraud, or in other terms, to be relieved from the effect of his own fraudulent act, but simply sues to have an act legal in itself enforced, though done with the motive of keeping property out of the reach of his creditors.<sup>2</sup>

The last kind of trust with which we have to deal is that known as a constructive trust. A constructive trust is one which the Court elicits by a construction put upon certain acts of parties. Such a trust is raised wherever a person clothed with a fiduciary character, as for instance, a factor,<sup>3</sup> agent,<sup>4</sup> or partner,<sup>5</sup> gains some personal advantage, by availing himself of his situation as trustee; for, as it is impossible that a trustee should be allowed to make a profit by his office, it follows that so soon as the advantage in question is shown to have been acquired through the medium of a trust, the trustee will be decreed to hold for the benefit of his cestui que trust.<sup>6</sup>

Constructive trusts.

A common instance of a constructive trust is, where a trustee of leasehold property renews the lease in his

IV. v. Sandford.<sup>1</sup> There the lessor refused to renew the lease — for an infant, and the trustee then got a lease made to himself. Lord King, however, declared that the trustee must hold the renewed lease for the infant, though no fraud was alleged, saying: "This may seem hard, that the trustee is the only person of all mankind who might not have the lease; but it is very proper that rule should be strictly pursued, and not in the least relaxed."

An executor de son tort cannot renew a lease in his own name.<sup>2</sup> Where the renewed lease comprises lands not included in the former lease, the trust will not attach to such lands.<sup>3</sup>

Principle of rule.

The principle upon which trustees and executors are not allowed to take renewals of leases of trust-property to themselves is, that it is for the public good that persons in fiduciary positions shall not be allowed to reap any benefit from the positions which they hold.<sup>4</sup>

Instances.

If a person who has a limited interest in a lease renews it in his own name, he can only hold it as a trustee for the other persons interested;<sup>5</sup> and if a settlor creates a trust of a leasehold interest, he cannot renew the lease for his own benefit.<sup>6</sup>

If a trustee, upon his representations, acquires an absolute interest in the trust-property by virtue of an Act of the Legislature, he will be a trustee of the interest he has acquired.<sup>7</sup> Where several persons are jointly interested in a lease, one of them cannot obtain a renewal to himself,<sup>8</sup> as for instance, in the case of one of several partners obtaining a renewal of the lease of the partnership premises.<sup>9</sup>

A mortgagee who renews a lease must hold it for the benefit of the mortgagor.<sup>1</sup> A trustee cannot, by fraudulently incurring a forfeiture of the lease of the trust-property, obtain a renewal to himself.<sup>2</sup> So a tenant who fraudulently fails to pay Government revenue, in consequence of which the estate is sold, and becomes the purchaser, will be declared a trustee of the land for the lessor.<sup>3</sup> Where a trustee who has a right to obtain a renewal sells the right, the trust will attach upon the purchase-money in his hands.<sup>4</sup>

The trustee will have to assign the renewed lease free from all incumbrances, except an under-lease made bond fide at the best rent,<sup>5</sup> and he must account for mesne rents and profits,<sup>6</sup> even though the lease has expired.<sup>7</sup> The lessor will be entitled to be indemnified against covenants entered into upon the renewal, to his costs,<sup>8</sup> and to money laid out upon lasting improvements.<sup>9</sup> If the trustee has parted with his interest in the renewed lease to a volunteer,<sup>10</sup> or to a purchaser with notice,<sup>11</sup> the cestui que trust will, nevertheless, be entitled to the same remedies as against the trustee.<sup>12</sup>

A mere agent of a trustee will not be made to account to the cestui que trust as a constructive trustee,<sup>13</sup> unless he becomes a party to the breach of trust, when he will be liable to the extent of his participation.<sup>14</sup>

ignorance or the neglect of his duty, he will be a constructive trustee for the benefit of the person who would have benefited, if the adviser had done his duty. "Whether," said Lord Eldon,<sup>1</sup> "you meant fraud or not, you who have been wanting in what I conceive to be the duty of an attorney, if it happens that you get an advantage by that neglect, you shall not hold that advantage, but you shall be a trustee of the property for the benefit of that person who would have remained entitled to it, if you had known what you ought as an attorney to have known; and not knowing it, because you ought to have known it, you shall not take advantage of your own ignorance. It is too dangerous to mankind, that those who are bound to advise, and who being bound to advise ought to be able to give sound and sufficient advice, it is too dangerous to allow that they shall ever take advantage of their own ignorance—of their own professional ignorance—to the prejudice of others."<sup>2</sup>

When a barrister prepared a will for a friend, of which he was appointed executor, and in that capacity became entitled to the personal estate of the testator, he was decreed to hold it as a trustee for the next-of-kin. "The testator's intention," said Lord Chancellor Hart, "was not directed to his personal estate, and he thought he was only disposing of his real estate, it became the bounden duty of the defendant to have informed him, that if he made no disposition of his personal estate, the law, in consequence of his being the executor, would entitle him to retain it for his own benefit. He was bound to inquire of the testator, in plain and distinct terms, whether it was his will that the defendant should so retain the personal estate for his own benefit. . . . The defendant has stated that he did not know the rule of law which gives to an executor the undisposed of residue. Be it so; but in the administration of justice, what ought to result from that ignorance? The testator relied on the defendant's knowledge of law as well as on his integrity. Will the avowal of ignorance of the law in the legal adviser justify the disinheriting of the testator's relations in favour of that adviser."<sup>3</sup>

Courts of equity exercise jurisdiction to set aside voluntary gifts made to persons standing in a fiduciary relation to the donor. The relief is granted upon the principle of public policy, and applies to all the variety of relations in which dominion may be exercised by one person over another.<sup>1</sup> For instance, if a legal, medical, or spiritual adviser by availing himself, of his situation as such adviser, gains some pecuniary advantage from the person whom he advises, he will be treated as a trustee.<sup>2</sup>

IV.

Gifts to persons in fiduciary capacity.

A voluntary gift to a person who does not stand in any fiduciary or confidential position towards the donor, will not be set aside if there was no fraud, surprise, or undue influence, and the donor acted of his own free will, however improvident the gift may be. In Villiers v. Beaumont<sup>3</sup> Lord Nottingham said, that if a man will improvidently bind himself up by a voluntary deed, and not reserve liberty to himself by a power of revocation, the Court will not loose the fetters he hath put upon himself, but he must lie down under his own folly; for if the Court gave relief in such a case, it would establish the proposition that a man can make no voluntary disposition of his estate, but by his will only, which would be absurd. Prima facie such a gift is good, but it will be set aside if the donor can prove fraud, surprise, or undue influence.<sup>4</sup>

gift where no fiduciary relation when set
aside.

Where the fiduciary relation exists, the onus of proving that the transaction is righteous is on the donee.<sup>5</sup> The Evidence Act provides (s. 111) that where there is a question as to the good faith of a transaction between parties, one of whom stands to the other in a position of active confidence, the burden of proving the good faith of the transaction is on the party who is in a position of active confidence. And the following illustrations are given:—(a) “The good faith of a sale by a client to an attorney is in question in a suit brought by the client. The burden of proving the good faith of the transaction is on the attorney; (b) the good faith of a sale by a son just come of age to his father is in question in a suit brought by the son. The burden of proving the good faith of the transaction is on the father."

Where the fiduciary relation does not exist, a person who takes a benefit under a voluntary gift which is not subject to a power of revocation, has thrown upon him the burden of proving that the gift was meant by the donor to be irrevocable. A gift not meant to be irrevocable, but not subject to a power of revocation, may be set aside at the instance of the donor.<sup>1</sup> Even where the matter appears to rest upon a good consideration, as where there is a sale, the Court will inquire into the circumstances, with a view to ascertain whether undue influence was exercised or not.<sup>2</sup>

If the donee is a person who exercises influence by means of his spiritual ascendancy over the donor, the gift will be set aside.<sup>3</sup>

The Court looks with suspicion upon gifts made by a child to a parent shortly after attaining majority, and such gifts will be set aside if there is any appearance of undue influence having been exercised by the parent. Where a father who had advanced a son during his minority took a bond from the son on his attaining majority for a much greater amount than the sums advanced, the son being without means, the transaction was set aside; Lord Northington saying:—"If the obligor gives a voluntary bond, and never complains of any imposition or hardship in obtaining it, the Court will only postpone it to creditors, and not set it aside for other volunteers. Nay, if it be given with advice and deliberation, this Court will not set it aside for the obligor. But if a man gives a voluntary bond for more than he is able to pay, the transaction speaks weakness on the one side and a sort of imposition on the other."<sup>4</sup> The Court will not interfere where the transaction is fair and reasonable, and no undue influence has been exercised.<sup>5</sup> The principles upon which the Court acts in transactions of this nature were thus stated by Lord Langdale in Archer v. Hudson.<sup>6</sup> "Nobody has ever asserted that there

LECTURE IV. Court as to guardians is extremely strict, and in some cases does infer some hardship; as where there has been a great deal of trouble, and he has acted fairly and honestly, that yet he shall have no allowance; but the Court has established that on great utility, and on necessity, and on this principle of humanity, that it is a debt of humanity that one man owes to another, as every man is liable to be in the same circumstances."<sup>1</sup> If, however, the relation of guardian and ward has been completely determined, and the presumption of undue influence has been successfully rebutted, a gift from the ward will be allowed to hold good.<sup>2</sup>

legal adviser.

A legal adviser, whether counsel, attorney, or vakeel, can take no benefit from his client while he is acting for him in a professional capacity, beyond his regular professional charges. In order to support a gift from a legal adviser to his client, it must appear that the relation has been dissolved.<sup>3</sup> If it is endeavoured to make the gift good, by expressing that valuable consideration has been given by the legal adviser, evidence will be admissible to prove that the consideration is fictitious.<sup>4</sup>

If there is no suit pending, and no undue influence has been exercised by the legal adviser, a gift to him may be supported,<sup>5</sup> and he may take a benefit under a will if it can be proved that the testator acted freely.<sup>6</sup>

In the class of cases we have just considered, undue influence is presumed to have been exerted until the contrary is proved, and the person benefited is bound to show that all the terms and conditions of the contract are fair, adequate, and reasonable.<sup>7</sup>

rule.

The rule extends to all the relations in which dominion may be exercised by one person over another, even though no actual fiduciary relationship in the strictest sense of the words exists. Thus gifts by patients to medical attendants,<sup>1</sup> by a younger sister to an elder,<sup>2</sup> by a woman to her intended husband,<sup>3</sup> and gifts obtained by operating on the fears of another<sup>4</sup> have been set aside.

A voluntary deed, which contains no power of revocation, executed in the expectation of immediate death, will be set aside, even though there has been no undue influence, if the settlor did not intend that it should be operative in case he recovered.<sup>5</sup>

The Court has power to relieve against strangers. "Whoever," said Wilmott, C.J.,<sup>6</sup> "receives the gift, must take it tainted and infected with the undue influence and imposition of the person procuring the gift; his partitioning and cantoning it out among his relations and friends will not purify the gift, and protect it against the equity of the person imposed upon. Let the hand receiving it be ever so chaste, yet, if it comes through a polluted channel, the obligation of restitution will follow it." But the Court will not interfere as against a bond fide purchaser without notice.<sup>7</sup>

The principles upon which Courts of Equity act in setting aside voluntary gifts to persons standing in a fiduciary relation to the donor were thus stated by Lord Brougham in Hunter v. Atkins:<sup>8</sup> "There are certain relations known to the law as attorney, guardian, trustee; if a person standing in these relations to client, ward, or cestui que trust, takes a gift or makes a bargain, the proof lies upon him that he has dealt with the other party, the client, ward, &c., exactly as a stranger would have done, taking no advantage of his influence or knowledge, putting the other party on his guard, bringing everything to his knowledge which he himself knew. In short, the rule rightly considered is, that the person standing in such relation must, before he can take a gift, or even enter into a transaction, place himself exactly in the same position as a stranger

LECTURE IV. — would have been in, so that he may gain no advantage whatever from his relation to the other party beyond what may be the natural and unavoidable consequence of kindness arising out of that relation. A client, for example, may naturally entertain a kindly feeling towards an attorney or solicitor by whose assistance he has long benefited; and he may fairly and wisely desire to benefit him by a gift, or, without such an intention being the predominating motive, he may wish to give him the advantage of a sale or a lease. No law that is tolerable among civilized men—men who have the benefits of civility without the evils of excessive refinement and overdone subtlety—can ever forbid such a transaction, provided the client be of mature age and of sound mind, and there be nothing to show that deception was practised, or that the attorney or solicitor availed himself of his situation to withhold any knowledge, or exercise any influence hurtful to others and advantageous to himself. In a word, standing in the relation in which he stands to the other party, the proof lies upon him (whereas in the case of a stranger, it would lie on those who opposed him) to show that he has cut off, as it were, the connection which bound him to the party giving or contracting, and that nothing has happened which might not have happened had no such connection subsisted. . . . The rule, I think, cannot be laid down much more precisely than I have stated it, that where the known and defined relation of attorney and client, guardian and ward, trustee and cestui que trust, exists, the conduct of the party benefited must be such as to sever the connection, and to place him in the same circumstances in which a mere stranger would have stood, giving him no advantage, save only whatever kindness or favour may have arisen out of the connection; and that where the only relation between the parties is that of friendly habits, or habitual reliance on advice and assistance, accompanied with partial employment in doing some sort of business, care must be taken that no undue advantage shall be made of the influence thus acquired. The limits of natural and often unavoidable kindness with its effects, and of undue influence exercised or unfair advantage taken, cannot be more rigorously defined. Nor is it, perhaps, advisable that any strict rule should be laid down—any precise line drawn. If it were stated that certain acts should be the only tests of undue influence, or that certain things should be required in order to rebut the presumption of it, such as the calling in a third person, how easy would it be for cunning men to avoid the one, or protect themselves by means of the other, and so place their misdeeds beyond the denunciations of the law, and secure the fruits of them out of its reach! If any one should say that a rule is thus recognized, which from its vagueness cannot be obeyed, because it cannot well be discerned, the answer is at hand. All men have the interpreter of it within their own breasts; they know the extent of their influence, and are conscious whether or not they have taken advantage of it in a way which they would feel indignant that others similarly circumstanced should do with regard to themselves.

The circumstances of each case, therefore, are to be carefully examined and weighed, the general rule being of a kind necessarily so little capable of exact definition; and on the result of the inquiry, we are to say—Has or has not an undue influence been exerted—an undue advantage taken?"

It has been held that a fictitious consideration inserted in the deed is a badge of fraud.<sup>1</sup> So, where there has been concealment from those who ought naturally to have been made acquainted with the transaction.<sup>2</sup> But is not necessary that there should have been such acts as these in order to enable the Court to interfere. The Court will inquire whether the grantor not only executed the deed voluntarily, but also whether he had a full knowledge of the consequences of his act.<sup>3</sup> The mere fact that the deed was read over to him is not sufficient, it must be proved that he understood its nature.<sup>4</sup> And the case will be stronger against the donee when the deed was not prepared under the donor's instructions and was not read over to him.<sup>5</sup> Where persons stand in a fiduciary relation to each other, the party benefited must be able to show that the donor had competent and independent advice, and the capacity of the donor is of importance.<sup>6</sup>

set aside.

When undue influence is proved, the deed may be set aside<sup>1</sup> at the instance of the donor or grantor, or after his death, of his representatives or devisees.<sup>1</sup> If the donor or settlor himself requires the aid of the Court to transfer a fund in Court, which is the subject of the settlement, to the donee, the Court cannot refuse its assistance, whether the settlement may or may not, be impeachable upon the ground of undue influence.<sup>2</sup>

cence.

If the subject-matter of the gift can be traced into the possession of third persons, it will be affected by the fraud or undue influence which attached to the original transaction.<sup>3</sup>

The cestui que trust, if competent to contract, must seek his remedies within a reasonable time, otherwise he may be barred by acquiescence.<sup>4</sup>

tion and acquies-
cence.

Although the evidence may show the existence of undue influence at the time of the settlement or gift, it will not be set aside, if the settlor has, during a course of years and in several transactions, acted upon it and treated it as in all respects valid.<sup>5</sup> But acquiescence must be shown to be after the discovery of the right to impeach a transaction,<sup>6</sup> in which case it will preclude the parties acquiescing from raising objections afterwards.<sup>7</sup> And where a client dealing with his solicitor executes a voidable instrument, and afterwards chooses to confirm it by will, the confirmation will be effectual.<sup>8</sup> In order that acquiescence or confirmation may be valid, there must be no continuing influence, as otherwise there would be no free agency on which to found acquiescence.<sup>9</sup> And where a confidential and fiduciary relation is shown to exist, its continuance will be presumed, unless there is direct evidence of its termination.<sup>10</sup>

Trustees are bound to protect the interests of their cestuis que trustent, and are justified, when they are called upon to transfer a fund pursuant to an arrangement between persons standing in a fiduciary relation to one another, in taking every precaution to ascertain that no fraud or undue influence has been exercised by the person to whom the fund is to be transferred. If, however, they act capriciously, or, having ascertained that the transaction is not one which the Court would set aside, they persist in refusing to transfer, and so render a suit necessary, they will be liable to pay costs.<sup>2</sup>

ance of
trust.

A TRUSTEE may accept the trust by signing the trust-deed when there is one,<sup>1</sup> or, in the case of a will, by express declaration of his assent. Prima facie he is assumed to assent to a devise,<sup>2</sup> and his acceptance may be implied from his neglect to disclaim for a long time, such as twenty years,<sup>3</sup> even though he has not acted in the trust.<sup>4</sup> And acceptance may be implied from acts of a trustee in relation to the trust-estate.<sup>5</sup> It is difficult to lay down any general rule as to what acts of a trustee will amount to acceptance. An executor who takes out probate of the will of his testator, thereby accepts the office, and becomes responsible for any loss incurred by the acts of his co-executor;<sup>6</sup> he cannot escape responsibility on the ground that he has taken no active part in the administration of the estate.<sup>1</sup> So if he interferes with the assets of the testator, he will be liable even though he does not take out probate.<sup>2</sup> Thus, where a co-executor who had not proved, after the death of the executor who had proved, gave a power-of-attorney to sell a small part of the testator's assets, which was not acted upon, and had not further intermeddled, it was held that he had accepted the office.<sup>3</sup>

So the joining in an assignment of a lease, for the purpose of passing the legal estate, has been considered to be of itself sufficient evidence that the executor had accepted and acted in the trusts of the will:<sup>4</sup> and an executor will be liable if he exercises acts of authority or ownership over the testator's estate.<sup>5</sup>

If executors are also appointed trustees, taking out probate amounts to an acceptance of the trusteeship as well as of the executorship.<sup>6</sup>

Trustees
also executors.

If a trustee under a will does not expressly accept, but receives the rents and profits of the trust-property, he cannot escape from liability to account, on the ground that he acted merely as agent or factor.<sup>7</sup> In Lowry v. Fulton<sup>8</sup> a trustee who acted as agent, and who had not proved, was held not to have accepted the trust; but that was a peculiar case, and cannot be considered as an authority against the general rule.<sup>9</sup>

agent.

According to English law, an executor who takes probate of the will of an executor, becomes executor of the will of the first testator, and cannot renounce probate of the first will, and take probate of the second.<sup>10</sup>

V.Renunciation of probate.

The renunciation of probate by a person named as executor and trustee, is not in itself a disclaimer of the trust, but it is one circumstance of evidence, and if there be no proof of his ever having acted, the Court, after a long lapse of time, as sixty years, will presume a disclaimer.<sup>1</sup> Where real and personal estate was devised and bequeathed to B, upon trust, for sale and conversion, and upon further trusts for the heir-at-law of the testator absolutely, and B renounced probate, and died three years afterwards without having disclaimed the trusts, it was held, that he must be taken to have intended to disclaim them when he renounced probate.<sup>2</sup>

Where a person named as a trustee refused to act, but only took the trust-deed into his possession for safe custody, until some one could be found to undertake the trust, it was held, that there was not enough to charge him.<sup>3</sup>

acceptance.

If the instrument of trust contains distinct and separate trusts, and a trustee is appointed to execute all the trusts, he cannot accept some and disclaim the others, but must accept all or disclaim all.<sup>4</sup>

Although the general rule is, that if a trustee acts in the trust, or intermeddles with the trust-property, he will be held to have accepted the trust, yet he may show that acts which apparently show an acceptance are referrible to some other ground.<sup>5</sup> But he cannot so act with reference to a trust-fund as to leave himself at liberty to say afterwards, either that he did, or did not, act as trustee.<sup>6</sup> Parol evidence is admissible upon the question of acceptance or non-acceptance of the trust.<sup>7</sup>

deed as to state of
trust.

If the instrument creating the trust contains recitals specifying the trust-property, the trustees should, as a matter of precaution, ascertain that the recitals are correct, for otherwise they may be held liable for the property mentioned. But they will not be estopped from averring against, or offering evidence to controvert, a recital in the deeds contrary to the fact, which has been introduced into the deed by mistake of fact, and not through their own fraud or deception.<sup>1</sup> In Fenwick v. Greenwell<sup>2</sup> Lord Langdale said: "A doubt has been raised as to whether Miss Cuthbertson possessed the £5,000 stock at the time of the marriage. Now I cannot say, that the trustees are bound by the recital of that fact contained in the deed; we have had so many instances of parties representing that they were entitled to particular property, and which representation has afterwards turned out to be wholly untrue, that it would be unjust and dangerous to bind third parties by such representations, and I am not aware that it has ever been held, that trustees are bound by the representations of parties about to be married of the state of their property. I do not, therefore, accede to the argument that the recital alone binds the trustees."<sup>3</sup>

A person may become a trustee in fact though not of right, and if he becomes possessed of a trust fund with notice of the trust, he will be bound by it.<sup>4</sup> The representatives of a deceased trustee will incur personal liability by paying away the residue of their testator's estate, if afterwards a debt is discovered to which it is liable, though they had no notice.<sup>5</sup> And if property has been distributed among the legatees of a person who has committed a breach of trust, though in ignorance of this fact, those who are damnified by the breach of trust may recover from the legatees.<sup>6</sup>

fact.

When executors have made an assignment on the appointment of a new trustee, they lose their character of executors and become trustees only.<sup>7</sup> And an executor, to whom a legacy is given upon trust, ceases to hold it as executor, from the time he has appropriated it to the purposes of the trust.<sup>8</sup>

The liability of trustees for loss to the trust estate is the same, whether the acceptance of the trust has been express, or is implied by a Court of equity from their acts.<sup>9</sup>

LECTURE
V.

By whom trust may be created.
General
rule.

We have now to consider by whom a trust may be created. As a general rule, it may be said that every person who is competent to contract may create a trust. The Indian Contract Act provides that—

“Every person is competent to contract who is of the age of majority according to the law to which he is subject, and who is of sound mind, and is not disqualified from contracting by any law to which he is subject : ”<sup>1</sup>

And a person is said to be of sound mind for the purpose of making a contract if, at the time when he makes it,—

“He is capable of understanding it, and of forming a rational judgment as to its effect upon his interests. A person who is usually of unsound mind, but occasionally of sound mind, may make a contract when he is of sound mind. A person who is usually of sound mind, but occasionally of unsound mind, may not make a contract when he is of unsound mind.”<sup>2</sup>

The Act contains the following illustrations :—

“A sane man who is delirious from fever, or who is so drunk that he cannot understand the terms of a contract, or form a rational judgment as to its effect on his interests, cannot contract whilst such delirium or drunkenness lasts.”

The Sovereign.

The Sovereign, as to his private property, may, by Letters Patent, grant it to one person upon trust for another;<sup>3</sup> and the Government of India, as it has the power of disposing of public property, may convey such property to trustees if it think fit.

Corporations.

Corporate bodies may create trusts. They have the right to alienate the property vested in them, and in consequence may vest it in a trustee.<sup>4</sup> This right has been taken away in England by the Statute of 5 and 6 Wm. IV, c. 76 ; but as no similar Statute exists in this country, I apprehend that the law as it stood before the Statute would be enforced here.

war.

Prizes of war vest in the sovereign, and are commonly, by the Royal Warrant, granted to trustees, upon trust to distribute in a prescribed mode among the captors ; but an instrument of this kind is held not to vest an interest in the cestuis que trustent, which they can enforce in equity, but it may be at any time revoked or varied at the pleasure of the sovereign before the general distribution.<sup>1</sup>

An infant, as we have seen, cannot contract, and therefore cannot create a trust by any declaration during minority, nor can he create a trust by will.<sup>2</sup>

Married women subject to the Indian Succession Act (X of 1865) may create trusts. Section 4 of the Act provides that no person shall by marriage acquire any interest in the property of the person whom he or she marries, nor become incapable of doing any act in respect of his or her own property which he or she could have done if unmarried. This section, so far as regards property, abolishes, by implication, the doctrine of unity of persons between husband and wife.<sup>3</sup> So far as property is concerned, therefore, the wife has as much control over it as if she were unmarried. This section does not apply to Hindus, Mahomedans, Buddhists, Sikhs, or Jains.<sup>4</sup> By the Married Women's Property Act (III of 1874), s. 4—

"The wages and earnings of any married woman acquired or gained by her, after the passing of the Act, in any employment, occupation, or trade carried on by her, and not by her husband, and also any money or other property so acquired by her through the exercise of any literary, artistic, or scientific skill, and all savings from, and investments of, such wages, earnings, and property, shall be deemed to be her separate property, and her receipts alone shall be good discharges for such wages, earnings, and property."

And she may, therefore, create a trust in respect of such property. This Act does not apply to Hindus, Mahomedans, Buddhists, Sikhs, or Jains.<sup>5</sup>

With regard to Hindus, a married woman may create a trust of her stridhan, or any other property which is absolutely at her own disposal, as she can devise such property.<sup>6</sup> But she cannot devise property inherited from males, since her interest in it ceases at her death,<sup>7</sup> and therefore she cannot create a trust of such property to continue after her death, though she may create a trust of her life-interest.

Alien.

According to English law, an alien might always have acquired real estate, whether freeholds or chattels, by purchases, though he could not take it by operation of law, as by descent or jure mariti; and if he purchased it, he might have held it until office found, but could not give an alienee a better title than he had himself. An alien, therefore, could only create a trust of real estate until the Crown stepped in.

As to personal estate, an alien friend might, although an alien enemy could not be the lawful owner of chattels, personal, and might exercise the ordinary rights of proprietorship over them, and consequently create a trust.

The English law relating to aliens has not been introduced into India, and aliens here may acquire property freely, and deal with it as if they were British subjects.<sup>1</sup>

Persons convicted of certain offences.

In some cases the property of persons convicted of certain offences is liable to forfeiture. In every such case the offender is incapable of acquiring any property, except for the benefit of Government, until he has undergone the punishment awarded, or the punishment to which it shall have been commuted, or until he shall have been pardoned.<sup>2</sup> Whenever any person is convicted of an offence punishable with death, the Court may adjudge that all his property, moveable and immoveable, shall be forfeited to Government; and whenever any person is convicted of any offence for which he shall be transported or sentenced to imprisonment for a term of seven years or upwards, the Court may adjudge that the rents and profits of all his moveable and immoveable estate during the period of his transportation or imprisonment shall be forfeited to Government, subject to such provision for his family and dependants as the Government may think fit to allow during such period.<sup>3</sup>

In certain cases the forfeiture of property necessarily follows conviction. Any person who wages war against the Queen, or attempts to wage such war, or abets the waging of such war, or collects men, arms, or ammunition, or otherwise prepares to wage war with the intention of either waging, or being prepared to wage, war against the Queen, forfeits all his property in addition to any other punishment to which he may be sentenced.

There is another class of offences where the forfeiture of specific property may form part of the punishment awarded. When offenders commit, or prepare to commit, depredation on the territories of any power at peace with the Queen, or receive property with the knowledge that it has been taken in waging war, or committing depredations on a power at peace with the Queen;<sup>1</sup> or if a public officer buys property which he is forbidden to buy, the specific property may be forfeited.<sup>2</sup>

No trust can, therefore, be created of property which may be forfeited if the Government chooses to exercise its rights; and of course, no trust can be created where forfeiture necessarily follows the conviction.

Although a sanad granted by the Government of India, subsequent to the proclamation of March, 1858, of an estate in Oudh, confers an absolute legal title on the grantee, such grantee may, nevertheless, by an express declaration of trust, or by an agreement to hold in trust, constitute himself a trustee of the estate for a third party.<sup>3</sup>

Aliens.

Any person may be a trustee, even an infant, or person of unsound mind, if the trust is purely passive, and does not require the exercise of prudence and discretion. For instance, a discretionary trust for sale cannot be exercised by an infant, for an infant is not a person competent to contract.<sup>7</sup> In *King v. LECTURE one of whom was an infant, and it was held, that a contract
 V. of sale entered into by these three trustees was not a — valid contract which could be specifically performed. "There can be no doubt upon the authorities from the earliest times," said Wood, V. C., "that if a man by his will gives an infant a simple power of sale without an interest, the infant may exercise it. All the decisions on the subject are referred to by Lord St. Leonards in his work on 'Powers,' and I need not discuss them minutely. They all turn on the execution of powers, and there is not a single authority upon the question whether an infant can sell an estate devised to him upon trust for sale. There is an opinion of Mr. Preston, mentioned without disapproval by Lord St. Leonards, that an infant can exercise a power, even though it be coupled with an interest; but that is very different from selling an estate vested in an infant by a devise in fee.

"It is to be observed that all the cases relied on with reference to powers, have gone upon the principle that the infant is merely the instrument by whose hands the testator or donor acts. The donor, it is said, may use any hand, however weak, to carry out his intentions. This principle fails altogether to reach the case of a devise in trust to an infant. It is not in the power of the author of a trust to confer upon an infant a capacity in himself which the law does not give him, although he may make the infant his hand, his agent, to execute his purpose. He cannot give an estate to an infant, and say that he may sell it when the law says that he cannot do so."

It is not advisable, however, to appoint an infant as trustee. The only acts which he can perform are such as are purely ministerial, and he cannot be made to account for money received by him as trustee during his minority.<sup>1</sup> Infants, however, have no privilege to cheat men;<sup>2</sup> and a Court of Equity has jurisdiction to make an infant answerable, on his attaining majority, for a fraud committed by him during his minority, though it is not easy to determine in what cases the Court will thus exert itself.<sup>3</sup>

From the great inconveniences attending the appointment of an infant as trustee, there arises a strong presumption, wherever property is given to an infant, that he is intended to take it not as trustee but beneficially.<sup>1</sup> LECTURE

V.

An alien may be a trustee of either moveable or immoveable property. In England, before the Statute 33 Vict., c. 14, an alien could not effectually be a trustee in respect of freeholds, or chattels, real, for the policy of the law would not allow an alien to sue, or be sued, to the prejudice of the Crown touching lands in any Court of law or equity; and on inquisition found, the legal estate in the property vested by forfeiture in the Crown.<sup>2</sup> But this did not apply to personal property.<sup>3</sup> In this country, as we have seen,<sup>4</sup> the English law as to aliens is not applicable: and moreover, no person is by reason of his descent or place of birth exempted in any civil proceeding from the jurisdiction of any of the Courts,<sup>5</sup> and alien enemies residing in British India with the permission of the Governor-General in Council and alien friends may sue in the Courts of British India, as if they were subjects of Her Majesty. No alien enemy residing in British India, without such permission, or residing in a foreign country, may sue in any of such Courts.<sup>6</sup> Aliens.

In England, the Sovereign may sustain the character of a trustee, so far as regards the capacity to take the estate and to execute the trusts; but great doubts have been entertained whether the subject can, by any legal process there, enforce the performance of the trust.<sup>7</sup> The Sovereign.

And it has recently been expressly decided that the Government of this country cannot be a trustee. In Kinlock v. The Secretary of State for India,<sup>8</sup> booty of war had been granted by Her Majesty by Royal Warrant to the Secretary of State for India in Council, 'in trust,' to distribute amongst the persons found entitled to share it by the decree of the Judge of the Court of Admiralty, to whom the matter had been referred by the Sovereign for that purpose, with a direction that doubts should be finally determined by the Secretary of State, unless Her Majesty should otherwise order. An action was brought against the Secretary of State by a person claiming to be entitled to share in the fund, and praying for an account. It was held, Not the

India.

LECTURE V. — that the warrant did not operate as a transfer of property or create a trust, and that the defendant, being merely the agent of the Sovereign to distribute the fund, was not liable to account to any of the parties entitled. James, L. J., said: "The Government of India is not, as it appears to me, capable of being a trustee; nor is the Secretary of State for India in Council (the name by which the Government can be sued) a person capable of being a trustee any more than the Attorney-General in this country would be, or any other person, who sued in certain cases for, or on behalf of, the Crown."

Corporations.

According to the technical rules upon which the doctrine of uses proceeded, a corporation could not have been seised to a use, for, it was said, it had no soul, and therefore no confidence could be reposed in it.<sup>1</sup> But on principles of ordinary and natural justice, a body corporate has been held to be compellable to execute a trust, thus abolishing the rule that there must be a person in whom the confidence is placed.<sup>2</sup> "Prima facie," said Lord Romilly, M. R.,<sup>3</sup> "an ordinary Municipal Corporation has full power to dispose of all its property like any private individual, and the burden of proof lies on the person alleging the contrary to establish a trust. The trust may be of two characters; it may be of a general character, or of a private and individual character. A person might leave a sum of money to a corporation, in trust, to support the children of B, and pay them the principal at twenty-one. That would be a private and particular trust, which the children could enforce against the corporation, if the corporation applied the property for its own benefit. On the other hand, a person might leave money to a corporation, in trust for the benefit of the inhabitants of a particular place, or for paving or lighting the town. That would be a public trust for the benefit of all the inhabitants, and the proper form of suit, in the event of any breach of trust, would be by an information by the Attorney-General,<sup>4</sup> at the instance of all or some of the persons interested in the matter. If there was a particular trust in favor of particular persons, and they were too numerous for all to be made parties, one or two might then sue on behalf of themselves and the other cestuis que trustent for the performance of the trust." LECTURE

There is a statutory exception to the general rule, that a corporation may be a trustee, in the case of the Presidency Banks,—that is to say, the Banks of Bengal, Madras, and Bombay. The Presidency Banks' Act (XI of 1870) provides that, except for the purpose of excluding the provisions of s. 17 (relating to the forfeiture of stocks and shares), the banks shall not be bound or affected by notice of any trust to which any stock or share may be subject in the hands of the proprietor or holder. And the law in England is similar.

A married woman may be a trustee. In England it is not advisable to appoint a married woman as trustee, owing, among other reasons, to the doctrine of unity of persons between husband and wife.<sup>1</sup> But this does not apply to persons subject to the Indian Succession Act (X of 1865),<sup>2</sup> nor is it known to Hindu or Mahomedan law. Married women.

According to English law, it is a legal presumption (possibly it may be called a legal fiction) that a married woman is subject to the influence of her husband, and therefore she cannot be allowed to execute the trust without his concurrence.<sup>3</sup>

An insolvent may be a trustee. The property of an insolvent, and such property as he may acquire before he obtains his discharge, vests in the Official Assignee,<sup>4</sup> but not estates vested in him as trustee. These are unaffected by the insolvency,<sup>5</sup> and although the trust-property may be changed, it will not vest if it can be traced, as where it exists in the shape of bills or notes,<sup>6</sup> or any other substituted form,<sup>7</sup> for the assignees of a defaulting trustee have no better right than the trustee.<sup>8</sup> But where the trust-property had become mixed with the bankrupt's general property, and could not be distinguished, it was held that the assignees would take it, and that the cestui que trust must prove.<sup>9</sup> Insolvent.

Relatives.

Number of trustees.

Disclaimer.

The possession of a trustee is not a possession with the consent of the true owner under the reputed ownership clause, s. 23 of the Insolvent Act.<sup>1</sup>

Cestuis que trustent are not, as such, incapacitated from being trustees for themselves and others, but, as a general rule, they are not altogether fit persons for the office, in consequence of the probability of a conflict between their interest and their duty.<sup>2</sup> Where the trusts are onerous, and other persons cannot be found to undertake them, the Court will appoint a cestui que trust to be a trustee.<sup>3</sup>

It is not advisable to appoint relatives to be trustees. The worst breaches of trust are committed by relatives, who are unable to resist the importunities of their cestuis que trustent when they are nearly related to them.<sup>4</sup>

An adequate number of trustees should be appointed. There are strong reasons against allowing trust property to remain in the hands of one trustee. He has the absolute control over it, and if tempted to commit a breach of trust, he can do so with less fear of detection than if there are co-trustees. When one of several trustees dies, steps should be at once taken to provide a successor. The safe rule, where money is concerned, is to appoint at least three trustees and to keep the number full.<sup>5</sup>

No one is bound to accept a trust, and therefore any person who has been appointed a trustee may, if he has not acted in the office, disclaim.<sup>6</sup> If, however, he has exercised any acts of ownership, he cannot disclaim.<sup>7</sup> "Though," said Lord Redesdale,<sup>8</sup> "a person may have agreed in the lifetime of a testator to accept the executorship, he is still at liberty to recede except so far as his feelings may forbid it; and it will be proper for him to do so, if he finds that his charge as executor is different from what he has conceived it to be when he entered into the engagement."

According to English law, the heir of a trustee cannot disclaim, the reason being that the legal estate, if the disclaimer were allowed, would vest in the Crown.<sup>1</sup> I do not know of any authority on this point as regards estates in India. But as it has been decided that the English rules of succession to immoveable property apply to the descent of estates in land held by European British subjects,<sup>2</sup> probably it would be held that the heirs of a European British subject could not disclaim. As regards other British subjects, the distinction between legal and equitable estates does not exist, and the rules of inheritance are different, and therefore it would seem that the heir of such last named subject may disclaim.

The disclaimer should be made without delay, as otherwise a question may arise as to whether there has not been an acceptance by acquiescence. This question is of course in every case one of fact to be decided from the circumstances of the case.<sup>3</sup>

The disclaimer may be by parol, but it is more prudent that it should be by writing, as there is less fear of ambiguity.<sup>4</sup> The instrument should be a disclaimer, and not a conveyance, though, if the intention to disclaim is apparent on the conveyance, that will be sufficient.<sup>5</sup> A trustee may disclaim in Court<sup>6</sup> or by his written statement.<sup>7</sup> And if notwithstanding he is continued as a party to the hearing, he will be entitled to his costs as between party and party.<sup>8</sup> And there may be conduct which amounts to a clear disclaimer.<sup>9</sup>

A trustee or executor to whom a bequest is given, may take the gift and disclaim the office,<sup>10</sup> unless acting in the office is a condition attached to the gift.<sup>11</sup>

WE have now to consider what are the duties and liabilities incurred by a trustee after he has accepted. On this point Mr. Lewin says:<sup>1</sup> "As soon as a trustee has accepted the office, he must bear in mind that he is not to sleep upon it, but is required to take an active part in the execution of the trust. The law knows no such person as a passive trustee. If, therefore, an unprofessional person

If he sign a power-of-attorney for sale of stock, or execute a deed of reconveyance on repayment of a mortgage sum, he is as answerable for the money as if he were himself the solicitor, and had the sole management of the transaction."

And Mr. Spence says:<sup>1</sup> "Every person who accepts a trust is bound to execute it<sup>2</sup> with fidelity, and with reasonable diligence; it is no excuse to say that he had no benefit from it, but that it was merely honorary: the Court of Chancery looks upon all trusts as honorary, and as a burthen upon the honour and conscience of the party intrusted; and for the execution of which he is even precluded from receiving or making any benefit or advantage whatsoever."

Trustee to acquaint himself of
property.

A trustee is bound to acquaint himself with the nature and particular circumstances of the trust-property. But a new trustee is not liable for any breach of trust committed by his predecessor. He is entitled to assume that everything before his coming in had been duly performed, and he cannot be charged with wilful default, because he did not look back and inquire whether the former trustees had performed their duties up to that time.<sup>3</sup>

If, however, he does not enquire into the state of the trust fund, and does not take steps to get in any part which may be outstanding on improper security, he will be liable for the consequences of his neglect, like any executor who knows that a debt is due to his testator's estate and omits to get it in.<sup>4</sup> Where a marriage settlement contained a covenant on the part of the husband to settle after acquired property, it was held that a new trustee was not liable for not having inquired as to whether any such settlement had been made, there being nothing to lead to a suspicion that any default had been made by

VI.

The office of a trustee is to a certain extent onerous. We have seen<sup>3</sup> that the law does not recognize a passive trustee, but that he must take an active part in the execution of the trust. It is one of his primary duties to maintain and defend all such actions as are requisite for the assertion or protection of the title to the trust-property.<sup>4</sup> And as a general rule, trustees are bound to press on all the remedies for the recovery of debts due to the trust-estate ; and if any securities seem proper to be continued, it seems the only safe course for trustees to adopt, is to submit the point to the judgment of the Court,—not to decide upon it themselves, unless a discretionary power to that extent be expressly or by clear implication given to them : else they will be answerable for any loss that may ensue in consequence of their misplaced confidence, however good may have been their intention.<sup>5</sup>

Trustees
bound to protect trust-property.

Power has been given to trustees in India to sue for the possession of specific moveable property to the beneficial interest in which the person for whom they are trustees is entitled. Possession is to be recovered in the manner prescribed by the Code of Civil Procedure.<sup>6</sup>

Trustees are bound to place the trust-property in safe securities, and will be liable for loss if they delay in getting it in and investing it.<sup>7</sup> For instance, if debts are outstanding, it is the duty of the trustees to get them in as soon as possible ; and if in consequence of their negligence the debts are lost by the debtor's insolvency, or if the right to sue is barred by limitation, they will be personally liable.<sup>8</sup>

Trustees may fairly allow a debt to be paid by instalments, but they will not be justified in granting any great indulgence.<sup>3</sup> In the exercise of a fair discretion they need not commence legal proceedings unnecessarily, but they should exert themselves to get in the debt, and, if necessary, commence compulsory proceedings to obtain it.<sup>4</sup>

When trustees bond fide exert themselves to discharge their duty, and merely commit an error in judgment, unless there is a plain violation of trust, they will not be visited severely. The fair exercise of their judgment is a protection to them, although the consequences may be bad.<sup>5</sup>

Estate
outstanding on personal security.

If part of a testator's estate is outstanding on personal security, it is the duty of the executors to take steps to get it in,<sup>6</sup> even though the debtor is a co-executor.<sup>7</sup>

The fact that the testator approved of the security and had continued it for many years, and that it was good at the time of his death, will not relieve the executors from responsibility in case of loss.<sup>8</sup> Personal security changes from day to day by reason of the personal responsibility of the party giving the security, and as a testator's means of judging of the value of that responsibility are put an end to by his death, the executor who has omitted to get it in within a reasonable time, becomes himself the security.<sup>9</sup> An application to the debtor must be followed up by legal proceedings if not attended to; a mere demand through an attorney will not discharge the executor.<sup>10</sup>

But executors will not be liable for not taking legal proceedings if it appears that the proceedings would have

A direction in the will that the executors shall call in securities not approved by them, will not discharge them from liability for loss arising from the failure of personal security. Such a direction must be considered as referable to securities upon which a testator's property might, from their nature, be invested, and not as authorizing a kind of investment which a Court of Equity will not sanction.<sup>3</sup>

And if a settlement contain a clause that the trustees are to get in the money, "whenever they shall think fit and expedient so to do," they will be liable if they refrain from enforcing payment out of tenderness to the tenant-for-life, without due regard to the interests of all the cestuis que trustent.<sup>4</sup>

If the testator's property is outstanding on securities which may reasonably be considered as safe, the executors are not bound to call them in, until the creditors call for payment of their debts; or unless they have reason to suspect the solvency of the debtor. "What," said Lord Thurlow,<sup>5</sup> "is the executor to do. Is he to call in the securities before creditors require payment of their debts? Must the money lie dead without interest, or must he put it out on fresh securities? On the original securities he had the testator's confidence for his sanction; but on any new securities it will be at his own peril."<sup>6</sup> The trustees, however, should enquire whether the securities are safe, and call them in if they are not.<sup>7</sup>

Care required from trustee. A trustee is bound to take the same care of the trust-property as he would of his own, but not more care;<sup>2</sup> and if he has taken such care, he will not be liable for loss, destruction, or deterioration of the trust-property. Thus, a trustee was held not to be liable when the trust-property was stolen from his house, together with property of his own.<sup>3</sup> So, where the defendant, an administratrix, had handed over certain goods to her solicitor, from whose custody they were stolen, it was held that she should not be charged.<sup>4</sup> Where, however, the loss is occasioned by the act of a person employed by the trustee, the trustee will have to bear the loss;<sup>5</sup> as where the loss is caused by his solicitor, having committed a fraud on the occasion of the investment of the fund on mortgage.<sup>6</sup>

Loss occasioned by agent.

By act of co-trustees. Where the trust-property consists of securities or articles which pass by delivery, and there are several trustees, the property should be deposited with the bankers of the trustees; and if it is so deposited, and the bankers, without the privity or concurrence of the co-trustees, allow one of the trustees to have access to the property, and he makes away with it, the co-trustees remaining ignorant of the fact are not liable to make good any portion of the property misappropriated.<sup>7</sup> An executor is not bound to insure, or continue the insurance of, his testator's property against fire.<sup>8</sup>

Trust-fund consisting of money. Where the trust-fund consists of money, the trustee, pending investment, may place the money in the hands of a banker.<sup>9</sup> The trustee should open a separate account in the name of the trust-estate, and should not mix the trust-fund with his own money. If he does so, he will be

The trustee must be careful not to put the trust-fund out of his control and under the control of other persons. If he does so, he guarantees the solvency of those persons, and will be answerable for any loss that may ensue;<sup>6</sup> and the liability will be the same, although the persons under whose control the property was left were co-trustees.<sup>7</sup>

trust-fund.

In a case before Sir A. Hart, in Ireland, an executor was held to be justified, though he had placed the assets in a bank so as to be under the control of the co-executor. The money was entered in the books to the joint account of the co-executors, but the bank was in the habit of answering the cheques of either co-executor singly. "It is the custom of bankers," said Lord Chancellor Hart, "that what is deposited by one to the joint account may be withdrawn by the cheque of the other; and for convenience of business, it is necessary this risk should be incurred, for it would be very hard to transact business if every cheque should be signed by all the executors." However, his Lordship admitted, that "if there were any fraud or collusion, wilful default or gross neglect, or if the executor had any reason to put a stop to the mismanagement by the co-executor, the case would be altered."<sup>8</sup> "But," says Mr. Lewin, "even with this qualification the doctrine is so contrary to the principle of other cases, that no trustee or executor could be advised to rely upon it in practice."

banker.

Trustees will be liable for loss incurred by the failure of bankers, if it was their duty to have invested the trust-moneys,<sup>1</sup> or to have paid them over to new trustees,<sup>2</sup> or into Court.<sup>3</sup>

An investment with the bankers themselves upon the security of their notes-of-hand is not sufficient, for that is merely a personal security.<sup>4</sup>

But executors require a certain amount of ready-money to enable them to wind up their testator's estate, and are entitled to keep such a sum uninvested at their bankers, and will not be made liable if it is lost within the year allowed for satisfying claims.<sup>5</sup>

Where executors drew trust-funds out of one bank, and invested them on a deposit account at interest in another bank, such an investment not being authorized by the will, they were held to be personally liable, notwithstanding a clause in the will indemnifying them against losses by a banker of money deposited for safe custody.<sup>6</sup>

It is a grave breach of duty in trustees or administrators taking out letters of administration to estates in this country, under powers-of-attorney from executors or next-of-kin abroad, to mix the incomes raised by them from trust-properties, or the funds of the estate, in one common fund with their own moneys, and such a course of dealing may expose the trustees or administrators to criminal as well as civil liabilities.<sup>7</sup>

prevent waste.

Where a trust is created for several persons in succession, as where property is devised to trustees, upon trust, to permit A to enjoy the rents and profits for his life, and after his death an interest in the property is given to B, and the person having the life-estate commits, or threatens to commit, any act which is destructive or permanently injurious to the trust-estate, such as cutting down timber or destroying houses, the trustees ought to sue for an injunction to restrain the tenants-for-life from committing the acts of waste. "There can be no doubt," said Lord Lang-

An injunction can only be obtained to prevent the commission of acts of active waste, not to restrain the tenant-for-life from allowing permissive waste, as by allowing the trust-property to fall into disrepair.<sup>5</sup> "I think," said Wood, V.C., "that it is not possible to obtain a remedy against permissive waste indirectly through the medium of a trust created in the property. If I were to hold that, it would be most inconvenient. If every trustee is to be considered liable, though merely a trustee under a will, which devises the property to and to his use, as in Denton v. Denton,<sup>6</sup> in cases of permissive waste for want of repairs, the difficulty which is now felt of getting respectable persons to act as trustees would be increased. I can foresee no end to the demands which would be made upon trustees by remaindermen coming into possession of the trust-property, who might think it not sufficiently repaired, if they might say to the trustees 'it was your duty to look after the tenant-for-life, you had the legal estate, and it was your business to see that he was performing all these trusts; and as you have not done so, we shall fix you with the liability.' I think that such a doctrine cannot possibly be established."<sup>7</sup> On appeal,<sup>8</sup> the decision of Wood, V.C., was affirmed, Lord Cottenham, L.C., saying: "It was argued, independently of the trust, that it is the duty of a tenant-for-life to repair. 'Equitas sequitur legem.' But even legal liability now is very doubtful."<sup>9</sup> Whatever be the legal liability, this Court has always declined to interfere against mere permissive waste. Lord Castlemain v. Lord Craven; <sup>1</sup> there the Master of the Rolls said, 'the Court never interposes in case of permissive waste either to prohibit or to give satisfaction, as it does in case of wilful waste.' On this ground relief was refused in Wood v. Gaynon.<sup>2</sup> In that case a tenant-for-life had been guilty of permissive waste, and the plaintiff and one of the defendants, Benjamin Lyme, were the reversioners; Lyme refused to join with the plaintiff in an action at law. The Master of the Rolls refused to assist the plaintiff, saying that as there was no precedent he would not make one; adopting the argument, that it would tend to harass tenants-for-life and jointresses, and that suits of this kind would be attended with great expense in depositions about the repairs. With respect to the case of Caldwall v. Baylis,<sup>3</sup> it does not sustain the doctrine for which it was cited. The case of Re Skingley<sup>4</sup> was founded on the express obligation of the lunatic to repair. I do not refer to the cases where the question has been as to the right to charge assets. There the decisions have rested on other grounds. There is no precedent for what is asked in this respect. I certainly will not be the first to make one."

Cestui que trust may not benefit by waste.

If the person in possession of the trust-estate, the tenant-for-life, commits active waste, he will not be permitted to derive any benefit from his wrongful act, but the money arising therefrom will be preserved for the remaindermen.<sup>5</sup> If, however, the tenant-for-life has expended money in permanent improvements on the trust-estate, he will be allowed credit for such sums.<sup>6</sup>

Tenants-for-life without impeachment of waste.

If the cestui que trust is tenant-for-life without impeachment of waste,—that is to say, if the instrument creating the trust declares that the tenant-for-life shall not be punishable for waste, or the cestui que trust is tenant-in-tail after possibility of issue extinct, which is the case where an estate is limited to a man and the heirs of his body by a particular wife, and she dies without having had children, or none of her children are living at her death, the cestui que trust may commit ordinary waste.

VI.

It is not necessary, in order to give the Court ground for interfering, that the plaintiff, whether trustee or remainderman, should wait until a serious act of waste has been committed;<sup>2</sup> but the Court will interfere if a fair case of prospective injury has been made out.<sup>3</sup> The mere apprehension or belief that waste will be committed is not sufficient;<sup>4</sup> but if an intention to commit waste can be shown to exist, or if a man insists on his right, or threatens to commit waste, there is a foundation for the exercise of the jurisdiction.<sup>5</sup>

When Court may interfere.

If the act of waste is trivial, the Court will not interfere, unless it appears that further waste is intended or threatened.<sup>6</sup>

In order to obtain the assistance of the Court, it is only necessary to prove that a single act of waste, whether legal or equitable, has been committed.<sup>7</sup>

The broad principle upon which a Court administering equity acts in restraining a person, who has only a limited interest in property of which he is in possession, from destroying or injuring such property, is, that of protecting property from irreparable injury, and to prevent a malicious, wanton, and capricious abuse of their rights and authorities, by persons having but a temporary and limited interest in the subject-matter. By irreparable injury is meant, not such injury as cannot by any possibility be repaired, but serious and material injury, which cannot be adequately compensated for by pecuniary damages.<sup>8</sup>

on which Court acts.

LECTURE VI. — restraining a tenant-for-life from committing waste, the Courts of this country have, in many instances, restrained a Hindu widow from acts injurious to the property which she has inherited from her husband.<sup>1</sup> “Such acts,” says Mr. Mayne,<sup>2</sup> “are of two classes:—first, those which diminish the value of the estate; second, those which endanger the title of those next in succession. First, under this head come all acts which answer to the description of waste,—that is, an improper destruction or deterioration of the property. The right of those next in reversion to bring a suit to restrain such waste, was established apparently for the first time by an elaborate judgment of Sir L. Peel, in 1851, in Hurrydass Dutt v. Rungunmoney. What will amount to waste has never been discussed. Probably no assistance upon this point could be obtained from an examination of the English cases in regard to tenants-for-life. The female heir is, for all purposes of beneficial enjoyment, full and complete owner. She would, as I conceive, have a full right to cut timber, open mines, and the like, provided she did so for the purpose of enjoying the estate, and not of injuring the reversion. As Sir L. Peel said: ‘The Hindu female is rather in the position of an heir taking by descent until a contingency happens, than an heir or devisee upon a trust by implication. Therefore, a bill filed by the presumptive heir in succession against the immediate heir who has succeeded by inheritance, must show a case approaching to spoliation.’” “It is necessary,” said the Right Hon. T. Pemberton Leigh,<sup>3</sup> “to show that there is danger to the property from the mode in which the party in possession is dealing with it, in which case, and in such case only, the Court will interfere.”<sup>4</sup>

Suit for possession. If the widow has committed an act involving forfeiture of property, the reversioners will be entitled to immediate possession.<sup>5</sup> A suit will lie for possession with a view to the prevention of waste, either inchoate or threatened, though of course evidence of such a nature must be procured as will convince the Court that, but for its interference, ultimate loss to the heirs by succession will ensue.<sup>1</sup> The ground for removing the widow from the management of the property in these cases is, that she has proved herself to be unworthy of the confidence reposed in her.<sup>2</sup>

VI.

When it is shown that ultimate loss to the estate will result from the acts of the widow, the Court will appoint a receiver, who may be the reversionary heir. His appointment as such is not by virtue of his reversionary right, but on a consideration of what is most for the benefit of the estate.<sup>3</sup>

Receiver.

Although the widow may be removed from the management of the property, she will remain entitled to the rents and profits, which must be paid to her by the receiver. It is not competent to the Court to put the reversioner into possession assigning maintenance to the widow.<sup>4</sup>

Where a widow gave up possession of property upon a claim being made to it, and refused to have anything to do with it,—it was held, that the reversioners were entitled to sue the widow and the person to whom she had given up possession for a declaration of their title, and that the proper course for the Court to adopt was, to appoint a manager to collect the assets of the estate, who should account for them to the Court, and the Court should hold them for the benefit of the reversionary heirs.<sup>5</sup>

If a widow has alienated the property, and it is in the hands of a third person, the reversionary heirs may sue the grantee to prevent waste or destruction of the property, whether moveable or immoveable.<sup>6</sup> But they will have no cause of action unless they charge waste or injury to the property which may affect their rights as reversioners.<sup>7</sup>

parties to sue.

The proper persons to sue to restrain a widow from committing acts of waste are the immediate reversionary heirs.<sup>1</sup>

In Bama Soonduree Dossee v. Bama Soonduree Dossee<sup>2</sup> it was held, that persons whose rights are only inchoate and remote cannot bring such a suit. But, according to the later decisions, it seems that contingent reversioners may sue. In the recent case of Chottoo Misser v. Jemah Misser,<sup>3</sup> Garth, C. J., said: "It appears to me that this is one of that class of cases which are referred to in the Shivagunga case<sup>4</sup> as being exceptions to the general rule, which is there laid down. In page 191 of the judgment their Lordships allude to suits brought against Hindu widows by presumptive reversioners to restrain waste and the like, as being 'suits of a very special class, which have been entertained by the Courts ex necessitate rei.' They expressly say that, in such cases, the reversioner cannot get a declaration of his own title as against third persons; but he is permitted to sue as the presumptive heir, because, unless he were allowed to bring such a suit, there would be no means of preventing a widow from doing perhaps irremediable mischief to the estate. And suits like the present, it seems to me, come clearly within the principle of that exception."

Collusion
by immediate reversioner.

And if the immediate reversioners are colluding with the widow, the contingent reversioners may sue to protect the estate.<sup>5</sup>

A stranger cannot sue, even with the consent of the heirs, or by making them parties;<sup>6</sup> nor can an assignee of a reversionary heir, even though he is the next reversionary heir to the husband after the assignor.<sup>7</sup> over,<sup>1</sup> and the subject-matter of the trust consists of property of a wasting description, such as leaseholds or long annuities, and no authority is expressly given to the trustees to convert, the Court assumes that it was the intention of the author of the trust that the trust-estate should be converted into property of a permanent character, otherwise the interest of the reversioners will run the risk of being damaged or destroyed; and it becomes the duty of the trustees, unless a contrary intention appears from the instrument creating the trust, to convert the property into property of a permanent nature,<sup>2</sup> and their omission to do so will be a breach of trust.<sup>3</sup> The doctrine will apply, though there are no trustees, but the bequest is made to the tenant-for-life directly.<sup>4</sup> The leading case on this point is Howe v. Earl of Dartmouth.<sup>5</sup> In that case a testator had bequeathed all his personal estate to his wife for life with remainders over; part of the property consisted of annuities; and it was held, that they ought to be converted, and the proceeds invested in Government securities. Lord Eldon said: "Unless the testator directs the mode, so that it is to continue as it was, the Court understands that it shall be put in such a state, that the others may enjoy it after the decease of the first, and the thing is quite equal, for the bequest might consist of a vast number of particulars; for instance, a personal annuity, not to commence in enjoyment till the expiration of twenty years from the death of the testator, payable upon a contingency perhaps. If in this case it is equitable that long or short annuities should be sold, to give everyone an equal chance, the Court acts equally as in the other case; for those future interests are, for the sake of the tenant-for-life to be converted into a present interest, being sold immediately in order to yield an immediate interest to the tenant-for-life. As in the one case, that in which the tenant-for-life has too great an interest is melted for the benefit of the rest; in the other, that of which, if it remained in specie, he might never receive anything, is brought in, and he has immediately the interest of its present worth." In Pickering v. Pickering,<sup>1</sup> where the property consisted of leaseholds, Lord Cottenham said, p. 298: "Very nice distinctions have been taken, and must have been taken, in determining whether the tenant-for-life is to have the income of the property in the state in which it is at the time of the testator's death, or the income of the produce of the conversion of the property. The principle upon which all the cases on the subject turn is clear enough, although its application is not always very easy.

"All that Howe v. Lord Dartmouth<sup>2</sup> decided—and that was not the first decision to the same effect—is, that, where the residue or bulk of the property is left en masse, and it is given to several persons in succession as tenants-for-life and remaindermen, it is the duty of the Court to carry into effect the apparent intention of the testator. How is the apparent intention to be ascertained if the testator has given no particular directions? If, although he has given no directions at all, yet he has carved out parts of the property to be enjoyed in strict settlement by certain persons, it is evident that the property must be put in such a state as will allow of its being so enjoyed. That cannot be, unless it is taken out of a temporary fund and put into a permanent fund. But that is merely an inference from the mode in which the property is to be enjoyed, if no direction is given as to how the property is to be managed. It is equally clear that if a person gives certain property specifically to one person for life, with remainder over afterwards, then, although there is a danger that one object of his bounty will be defeated by the tenancy-for-life lasting as long as the property endures, yet there is a manifestation of intention which the Court cannot overlook. If a testator gives leasehold property to one for life, with remainder afterwards, he is the best judge whether the remainderman is to enjoy. The intention is the other way, so far as it is declared, and the terms of the gift, as a declaration of intention, preclude the Court from considering that he might have meant that it should be converted. Those two kinds of cases are free from difficulty, but other cases of very great difficulty may occur in which it may be very doubtful whether the testator has left property specifically, but in which there are expressions which raise the question whether the property is not to be enjoyed specifically; for, as the Master of the Rolls appears to have observed in the present case, the word 'specific,' when used in speaking of cases of this sort, is not to be taken as used in its strictest sense, but as implying a question whether, upon the whole, the testator intended that the property should be enjoyed in specie. Those are questions of difficulty, because the Court has to find out what was the intention of the testator as to the mode of management and as to the mode of enjoyment."

The rule does not proceed upon the assumption that the testator intended his property to be sold, except so far as a testator may be presumed to intend that which the law will imply from the directions in his will. The rule proceeds upon this, that the testator has intended the enjoyment of perishable property by different persons in succession, and this can only be accomplished by means of a sale.<sup>1</sup>

The rule will not apply if the property is specifically given to persons in succession,<sup>2</sup> even though a discretionary power of changing the property is given to the trustees,<sup>3</sup> for such a power is given to them with a view to the security of the property, and not with a view to vary or affect the relative rights of the legatees, and indeed shows that the property was intended to be converted.<sup>4</sup> So, the rule will not apply if it clearly appears that the author of the trust intended the property to be enjoyed in specie.<sup>5</sup> "The question," said Lord Langdale,<sup>6</sup> "does not depend on the legacy being specific or not, but you are to collect from the will whether the testator intended that the property should at all events be enjoyed by those in remainder after the expiration of the prior interest."<sup>7</sup> If the property is not to be converted until a certain time has expired, the trustees will not be justified in converting it until that time arrives.<sup>8</sup>

Where a testator, after giving estates in succession, empowered his trustees to retain all or any portion or portions of his trust-estate in the same state in which it should be at the time of his decease, or to sell or convert the same, or any part thereof, into money in such manner and for such prices and under such terms and conditions as they should, in their absolute and uncontrolled discretion, think fit, it was held the case was taken out of the rule.<sup>3</sup>

Trustee to be impartial.

A trustee is bound to be impartial in executing the trust, and must not benefit one cestui que trust at the expense of another. Thus, where a testator by his will desired his trustees to give up his farm to his nephew, the plaintiff, if the landlord would accept him as tenant; and in that case he bequeathed to him the farming-stock; and the testator also gave some real property to the plaintiff, and gave legacies and annuities to the plaintiff's father, mother, and sisters, and other persons including the trustees, one of whom was steward to the landlord, and there were hardly any assets to pay the legacies and annuities, if the plaintiff took the farming-stock, upon which the trustees represented the case to the landlord, who left it to their decision whether the plaintiff should be accepted as tenant; and they accordingly refused to let him be accepted, unless he executed a deed making over the devised real estate to pay the legacies and annuities,—it was held, that it was a breach of trust on the part of the trustees to endeavour to induce the landlord to refuse his consent to the plaintiff having the tenancy, and that the deed must be set aside. James, L. J., said: "The trustees honestly believed that the testator had made a mistake. Still they were the trustees of that will, and their duty was to carry its trusts into effect impartially; they had no right to use the power given to them by their position as trustees; or any other power

If the author of the trust has reposed a discretionary power in the trustees, either to do or to abstain from doing certain things, the Court has no power or jurisdiction to control the trustees in the exercise of their discretion, so long as they act in good faith, and their determination is not influenced by improper motives.<sup>2</sup> "If," said Wigram, V. C.,<sup>3</sup> "the gift be subject to the discretion of another person, so long as that person exercises a sound and honest discretion, I am not aware of any principle or authority upon which the Court should deprive the party of that discretionary power where a proper and honest discretion is exercised." And in the recent case of Gisborne v. Gisborne<sup>4</sup> Lord Cairns said: "No doubt various cases have occurred in the Court of Chancery, in which, either from the trustees submitting to the Court the question of how they ought to exercise a power or a trust reposed in them, or from questions having been raised by the parties interested as to whether a trust for maintenance or a similar trust had actually arisen and ought to be acted upon, decisions have been arrived at by the Court which I should be very unwilling to throw the least doubt upon; but those decisions appear to me not at all to touch the present case, where, as I shall submit to your Lordships, you have the trustees made the absolute masters of the question, where you have them armed with a complete and uncontrolled discretion, and where they come before you stating that they are prepared to exercise that discretion within the limits within which it is confided to them by the will."<sup>5</sup>

Discretion of trustees
not interfered with.

Thus the Court will not interfere with the exercise of a discretionary power of selecting particular objects of the trust.<sup>6</sup> For instance, where property was devised to trustees upon trust for such of the testator's children and grandchildren, or nephews and nieces, as the trustees should think fit, and the trustees gave all to one, the Court refused to interfere.<sup>1</sup> So the Court will not interfere with a power of sale given to trustees,<sup>2</sup> or with a discretionary power to abstain from paying a legacy.<sup>3</sup> So, where a testatrix left £1,000 upon a condition precedent, but "left her executor at liberty to give the said sum if he found the thing proper," the Court refused to interfere, saying: "The executor says he did not think it proper to advance the legacy. Nothing appears in the conduct of the young man which disqualified him from taking, but it would be quite contrary to the provisions of the will to hold, that the power given to the executor at his discretion to advance the legacy, gave the legatee a right to claim it absolutely. If that were so, the condition in the will, and the power given to the executor of dispensing with it, would be frustrated. Is the Court to decide upon the propriety of the executor withholding the legacy? That would be assuming an authority which is confided by the Court to the discretion of the executor. It would be to make a will for the testator instead of expounding it."<sup>4</sup>

And the Court will not interfere with the trustees' discretion as to one of several authorized modes of investment,<sup>5</sup> although the result may be to vary the relative rights of the cestuis que trustent.<sup>6</sup> If, however, infants are interested, the Court will interfere if the proposed securities are clearly unsafe.<sup>7</sup> Nor will it interfere with the discretion of the trustees as to maintenance of children,<sup>8</sup> unless it thinks that the discretion is not being properly exercised for the benefit of the infants.<sup>9</sup> Where the trustees had "an uncontrolled and irresponsible discretion," the Court refused to interfere, there being no proof of mala fides, although the trustees did not appear to be acting judiciously.<sup>10</sup> And the Court will not interfere with the mode of executing the trust.<sup>1</sup> But where the power is accompanied with a duty and meant to be exercised (as a power of leasing), the Court will compel the execution, or execute it in the place of the trustees. So, where the trustees had a power-of-sale "if they should consider it advisable but not otherwise," it was held, that the power, though discretionary in form, was given to the trustees for the purposes of the will, and if those purposes could not be effected without the exercise of the power, they were bound to exercise it.<sup>2</sup> When such a power is conferred upon trustees to be executed by them at a fixed period, and after they have come to a judgment as to the conduct of the individual to be affected, they cannot divest themselves of the power, or execute it until the time appointed; nor can they enter into any anterior contract respecting it.<sup>3</sup>

Where a trustee had an absolute discretion to apply the trust-funds for certain charitable purposes as he might think fit, and he died without exercising the power inter vivos, but by his will gave definite directions as to the application of the funds, it was held that the power was duly exercised.<sup>4</sup>

power by will.

Trustees to whom discretionary powers are given, are not bound to state their reasons for exercising the powers in a particular way. But if they do state their reasons, and it appears that their premises are wrong, the Court will then set aside the conclusion.<sup>5</sup>

A trustee cannot set up a title to the trust-property adverse to that of his cestui que trust. In Lord Portsmouth v. Vincent,<sup>6</sup> tenants-at-will, who came into possession under a letting by a receiver in the Court of Chancery, were, by the neglect of the parties in the cause, allowed to remain in possession for a great number of years, and were not called on for their rent; they levied fines, and insisted on them as a bar: but Lord Hardwicke said: "No, you gained that possession as tenants under

C., "a person knowingly and expressly acquires the possession of property as a trustee merely, or being in possession makes himself by contract, expressly and without qualification, a trustee of it, he cannot be allowed effectually to assert against the trust, at least as a defendant in a suit seeking the performance of the trust, any title paramount and adverse to the trust which he may himself have; he must assert it (if at all) without deriving—he must assert it so as not to derive—any advantage for it from the possession which he has as trustee, or had in that character."<sup>2</sup>

third person.

If, however, the trustees become aware of a title in a third person to the trust-property, and the cestuis que trustent are entitled to claim the property absolutely, the trustees may refuse to deliver over the fund until the question is settled.<sup>3</sup> And trustees cannot set up the adverse title of a third person against their cestuis que trustent.<sup>4</sup>

up of

A trustee who sets up a title to moveable property may be compelled to deliver it up to his cestui que trust. The Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), s. 11, provides, that "any person having the possession or control of a particular article of moveable property, of which he is not the owner, may be compelled specifically to deliver it to the person entitled to its immediate possession, when the thing claimed is held by the defendant as the trustee of the claimant;" and the following illustration is given: "A, proceeding to Europe, leaves his furniture in charge of B as his agent during his absence. B, without A's authority, pledges the furniture to C, and C knowing that B had no right to pledge the furniture, advertises it for sale. C may be compelled to deliver the furniture to A, for he holds it as A's trustee."

It may happen that there is no cestui que trust to claim the property, and no person to claim it through the settlor. According to English law, there is no escheat of a trust in fee of lands,<sup>1</sup> and the trustee retains the estate;<sup>2</sup> and if a cestui que trust of chattels dies intestate without next-of-kin, the trust-property goes to the Crown.<sup>3</sup> I am not aware of any case in which the question has been raised in this country.<sup>4</sup>

It is the duty of trustees to afford to their cestuis que trustent accurate information of the disposition of the trust-fund—all the information of which they are, or ought to be, in possession;<sup>5</sup> and to keep clear and distinct accounts of the property.<sup>6</sup> “It is the first duty of an accounting party, whether an agent, a trustee, a receiver, or an executor, for in this respect they all stand in the same position, to be constantly ready with his accounts.”<sup>7</sup> And if the trustees destroy books of account, very cogent reasons must be given to satisfy the Court that the destruction was proper or justifiable.<sup>8</sup> In the case of a trust for sale, the cestuis que trustent have a right to say to their trustees—“What estates have you sold? What debts have you paid? And those who claim under them have the same right.”<sup>9</sup>

If a trustee chooses to mix his accounts with those of his own trading concern, he cannot thereby protect himself from producing the original books in which any part of those accounts may be inserted.<sup>10</sup>

If a trustee adopts and sanctions improper accounts by his co-trustee, he will be liable for any default.<sup>11</sup>

Vouchers. When all the matters relating to the trust have been finally settled, the trustees are entitled to the possession of the vouchers, as their discharge to the cestuis que trust-ent, who, however, will have a right to inspect them, and to take copies at their own expense.<sup>2</sup>

Costs. If the inability or refusal of the trustees to account renders a suit necessary, they must pay the costs of it.<sup>3</sup> The matter of costs, however, is within the jurisdiction of the Court; and if there has been no actual misconduct, the Court may limit the payment of costs to the period of bringing the action or of the hearing, or otherwise according to the circumstances of the case.<sup>4</sup>

Good faith. In taking accounts against a trustee when he is to be fixed with a personal liability, his good faith is to be considered, and every fair allowance is to be made in his favour, especially if the demand against him is one which arose many years previously, and the cestui que trust was at the time cognizant of all the matters connected with it.<sup>5</sup>

Managing member of Hindu family. I may here refer to the question whether the managing member of a joint Hindu family can be sued for an account. The decisions on this point were conflicting; but in the Full Bench case of Abhaya Chandra Roy Chowdhry v. Pyari Mohan Guho,<sup>6</sup> the question was decided in the affirmative. Couch, C. J., said: — "The members of a joint Hindu family are entitled to the family property, subject to such dispositions of it as the managing member is entitled to make, either by virtue of the power which is given him by law as manager, or of the powers that may be given to him by the consent of the other members of the family. Subject to the exercise of these powers, and to any disposition of any portion of the family property which may have been made by virtue of them, the other members of the family are clearly interested in that property. It appears to me, that the principle upon which the right to call for an account rests, is not, as has been supposed, the existence of a direct agency or of a partnership, where the managing partner may be considered as the agent for his copartners. It depends upon the right which the members of a joint Hindu family have to a share of the property; and where there is a joint interest in the property, and one party receives all the profits, he is bound to account to the other parties, who have an interest in it, for the profits of their respective shares, after making such deductions as he may have the right to make. That appears to me to be the right principle, and it is the principle upon which the English Courts of Equity act in the case of joint tenants, and tenants in common, and not merely in cases of partners." And Phear, J., said:—"Every man, be he karta of a joint Hindu family or not, who manages the property of another person, or property in which another person is beneficially interested, upon the foundation of a trust or confidence between the two, is, in a Court of Equity and Good Conscience, accountable to the latter for the mode in which he does manage it, and for the profits which he may have made out of it. The principle upon which I understand the English Courts of Equity to act upon in those matters is simply this,—that a person who has the control of, and management of, another's property upon the footing of anything which amounts to a confidence or trust reposed in him by that other, shall not be allowed to abuse that confidence, and to make a profit out of his management, without the owner's consent; and inasmuch as the question whether or not a profit has been made, or what has been done, lies, under these circumstances, solely within the knowledge of the manager himself, a Court of Equity will make him disclose what he has done, in other words, will make him account for his administration of the property. It is the necessity for discovery, as the English lawyers term it, in order to protect the actual owner's right and interest which founds the jurisdiction of the English Courts of Equity in cases of this sort."

properly drawn instrument creating a trust, express directions will always be found as to the securities upon which the trustee is to invest the trust-funds, and the trustee is bound to adhere strictly to the modes of investment prescribed. If he does not do so, he commits a breach of trust, and will be liable for any loss that may arise; whereas, if he invests in the manner directed by the instrument of trust, he will not be liable in case of loss. But there are other cases where the instrument creating the trust is of an informal character, and does not contain any directions as to investment. It is the duty of the trustee to make the fund productive for the benefit of the persons interested, and in order to do so he must invest it in some form of security. And a trustee will not be justified in investing upon any but Government securities.<sup>1</sup> The Court will not allow property to be invested in public securities which are not Government securities.<sup>2</sup>

If a fund is properly invested, it is a clear breach of trust for the trustees to convert it into money and invest the proceeds in unauthorized securities.<sup>3</sup>

security.

Trustees may not invest on personal security,<sup>4</sup> even though larger interest may be gained, for such an investment is a species of gaming;<sup>5</sup> and it makes no difference that the loan is on joint security.<sup>6</sup> A promissory note is evidence of a debt; but it cannot be considered as a security for money.<sup>7</sup> The rule, that a trustee may not invest on personal security, is one that "should be rung in the ears of every person who acts in the character of trustee, for such an act may very probably be done with the best and most honest intention, yet no rule in a Court of Equity is so well established as this."<sup>8</sup>

And trustees leaving money outstanding on personal security in which the testator himself had invested, will be liable for any loss, unless they can show that an attempt to recover the money would have been fruitless.<sup>9</sup>

Trustees do not commit a breach of trust by lending out the trust-fund on personal security, if the instrument creating the trust expressly authorizes such a mode of investment.<sup>2</sup> But a power to place out the trust-fund at the trustees' discretion, will not justify an investment on such security.<sup>3</sup> So a power to invest upon such security as to the trustees seems expedient,<sup>4</sup> or on the "best and most sufficient security,"<sup>5</sup> or "on good private securities,"<sup>6</sup> will not justify investments on personal security. Nor will a trust to place the trust-fund "out to interest or other way of improvement" authorize an investment in trade.<sup>7</sup> And a trust to invest at "the discretion of the trustees" will not justify them in investing in securities of foreign states, even though the testator approved of such investments.<sup>8</sup> Where the trustees of a sum of money for A for life, remainder for her children, were authorized by the settlement to lend the trust-fund upon such real or personal security as should be thought good and sufficient, and the trustees lent it to a person in trade whom A had married, and the money was lost, they were made responsible for the amount. Sir W. Grant, M. R., said: "The authority did not extend to an accommodation; it was evident the trustees had, upon the marriage, been induced to accommodate the husband with the sum which they had no power to do."<sup>9</sup>

Where trustees of a marriage settlement were authorized, with the consent of the husband and wife, to invest the funds on such security, "either real or personal," as they, with such consent, should think proper, and at the date of

One cestui que trust not to be benefited at expense of others. Trustees must not invest in such a manner as to benefit one or more of the cestuis que trustent without having regard to the interests of the others. If they do so, and any loss results, they will be liable.<sup>2</sup> Even where the written consent of the tenant-for-life is required to a change of investment, the trustees are bound, if the fund is improperly invested, to re-invest it so as to protect the interests of the remainder men, although the tenant-for-life objects to the re-investment.<sup>3</sup>

Consent of cestuis que trustent to change. Where the instrument of trust contains a power of investment, but requires the consent of any of the cestuis que trustent or of the trustees, to the investment or to a change of securities, all the conditions of the power must be strictly followed. If, however, the terms of the power have not been complied with, a cestui que trust, who is sui juris, and who has acquiesced in the investment, cannot afterwards make any complaint.<sup>4</sup>

So if the power authorizes an advance to three on a joint interest, an advance to two is not justifiable.<sup>5</sup>

Continuing investment. In some cases trustees may continue existing investments, but they should be careful to see that the securities are good.<sup>6</sup>

Varying securities. "Trustees may, as they generally are, be expressly empowered to invest on real as well as Government securities, and where this is the case, and there is a power to vary securities, the trustees may safely sell out Government securities, and invest the proceeds on a mortgage; for, in this case, although the tenant-for-life may obtain a higher rate of interest, yet no injury is done to the remainder man, as the capital is a constant quantity, and if the tenant-for-life live long enough, he himself will have the benefit. A notion is sometimes entertained that where the stock has become depreciated since the original purchase of it by the trustees, the trustees cannot sell out the stock and lend the money on mortgage without being answerable for the difference between the bought and the sale price. But there is no ground for this apprehension, for if the trust authorize the purchase of stock at all, the trustees cannot be wrong in dealing with it at the market-price of the day.

No doubt if there were a sudden fall under peculiar circumstances, the trustees should not, without good reason, sell out at the very moment of casual depreciation; but if the power be bonâ fide exercised, the mere fact of a depreciation below the bought price cannot per se constitute a breach of duty.”<sup>1</sup>

Where trustees are empowered to invest on mortgage, they should not, in the case of land, invest more than two-thirds of the actual value of the estate; in the case of houses, not more than one-half. And they should not invest in leaseholds under any circumstances, as these are wasting securities. Nor should they, under any circumstances, invest on the security of a second mortgage.<sup>2</sup>

Investment or mortgage.

Trustees empowered to lend the trust-funds on mortgage may not lend to one of themselves. The reason is, that there is the possibility of a conflict between the trustees' duty and interest, and the cestuis que trustent are entitled to have the impartial judgment of all the trustees as to the sufficiency of the security.<sup>3</sup>

Trustees
may not lend to themselves

Trustees must be careful, when they advance money on mortgage, not to pay over the money to the mortgagor until the security is ready, for in case of loss by fraud they will be personally liable.<sup>4</sup>

Paying over mortgage-
money.

The Court will not, so long as an estate remains to be administered in it, allow a purchase, or a mortgage, or any other investment to be made, unless the Court is satisfied of its safety. The reason is, that the Court has to protect the property for all claimants, and even where the trustees have an undisputed power to make a purchase, or to make a mortgage, a reference is usually made to ascertain the propriety of the investment in all respects.<sup>5</sup>

VI.Trustee's and Mort-

Powers
Acts.

In England, the duties of trustees as to investment are defined by various Statutes.<sup>1</sup> In cases "to which English law is applicable"<sup>2</sup> in this country, the Trustee's and Mortgagee's Powers Act<sup>3</sup> provides (s. 5), that where trust-property is sold under a power-of-sale, the money received "shall be laid out in the manner indicated in that behalf in the will, deed, or instrument containing the power-of-sale; and until the money to be received upon any sale as aforesaid shall be so disposed of, the same shall be invested at interest in Government securities for the benefit of such persons as would be entitled to the benefit of the money, and the interest and profits thereof, in case such money were then actually laid out as aforesaid: provided that if the will, deed, or instrument shall contain no such indication, the persons empowered to sell as aforesaid shall invest the money so received upon any such sale in their names upon Government securities in India, and the interest of such securities shall be paid and applied to such person or persons for such purposes and in such manner as the rents and profits of the property sold as aforesaid would have been payable or applicable in case such sale had not been made." And s. 32 provides that, "trustees having trust-money in their hands which it is their duty to invest at interest, shall be at liberty, at their discretion, to invest the same in any Government securities, and such trustees shall also be at liberty, in their discretion, to call in any trust-funds invested in any other securities than as aforesaid, and to invest the same on any such securities as aforesaid, and also from time to time, at their discretion, to vary any such investments as aforesaid for others of the same nature. Provided always, that no such original investment as aforesaid, and no such change of investment as aforesaid, shall be made where there is a person under no disability entitled in possession to receive the income of the trust-fund for his life, or for a term of years determinable with his life, or for any greater estate, without the consent in writing of such person." The Official Trustee's Act<sup>4</sup> provides (s. 14) that "the Official Trustee shall cause all capital moneys received by him to be invested in Government securities, or otherwise as the Court shall direct: and if in any case the trust-funds or any of them shall, at the time of their vesting in the Official Trustee, be invested otherwise than as provided in the deed or will creating the trust, or than as ordered by the Court, it shall be the duty of the Official Trustee, as soon as he reasonably can, to realize the funds so improperly invested, and to invest the same in Government securities or otherwise as the Court shall direct."

Where trustees are bound by the terms of their trust to invest the money in the public funds, and instead of doing so, retain the money in their hands, the cestuis que trustent may elect to charge them, either with the amount of the money and interest, or with the amount of the stock which they might have purchased with the money.<sup>1</sup> The doctrine of the Court, when it applies this rule, is, that the trustee shall not benefit by his own wrong. If he had done what he was bound to do, a certain amount of Government securities would have been forthcoming for the cestuis que trustent. And therefore, if called upon to have such securities forthcoming, he is bound to do so; just as, in ordinary cases, every wrong-doer is bound to put the party injured, so far as the nature of the case allows, in the same situation in which he would have stood if the wrong had not been done.<sup>2</sup> case of non-

But the grounds on which the right of election in the cestuis que trustent rest, wholly fail in a case where a trustee, having an option to invest in Government securities, or on the security of immoveable property, neglects his duty and carelessly leaves the trust-funds in some other state of investment. In such a case, the cestui que trust cannot say to the trustee—"If you had done your duty, I should now have had a certain sum in Government securities, or the trust-fund would now consist of a certain amount of Government securities." It is obvious that the trustee might have duly discharged his duty, and yet no such result need have ensued. In such a case the trustee is liable for the principal and interest only. "Where a man is bound by covenants to do one of two things, and does neither, there in an action by the covenantee, the measure

The trustee is not called upon to exercise an option retrospectively, but is made responsible for not having exercised it at the proper time, for not having made one of two several kinds of investment. And a reason for his being in such a case chargeable only with the money invested, and not with the Government securities which might have been purchased, is, that there never was any right in the cestui que trust to compel the purchase of Government securities. The trustee is answerable for not having done what he was bound to do, and the measure of his responsibility should be what the cestui que trust must have been entitled to in whatever mode that duty was performed.”<sup>1</sup> In Raphael v. Boehm<sup>2</sup> Lord Eldon said: “Where there is an express trust to make improvement of the money, if the trustee will not honestly endeavour to improve it, there is nothing wrong in considering him as the principal to have lent it to others, and as often as he ought to have received it and lent it to others, if the demand be interest, and interest upon interest.” The case was re-argued before Lord Erskine, who agreed with Lord Eldon;<sup>3</sup> and Lord Eldon subsequently expressed his opinion that his original judgment was right.<sup>4</sup> Where a trustee who was directed to invest the residue of his testator’s estate in consols, and to accumulate the dividends, invested it on mortgage of real estate, he was held liable to make good the amount of stock which would have been purchased in consols, together with the amount of accumulation which would have been produced by a proper investment of the dividends of such stock.<sup>5</sup>

So an executor who neglects to pay debts, or who, after paying debts and legacies, neglects to account for the surplus, or an assignee who neglects to pay dividends, will be liable to pay interest,<sup>6</sup> and it is no excuse that he

If trustees having power to invest on certain securities, and to vary such investments from time to time, realize money properly invested, for the purpose of investing it in a security not warranted by the instrument of trust, the cestui que trust has two remedies: First, he may compel the trustees to restore the trust-fund to its original state. The Court will not treat the sale as lawful, and the investment as unlawful, so as to satisfy the trust by replacing the money, but the whole will be treated as one unjustifiable transaction and the original security must be replaced,—that is to say, if the fund was originally invested in Government securities, it will not be sufficient to refund the money realized by the sale; but an equivalent amount of Government securities must be purchased<sup>3</sup> and the intermediate dividends must be replaced;<sup>4</sup> or, secondly, the cestui que trust may require the trustees to account for the money received on the sale with interest if that would be most advantageous to him.<sup>5</sup> In England, the rate of interest is 5 per cent.<sup>6</sup> In this country it would be at the rate of 6 per cent., the Court rate of interest. When trustees have committed a breach of trust by an improper sale of the trust-fund, they are not discharged from the consequences of the breach of trust by replacing the fund in some security, not the security the sale of which constituted the breach of trust.<sup>7</sup> In a case where the trustee did not seek to make anything himself, but was honourably unfortunate in having yielded to the importunity of one of the cestuis que trustent, it was held that, although the trustee was bound to replace the specific stock, the cestuis

Insolvency of trustee. In the case of the insolvency of a trustee, the cestui que trust has the option of proving for the proceeds of the sale with interest, or for the cost of the specific stock at the time of the insolvency with the interim dividends.<sup>2</sup>

Duties of trustees for sale or mortgage. Where the instrument of trust directs the trustees to raise money by the sale or mortgage of the trust-property, they may act without the leave of the Court.<sup>3</sup> But if a suit respecting the trust has been instituted, the trustees cannot deal with the property without the leave of the Court, for by the suit the execution of the trust is in the hands of the Court.<sup>4</sup> "Private contracts, therefore, after the institution of a suit, can only be entered into by trustees subject to the approbation of the Court, and a condition is commonly annexed that the contract shall be null and void, unless the sanction of the Court be obtained within a limited period. Cases have occurred where, from accidental circumstances, the sanction has not been obtained within the time, and then by the death of the purchaser the contract has dropped to the ground, and the representatives of the purchaser have not felt themselves justified in renewing it. The better mode would be, to give liberty to the purchaser at any time after the expiration of a limited period, but before any confirmation by the Court, to determine the contract."<sup>5</sup>

Trustee bound to sell to best advantage. A trustee for sale is bound to sell the trust-property to the best advantage, and to use all reasonable diligence to obtain a proper price.<sup>6</sup> If he is negligent in conducting the sale, as by not advertising,<sup>7</sup> he will be personally liable for any loss occasioned. All the trustees are equally liable, and cannot escape responsibility, on the ground that the conduct of the sale was delegated to one of their number.<sup>8</sup> If, however, a trustee enters into a contract for the sale of trust-property, he is not bound to break off the contract in

The trustees must pay equal and fair attention to the interests of all persons concerned. If they, or those who act by their authority, fail in reasonable diligence,—if they contract under circumstances of haste and improvidence,—if they make the sale with a view to advance the particular purposes of one party interested in the execution of the trust at the expense of another party—a Court of Equity will not enforce the specific performance of the contract, however fair and justifiable the conduct of the purchaser may have been.<sup>3</sup> So, specific performance will not be enforced against trustees, if they have entered into an agreement by mistake to sell at an inadequate consideration ;<sup>4</sup> nor, where there has been a substantial misdescription on their part, will specific performance with compensation be enforced against them ;<sup>5</sup> and in no case will specific performance be granted if there has been a breach of trust.<sup>6</sup> The sale of property at a grossly inadequate value is a breach of trust which affects the title in the hands of a purchaser.<sup>7</sup>

tend to interest of all parties.

“The usual course,” said Lord Romilly,<sup>8</sup> “is, for cestuis que trustent, who are the persons most interested in the matter, and who have the strongest motive for obtaining the highest possible price, to enter into a conditional contract of sale, and then to obtain the assent of the trustee, who, when he has satisfied himself that the sum proposed to be given for it is the value of the property, ought to sanction a sale which is beneficial for the persons for whom he is trustee.” This of course is only when the cestuis que trustent are persons competent to contract.

The trustee before sanctioning a sale should have a valuation of the property made by some qualified person.<sup>9</sup>

Absolute trust for sale will not authorize mortgage.

Trust to mortgage will not authorize sale.

Trust for sale survives.

Trustees bound to make good title.

Counsel's opinion.

An absolute trust for sale, from which it appears that it was the intention of the author of the trust that the property should be converted, will not authorize the trustees in mortgaging.<sup>1</sup> But where the trustees are authorized to sell in order to raise money for a particular purpose, as for instance, to pay debts, and it does not appear that it was the intention of the author of the trust that the property should be converted, the trustees may raise the necessary money by means of a mortgage.<sup>2</sup> "Generally speaking," said Lord St. Leonards,<sup>3</sup> "a power of sale, out-and-out, for a purpose or with an object beyond the raising of a particular charge, does not authorize a mortgage; but where it is for raising a particular charge, and the estate itself is settled or devised subject to that charge, there it may be proper, under the circumstances, to raise the money by mortgage, and the Court will support it as a conditional sale, as something within the power, and as a proper mode of raising the money."

Conversely, a trust to raise money by way of mortgage will not authorize a sale, and the Court will not, in such a case, direct a sale, even though it clearly appears that a sale would be more advantageous.<sup>4</sup>

A trust for sale survives, and it is not necessary, where one trustee has died before a contract has been entered into, to go to the Court in order to carry the sale into effect.<sup>5</sup>

Trustees are bound, like other persons, to make a good title; they may of course protect themselves by express stipulations.<sup>6</sup>

"It would be prudent before proceeding to the execution of the trust to take the opinion of counsel whether a good title can be deduced. Should the contract for sale be unconditional, and the title prove bad, the purchaser in a suit for specific performance would have his costs against the trustee, though the trustee, where his conduct was excusable, might charge them upon the trust-estate under the head of expenses."<sup>7</sup>

After property has been sold under a power of sale, the trustee should not let the purchaser into possession until the whole amount of the purchase-money has been paid.<sup>1</sup> The purchaser is not bound to pay the money to the trustees personally; but payment to an authorized agent of the trustees will bind them, and discharge the purchaser.<sup>2</sup>

Payment of purchase-
money.

It sometimes happens that trustees are directed to lay out the trust-funds in the purchase of lands. Such a direction is not very common, and I only propose to deal with this branch of the law very shortly.

Duties of trustees for
purchase.

The general rule is, that trustees for purchase, like all other trustees, are bound to discharge the duty prescribed; and failing to do so are answerable for the consequences, as if a specific fund be bequeathed to trustees upon trust to lay out on a purchase, and they neglect to call in the fund and lay it out, they are liable to compensate the cestui que trust for the consequences.<sup>3</sup> The trustees must take care to have the estate valued on their own behalf, and must not be content with the valuation of the vendor.<sup>4</sup> They must see that a good title is shown, and will be justified in taking legal advice.<sup>5</sup> If the trust-estate is in the hands of the Court, the trustees can only contract subject to the approval of the Court, which will direct an inquiry as to whether the purchase is beneficial, and if so, whether a good title can be made.<sup>6</sup> Trustees having a trust or power to purchase must exercise a joint discretion as to the propriety of the purchase, and therefore, as no man can be a judge in his own case, they are precluded from buying from one of themselves. If such a purchase be really desirable, it might be carried out by a friendly suit for obtaining the sanction of the Court.<sup>7</sup>

The trustees, where the money is not under administration by the Court, need not disclose the trust to the vendor either in the contract or in the conveyance. If they do so, it will embarrass the vendor by obliging him to see that the purchase-money is properly applied in pursuance of the trust.<sup>8</sup>

Time within which sale of trust-property to be made.

WHERE the instrument creating the trust contains a direction to the trustees to sell and convert the trust-property, the trustees will be allowed a reasonable time within which to effect the sale, even though the direction is to convert "with all convenient speed." "A direction to convert with all convenient speed," said Sir C. C. Pepys, M. R.,<sup>1</sup> "is no more than the ordinary duty implied in the office of an executor, and there must necessarily be some discretion. If a reasonable discretion were to be denied to an executor, if it were to be laid down as an inflexible rule that he ought to convert the assets without waiting or considering how far it was for the interest of those who are beneficially entitled, there would of necessity be always an immediate sale; the executor would be bound to sell at whatever loss. Such a rule would be in its operation most injurious, and it has never been acted upon by the Court, which, in cases of this kind, has always considered what is for the interest of the parties concerned."<sup>1</sup>

It is impossible to fix a particular period within which an executor should convert his testator's property, but a reasonable discretion must be allowed to the trustees, and whether they have exercised such a discretion must depend on the facts.<sup>2</sup> "You cannot," said Sir J. Romilly, M. R.,<sup>3</sup> "fix one period for selling every species of property. Thus, suppose the testator possessed a large quantity of horses, it would be culpable to keep them at a great expense, incurring necessarily a great outlay for their maintenance, instead of selling them at once. But with respect to other property, there must be a reasonable time allowed for selling it." The usual time is twelve months.<sup>4</sup> In one case two months were held to be a reasonable time within which to break up a testator's establishment.<sup>5</sup> And where executors sold the stock-in-trade and good-will of a business three weeks after their testator's death, though against the wish of the cestui que trust, and though there was evidence that a better price might have been obtained, they were held not responsible, as they had acted honestly.<sup>6</sup> There is no fixed rule that conversion must take place by the end of the year, but that is the prima facie rule, and executors who do not convert by that time, must show some reason why they did not do so.<sup>7</sup>

But if the trustees have acted bona fide, and according to the best of their judgment, and it appears that a sale within twelve months must have resulted in a loss, they will not be liable.<sup>8</sup> Trustees will, however, be liable for loss caused by any improper delay.<sup>1</sup> Where trustees delayed selling for twenty-five years, they were held to be liable;<sup>2</sup> and persons who deal with trustees selling at a considerable distance of time, are under an obligation to enquire and see that no breach of trust is being committed.<sup>3</sup> A trust to sell "at such time and in such manner" as the trustees think fit, will not justify the trustees in arbitrarily postponing the sale to an indefinite period, so as to place the tenant-for-life and those in remainder in a totally different relative situation from that in which they would have been had the sale been made with reasonable diligence.<sup>4</sup> Where property was devised to trustees upon trust with all convenient expedition, and within five years after the testator's death absolutely to sell and convey the premises, it was held, that the trustees could make a good title upon a sale after the expiration of that period. "There is nothing," said Turner, V. C., "in the will importing a negative on a sale being effected by the trustees after the expiration of five years. If there had been a provision negating any sale by the trustees after that period, there might have been a sufficient ground for this Court refusing to interpose to enforce specific performance of the agreement. The question is, whether it is to be collected from the will that the sale, which must at any rate be effected notwithstanding the lapse of the five years, may not after that time be made by the trustees, or whether it must then be made under the direction of the Court of Chancery by the Act of the Court. I cannot impute the latter intention to the testator. . . . I think the expression of the will as to the five years is only directory to the trustees, that they might make the payments out of the trust-funds within that time, if possible."<sup>5</sup> The onus is on the trustees to show that the interests of the cestuis que trustent have not been injuriously affected by the delay.<sup>6</sup>

Where a testator left money invested in speculative securities, and the executors waited for twelve months, by which time the market had fallen, and they, hoping the market would rise, delayed the sale, and a loss ensued,—it was held, that they ought not to be made liable. “The executors,” said James, L. J., “acted with no view of obtaining any benefit to themselves; they appear to have acted honestly with a view to what they thought beneficial to everybody interested. In the honest exercise of their discretion they thought it more prudent to wait for a rise, and we think they ought not to suffer because it turns out that they committed an error of judgment. It would be very hard upon executors, who have been saddled with property of this speculative kind and have endeavoured to do their duty honestly, if they were to be fixed with a loss arising from their not having taken what, as it proved by the result, would have been the best course.”<sup>1</sup>

If a testator gives an absolute discretion to his executors to postpone the sale and conversion of his estate, they are not bound by the ordinary rule to convert the property within a year, even though some of it consists of shares in an unlimited company. And they will not, in the absence of mala fides, be liable for loss arising to the estate from non-conversion.<sup>2</sup>

If the instrument creating the trust does not contain any special direction as to sale, it is not usual for the trustees to sell except upon the request of some one or more of their cestuis que trustent, or under circumstances which render a sale necessary or expedient, or unless the property is not of a permanent character.<sup>3</sup>

When the duties of trustees are at an end, they must convey the trust-property to their cestuis que trustent upon its being clearly and satisfactorily proved to them that their duties are at an end, unless they have notice of any disposition or incumbrance made by the cestuis que trustent or any of them.<sup>4</sup>

ance of trust-property to cestuis que
trustent.

When a trustee is called upon to distribute the trust-fund, he has a right to know the title of those who claim to be cestuis que trustent.<sup>5</sup> And the necessity of seeing that the trust-money reaches the proper hand is obligatory, not only on trustees regularly invested with the Derivative title. It occasionally happens that other persons than the original cestuis que trustent may come to have an interest in the trust-property, and questions arise as to how far the trustees are liable if they part with the trust-fund without noticing the persons who have subsequently acquired an interest in it. For instance, the instrument creating the trust may give A a life-interest, with a power of appointment among his children. Here the trustees must be careful to ascertain whether any appointment has been made, and who are the persons entitled under it. So if they have notice of an incumbrance having been created by a cestui que trust, they must ascertain whether it is still subsisting, otherwise they will be liable if they pay to the original cestui que trust.<sup>2</sup> New trustees are not bound to make any enquiries of the old trustee as to incumbrances.<sup>3</sup>

Payment after death of cestui que trust. Upon the death of a cestui que trust, the trustee must only pay to the person duly authorized by law to give receipts for property belonging to the cestui que trust. He has nothing to do with any disputes as to the persons ultimately entitled, and if he mixes himself up with such disputes and refuses to pay over the trust-fund to the person entitled to demand it, he will be liable for the costs of a suit to recover it.<sup>4</sup>

Appointment of trustee to assist in distributing. If a surviving trustee be placed in an embarrassing situation as regards the distribution or management of the fund, it is said that he has a right to ask for the appointment of a new trustee to assist him by his counsel.<sup>5</sup>

Presumption of death. According to English law, if a person has not been heard of for seven years, there is a presumption of law that he is dead; but at what time within that period he died is not a matter of presumption but of evidence, and the onus of proving that the death took place at any particular time within the seven years, lies upon the person who claims a right, to the establishment of which that fact is essential.<sup>1</sup> According to Hindu law, there must be a lapse of twelve years before death will be presumed.<sup>2</sup>

VII.

The presumption does not arise when the probability of intelligence is rebutted by circumstances.<sup>3</sup> Should the person afterwards re-appear in fact, he may assert his right.<sup>4</sup> And therefore, if the trust-fund is in Court and it is paid out to a claimant, he must give security to refund in such a case.<sup>5</sup> A trustee should, therefore, either accumulate the fund until death is proved, or else require an indemnity from the person to whom he pays.

Rebuttal of presumption.

When a trustee or executor hands over the trust-funds to a cestui que trust, it is usual to obtain a receipt or acknowledgment in full discharge of all claims. But such a receipt only discharges in respect of those claims which were actually known, and if given in ignorance of the real facts, will not affect the right of the cestui que trust.<sup>6</sup>

Release.

If a trustee, executor, or administrator pays over the trust-fund to persons who are not properly entitled to it, he will, as a general rule, be liable to those persons who can prove their title to it, even though he has acted honestly and circumspectly, and has been misled by his legal advisers. "I have no doubt," said Lord Redesdale,<sup>7</sup> "that the trustees meant to act fairly and honestly; but they were misadvised; and the Court must proceed, not upon the improper advice under which an executor may have acted, but upon the acts which he has done. If under the best advice he could procure he acts wrong, it is his misfortune; but public policy requires that he should be the person to suffer."<sup>8</sup> But ignorance of facts may, under certain circumstances, excuse the trustees.<sup>9</sup>

VII.
Costs.

Where the trustees have acted bond fide and under legal advice, they will not be made to pay costs.<sup>1</sup> As a rule, costs follow the event, and if a plaintiff fails, he has to pay the costs of the suit. But the Court has jurisdiction to allow an unsuccessful plaintiff his costs. And if it appears upon the construction of the instrument of trust that the rights of parties were so exceedingly doubtful that the fund could not safely be distributed without the opinion of the Court, an unsuccessful claimant may be allowed his costs out of the fund.<sup>2</sup> Where, however, a suit was instituted for the administration of an estate by a person entitled to a contingent reversionary interest, and a decree for an account was obtained, but before the accounts could be taken his interest wholly failed, he was held not to be entitled to his costs either as against the defendants or out of the fund.<sup>3</sup>

But trustees are not justified by remaining passive, in preventing the rightful owners from obtaining possession of their property, and if called upon to do an act involving no risk or responsibility, which is necessary to enable the true owner to obtain his property, they are bound to do it; and if their refusal renders an application to the Court necessary, they will be made to pay the costs.<sup>4</sup>

Interest.

An executor or trustee who in good faith pays over trust-money to persons who are not entitled to it, may be ordered to refund, but he will not have to pay interest.<sup>5</sup> If interest has been paid by mistake, it cannot be recovered back, but such wrongful payment cannot affect the title to the capital.<sup>6</sup>

Bond of indemnity.

"In cases where there exists a mere shadow of doubt as to the rights of parties interested, and it is highly improbable that any adverse claim will, in fact, be ever advanced, the protection of the trustee may be provided for by a substantial bond of indemnity. In general, however, a bond of indemnity is a very unsatisfactory safeguard, for when the danger arises, the obligors are often found insolvent, or their assets have been distributed. And if the bond be to indemnify against a breach of trust, the Court is not disposed to show mercy towards a trustee who admits himself to have wilfully erred by having endeavoured to arm himself against the consequences.”<sup>1</sup>

VII.

“Where the trustee is satisfied as to the parties right-fully entitled, he may pay the money either to the parties themselves, or to an agent empowered by them to receive it; and the authority need not be by power-of-attorney, or by deed, or even in writing. The trustee is safe if he can prove the authority, however communicated. But a trustee would not be acting prudently if he parted with the fund to an agent without some document producible at any moment by which he could establish the fact of the agency.”<sup>2</sup>

Authority from
cestui que
trust to receive the money.

If trustees pay on a written authority, they must be careful to see that it is genuine; for if it turns out to be forged, they will be liable for the loss. “Trustees,” said Lord Northington,<sup>3</sup> “whether private persons or a body corporate, must see to the reality of the authority empowering them to dispose of the trust-money, for if the transfer is made without the authority of the owner, the act is a nullity, and in consideration of law and equity the rights remain as before.” In that case a bank had permitted a transfer of stock under a forged power-of-attorney. “The question is,” said Lord Romilly,<sup>4</sup> “where forgery is committed, and a person wrongfully gets trust-money which cannot be recovered from him, on whom is the loss to fall? I am of opinion that it falls on the person who paid the money. Here the loss falls on the trustees, and the persons to whom the fund really belongs are not to be deprived of it. The trustee is bound to pay the trust-fund to the right persons.” In this case the trustees had paid over the trust-fund to wrong parties upon a forged authority, and they were held to be liable; but the persons who had wrongfully received the money were ordered to repay the amount they had respectively received in order to relieve the trustees.<sup>5</sup>

Payment
to single trustee.

Over-payment.

Refund to executor.

If trustees are induced by fraud to pay to an infant, they will not be liable to pay over again to him when he comes of age.<sup>1</sup>

In the case of the death of a partner, a debt owing to the firm may safely be paid to the surviving partners, who are competent to give receipts in respect of joint debts.<sup>2</sup>

"The Court will not, in the exercise of its discretion, except under special circumstances, pay out money to a single trustee who has survived his co-trustees, and a trustee out of Court would do well to throw all the protection he can about a trust-fund; but it must not be inferred that he would not be safe in paying to a single surviving trustee, for payment to a surviving trustee for sale, is of constant occurrence."<sup>3</sup>

If trustees under an erroneous view of the effect of the instrument of trust have overpaid cestuis que trustent, the Court will compel a restitution and repayment, and will give the trustees a lien on other interests of such cestuis que trustent, even as against an assignee for valuable consideration.<sup>4</sup> And one cestui que trust may sue the cestui que trust who has been overpaid, to recover the amount notwithstanding the Limitation Act, if there have been no improper laches on his part.<sup>5</sup>

Where in a suit against a trustee for relief in respect of a breach of trust it appears that overpayments have been made, they may be recovered in the suit without instituting fresh proceedings.<sup>6</sup>

Legatees will not, generally, be made to refund, at the suit of other legatees, payments voluntarily made to them by the executors under a mistake, but the repayment will be ordered to be made out of any undistributed funds in which they may be interested,<sup>7</sup> especially they will not be made to refund when they were not willing parties to the payment, and a long period has since

Where an executor administered an estate and paid over the residue, and ten years after a creditor of the testator brought an action of covenant against the executor, who instituted proceedings to administer the estate, and to make legacies standing in the joint names of the executor and legatees applicable to the payment of the debt,—the Court ordered the debt to be paid out of the legacies, but refused to allow the executor his costs.<sup>3</sup>

Notice of a remote contingent liability on the part of a testator is not sufficient to prevent his executor from distributing his residuary estate; and if the executor distributes with such notice, and the liability afterwards ripens into a debt, he will be entitled to call upon the residuary legatees to refund.<sup>4</sup>

Where one of several residuary legatees or next-of-kin has received his share of the estate of a testator or intestate, the others cannot call upon him to refund if the estate is subsequently wasted; but they can do so if the wasting took place before such share was received. And in the latter case, the burden of proof lies on those who call upon the residuary legatee or next-of-kin to refund, to show that the wasting took place before the share was paid over.<sup>5</sup>

It is a breach of trust on the part of executors or trustees to pay residuary legatees while their testator's debts remain unpaid, and creditors whose debts are not Statute-barred may recover the amount from the legatees,<sup>6</sup> but they cannot recover from a purchaser for value.<sup>7</sup>

VII.

A trustee is liable for a breach of trust, even though there was no consideration and the trustee himself is the author of the trust.<sup>1</sup> And if any person assumes to act as a trustee, and in so doing injures the trust-fund, he will be responsible, though he was never properly appointed.<sup>2</sup>

Trustee
liable, though he has not benefited.

The Court does not inquire whether the trustee has gained any particular benefit; but fastens upon him an obligation to make good the situation of the cestui que trust.<sup>3</sup> "It has been the constant habit of Courts of Equity," said Lord Redesdale,<sup>4</sup> "to charge persons in the character of trustees with the consequences of a breach of trust, and to charge their representatives also, whether they derive benefit from the breach of trust or not."<sup>5</sup>

liability.

A trustee will not be charged, as a mortgagee, for what he has or might have received;<sup>6</sup> he will not be charged with imaginary values,<sup>7</sup> for he is a mere stake-holder.<sup>8</sup> But if there is wilful default,<sup>9</sup> or very supine neglect,<sup>7</sup> he may be charged with more than he received, but the proof must be very strong.<sup>7</sup>

Trustee
about to abscond.

If the trustee is about to abscond, the cestui que trust may apply under chap. XXXIV of the Code of Civil Procedure that the trustee may give security, and the Court may, if it thinks fit, issue a warrant to arrest the trustee and bring him before the Court to show cause why he should not give security for his appearance. The Court would probably only exercise its jurisdiction under this chapter if the cestui que trust had a vested interest, and would not interfere where the cestui que trust's interest was contingent. A present vested interest, though capable of being divested, would be sufficient.<sup>9</sup>

Criminal breach of

law prescribing the mode in which such trust is to be discharged, or of any legal contract, express or implied, which he has made touching the discharge of such trust, or wilfully suffers any other person so to do, he commits criminal breach of trust (Act XLV of 1860, s. 405), and is liable to be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine or with both (s. 406). And the Code contains provisions (ss. 407, 408, 409) regarding criminal breach of trust by a carrier, wharfinger, or warehouse-keeper; clerks or servants, public servants, bankers, merchants, or agents. At one time it was held in England, that a trustee could not be punished for stealing the trust-property, as he is, according to English law, the legal owner, and a man cannot steal his own property. This absurdity has, however, been done away with by 24 and 25 Vict., c. 96, ss. 80, 86; and a trustee in England is now liable criminally as well as civilly.

A refusal to give up land alleged to have been mortgaged, the mortgage having been denied, cannot be treated as a dishonest misappropriation of documents of title amounting to a criminal breach of trust under s. 405.<sup>1</sup>

If a professional adviser wilfully advises a breach of trust, he will be liable to be suspended from practice.<sup>2</sup> And a trustee, also a professional man, who commits a breach of trust, is liable to the same penalty.<sup>3</sup> But the breach must be wilful; and a professional man acting under instructions from the trustees, will not, as we have seen, be liable as a constructive trustee, unless he is aware of the intended breach of trust.<sup>4</sup>

Liability of

If a trustee is a member of a firm, and pays trust-moneys into the partnership account, the other partners will be liable for any loss occasioned by the breach of trust;<sup>5</sup> and if one of a firm of solicitors in transacting business with trustees practises a fraud upon the trustees, the co-partners are liable.<sup>6</sup>

LECTURE VII. a breach of trust, and will be liable for loss, even by fire, lightning, or any other accident.<sup>1</sup>

Neglect to obey directions in instrument of trust. If a trustee neglects to follow a direction to accumulate dividends,<sup>2</sup> to enforce a transfer of stock,<sup>3</sup> or to sell, and in consequence the property becomes deteriorated in value, he will be liable for any loss that may happen.<sup>4</sup> So, if he neglects to register or to execute a power which it was his duty to execute, he will be liable for loss.<sup>5</sup>

To pay premiums. If a trustee suffers a policy of insurance to become forfeited through neglect to pay the premiums, he is bound to make good the loss to the cestui que trust.<sup>6</sup> But if a trustee has no funds in hand, he will not be liable.<sup>7</sup> If he advances the premiums himself, he will have a lien on the policy.<sup>8</sup> If there are no means of keeping up the policy, the Court will direct it to be sold.<sup>9</sup>

Sale to purchaser for valuable consideration without notice. If a trustee has wrongfully sold the trust-estate to a purchaser for valuable consideration without notice, the cestui que trust may either compel the trustee to purchase other lands of equal value, which lands will be held upon the trusts originally provided,<sup>10</sup> or he may take the proceeds of the sale with interest, or the present estimated value of the lands sold, after deducting any increase of price caused by subsequent improvements.<sup>11</sup>

Agent. As a rule, an agent appointed by a trustee cannot be made accountable for any losses incurred by him while acting as agent.<sup>12</sup> If, however, he goes beyond his authority as an agent, and loss ensues, he will be liable as a constructive trustee.<sup>13</sup> The trustees are responsible for the acts of their agents, and must be made parties to a suit to recover moneys lost by the agent.<sup>14</sup>

A firm of solicitors having been employed by the trustees of a will to receive the proceeds of the testator's real estate which had been taken by a Railway Company, paid over the money to one of such trustees without the receipt or authority of the other. The money having been lost to the estate by the insolvency and death of the trustee to whom it was paid, it was held, that the receipt of one trustee only (though also an executor) was not a sufficient discharge to the solicitors for the money which they had received by the authority of the two, and that they were personally liable to make good the loss which had resulted to the trust-estate from such improper payment.<sup>1</sup>

The tendency of recent decisions is to avoid making an agent responsible, unless there has been dishonest knowledge on his part. In Barnes v. Addy<sup>2</sup> Lord Selborne, L.C., said: "It is equally important to maintain the doctrine of trusts which is established in this Court, and not to strain it by unreasonable construction beyond its due and proper limits. There would be no better mode of undermining the sound doctrines of equity than to make reasonable and inequitable applications of them." Barnes v.
Addy.

"Now in this case we have to deal with certain persons who are trustees, and with certain other persons who are not trustees. That is a distinction to be borne in mind throughout the case. Those who create a trust clothe the trustee with a legal power and control over the trust-property, imposing on him a corresponding responsibility. That responsibility may no doubt be extended in equity to others who are not properly trustees, if they are found either making themselves trustees de son tort, or actually participating in any fraudulent conduct of the trustee to the injury of the cestui que trust. But, on the other hand, strangers are not to be made constructive trustees merely because they act as the agents of trustees in transactions within their legal powers—transactions, perhaps, of which a Court of Equity may disapprove, unless those agents receive and become chargeable with some part of the trust-property, or unless they assist with knowledge in a dishonest and fraudulent design on the part of the trustees. Those are the principles, as it seems to me, which we must bear in mind in dealing with the facts of this case. If those principles were disregarded, I know not how any one

LECTURE VII. — could, in transactions admitting of doubt as to the view which a Court of Equity might take of them, safely discharge the office of solicitor, of banker, or of agent of any sort to trustees. But on the other hand, if persons dealing honestly as agents are at liberty to rely on the legal power for the trustees, and are not to have the character of trustees constructively imposed upon them, then the transactions of mankind can safely be carried through; and I apprehend those who create trusts do expressly intend, in the absence of fraud and dishonesty, to exonerate such agents of all classes from the responsibilities which are expressly incumbent by reason of the fiduciary relation, upon the trustees."

Limitation. Limitation cannot be pleaded as a bar to a suit for compensation for breach of trust, where the trust is express. Section 10 of Act XV of 1877 provides, that "no suit against a person in whom property has become vested in trust for any specific purpose, or against his legal representatives or assigns (not being assigns for valuable consideration) for the purpose of following in his or their hands, such property shall be barred by any length of time." These words mean, that where a trust has been created expressly for some specific purpose or object, and property has become vested in a trustee upon such trust (either from such person having been originally named as trustee, or having become so subsequently by operation of law), the person or persons who for the time being may be beneficially interested in that trust, may bring a suit against such trustee to enforce that trust at any distance of time, without being barred by the law of limitation.<sup>1</sup> The words 'in trust for a specific purpose' are intended to apply to trusts created for some defined or particular purpose or object as distinguished from trusts of a general nature, such as the law imposes upon executors or others who hold recognized fiduciary positions; they are used in a restrictive sense to limit the character or nature of the trust attaching to the property which is sought to be followed.<sup>2</sup>

In this country, suits between a cestui que trust and trustee for an account are governed solely by the Limitation Act; and unless they fall within the exemption of §. 10, are liable to become barred by some one or other of the articles in the second schedule of the Act. To claim the benefit of that section, a suit against a trustee must be for the purpose of following the trust-property in his hands. If the object of the suit is not to recover any property in specie, but to have an account of the defendant's stewardship, which means an account of the moneys received and disbursed by the defendant on the plaintiff's behalf, and to be paid any balance which may be found due to him upon taking the account, it must be brought within six years from the time when the plaintiff had first a right to demand it.<sup>1</sup>

In 1860, certain shares in a company then formed were allotted to S., on the understanding, as the plaintiff alleged, that 120 of such shares should, on the amount thereof being paid to S., be transferred to, and registered in the books of, the company in the names of the plaintiffs. In 1862, the plaintiffs completed the payment to S. in respect of the shares, and during his lifetime, received dividends in respect of the shares. S. died in 1870 leaving a will, probate of which was granted to the defendant as his executor. In a suit brought by the plaintiffs, after demand of the shares from the defendant, and refusal by him to deliver them, to compel the defendant to transfer the shares to the plaintiffs, and register the same in their names, the plaintiffs' case was, that the shares had been held in trust for them, and that, consequently, their suit was not barred by lapse of time. It was held, that the transaction between S. and the plaintiffs did not amount to "a trust for a specific purpose."<sup>2</sup>

It is a general rule that a plaintiff cannot have any relief for which no case has been made on the pleadings,<sup>3</sup> and, therefore, if a cestui que trust sues his trustee for an account, and the plaintiff seeks relief against wilful default, he must in his pleadings allege some specific act of wilful default and pray for consequential relief,<sup>4</sup> and he must prove at least one act of wilful neglect and default.<sup>5</sup>

If at the hearing no act of wilful default is proved, and on taking the ordinary accounts, documents are discovered which might have shown wilful default, the Court will not direct any further inquiry as to wilful default.<sup>1</sup> But if the plaintiff pray an account with interest, and at the original hearing an account is directed, and in the course of the accounts improper balances appear to have been retained, interest on the balances may be asked for at the hearing on further directions.<sup>2</sup> And if relief against a breach of trust be prayed, and at the original hearing the usual accounts only are directed, but with an enquiry who are the parties interested, it is not too late to ask relief against the breach of trust on further directions, as before that time the Court was not in a condition to deal with the question.<sup>3</sup>

And in a redemption-suit it is not necessary that the plaintiff should charge wilful default; nor is the case altered, if the deed, though in substance a security, be in the form of a deed of trust.<sup>4</sup> A mortgagor can always have an account of rents and profits which a mortgagee in possession might, but for his wilful default, have received, though no charge of wilful default has been made, the reason being, that the Court looks with less favour on the case of a mortgagee in possession than on that of a mere gratuitous trustee.<sup>5</sup>

rence.

If the cestuis que trustent are persons who are competent to contract,<sup>6</sup> and they have assented to the wrongful act on the part of the trustees, the Court will endeavour to deliver the trustees from their liability to make good any loss,<sup>7</sup> and the cestuis que trustent will have to bear it. If some of the cestuis que trustent are not competent to contract, the loss will be thrown, in the first instance, upon those who were sui juris and who consented to the breach of trust, but the trustees will remain liable to make up any deficiency. "The rule of the Court in all cases is, that if a trustee errs in the management of the trust, and is guilty of a breach of trust, yet if he goes out of the trust with the approbation of the beneficiary, it must first be made good out of the estate of the person who consented to it.”<sup>1</sup> And the Court will enquire whether and when the cestui que trust had notice of the breach of trust.<sup>2</sup> No man, having a right to require the performance of a duty, who becomes a party to the delay in the performance of it, can complain of any consequences which may arise from such delay. There is a marked distinction between the degree of knowledge and sanction necessary for the purpose of exonerating a trustee from that which was clearly a breach of trust, and that which is necessary to preclude the cestui que trust from complaining of that not being done, the omission to do which, with the concurrence of the cestui que trust, never constituted a breach of trust. In the first case, it is used to release a right and discharge an obligation already perfected by the breach of trust; in the latter, only to prevent a right from arising from the non-performance of a duty which it was competent for the cestui que trust to dispense with.<sup>3</sup> “It is established by all the cases,” said Lord Eldon,<sup>4</sup> “that if the cestui que trust joins with the trustees in that which is a breach of trust, knowing the circumstances, such a cestui que trust can never complain of such a breach of trust. I go further, and agree, that either concurrence in the act, or acquiescence without original concurrence, will release the trustees; but that is only a general rule, and the Court must inquire into the circumstances which induced concurrence or acquiescence; recollecting in the conduct of that inquiry, how important it is, on the one hand, to secure the property of the cestui que trust, and on the other, not to deter men from undertaking trusts, from the performance of which they seldom obtain either satisfaction or gratitude.”

Where trustees allowed property settled upon the marriage of a lady to remain uninvested in the hands of one of their co-trustees, the lady being aware of the facts, and the trustee with whom the money was, subsequently became insolvent, it was held, that the co-trustees had been guilty of a breach of trust, but that the lady was debarred by acquiescence from obtaining any relief from them.<sup>5</sup>

LECTURE VII. If the trustees have induced the cestuis que trustent to assent to the breach of trust by fraud, their liability will, of course, remain unaltered.<sup>1</sup>

Fraud by trustees.

By cestui que trust.

Acquiescence.

If cestuis que trustent, who are not competent to contract, fraudulently induce their trustees to commit a breach of trust, they are debarred from afterwards calling upon the trustees to make good any loss.<sup>2</sup>

Cestuis que trustent may debar themselves from obtaining relief in respect of a breach of trust either by direct acquiescence in the act,<sup>3</sup> or else by standing by and allowing the wrongful act complained of to be done without objection.<sup>4</sup>

The term acquiescence will have different significations attached to it, according to whether the acquiescence alleged, occurs while the act acquiesced in is in progress, or only after it has been completed. "If," said Thesiger, L. J.,<sup>5</sup> "a person having a right, and seeing another person about to commit, or in the course of committing, an act infringing upon that right, stands by in such a manner as really to induce the person committing the act, and who might otherwise have abstained from it, to believe that he assents to its being committed, he cannot afterwards be heard to complain of the act. This, as Lord Cottenham said in The Duke of Leeds v. Earl of Amherst,<sup>6</sup> is the proper sense of the term 'acquiescence,' and in that sense may be defined as quiescence, under such circumstances as that assent may be reasonably inferred from it, and is no more than an instance of the law of estoppel by words or conduct. But when once the act is completed without any knowledge or assent upon the part of the person whose right is infringed, the matter is to be determined on very different legal considerations. A right of action has then vested in him which, at all events, as a general rule, cannot be divested without accord and satisfaction or release under seal. Mere submission to the injury for any time short of the period limited by Statute for the enforcement of the right of action, cannot take away such right, although under the name of laches it may afford a ground for refusing relief under some particular circumstances; and it is clear that even an express promise by the person injured that he would not take any legal proceedings to redress the injury done to him, could not by itself constitute a bar to such proceedings, for the promise would be without consideration, and therefore not binding.”<sup>1</sup>

VII.

In order that acquiescence may be successfully pleaded as a bar to a suit for relief in respect of a breach of trust, there must have been such delay as amounts to laches on the part of the cestui que trust. No precise time can be fixed, but delay for twenty years will disentitle the cestui que trust to relief.<sup>2</sup> The onus lies on the party relying on acquiescence to prove the facts from which the consent of the cestui que trust is to be inferred.<sup>3</sup> It is not the business of a cestui que trust to inform a trustee of his duty, and a cestui que trust will not, therefore, be barred on the ground of acquiescence, because he has not made enquiries which, if made, would have brought the fact that a breach of trust had been committed to his knowledge.<sup>4</sup> Nor will he be bound by accepting some portion of his claim before suit.<sup>5</sup> A cestui que trust, whose interest is reversionary, is apparently not bound to take proceedings to rectify a breach of trust, and will not be barred by acquiescence because he does not promptly act. “Length of time,” said Turner, L. J.,<sup>6</sup> “where it does not operate as a statutory or positive bar, operates, as I apprehend, simply as evidence of assent or acquiescence. The two propositions of a bar by length of time and by acquiescence are not, as I conceive, distinct propositions. They constitute but one proposition, and that proposition, when applied to a question of this description, is, that the cestui que trust assented to the breach of trust. A cestui que trust, whose interest is reversionary, is not bound to assert his title until it comes into possession, but the mere circumstance that he is not bound to assert his title, does

He is not, so far as I can see, less capable of giving such assent when his interest is in reversion than when it is in possession. Whether he has done so or not, is a question to be determined on the facts of each particular case." . . . "I am not prepared to say that where the trust is definite and clear, a breach of trust can be held to have been sanctioned or concurred in, by the mere knowledge and non-interference on the part of the cestui que trust before his interest has come into possession." It is almost impossible to attribute laches to a person whose interest is reversionary, because he does not sue before it vests in possession.<sup>1</sup> But knowledge of the facts may and ought, in some cases, to be presumed from great lapse of time.<sup>2</sup>

and confirmation.

Cestuis que trustent, who are competent to contract, may release their trustees from liability to account for a breach of trust, or they may confirm the transaction, in either of which cases they will be debarred from proceeding against the trustees.<sup>3</sup>

If, however, the transaction in respect of which the release is given is null and void, the release will not bar the cestui que trust.<sup>4</sup>

A cestui que trust who releases the principal in a fraud cannot go on against the other parties, though they would have been secondarily liable.<sup>5</sup>

In order that cestuis que trustent may be debarred from obtaining relief in respect of a breach of trust on any of the grounds which I have mentioned, they must be competent to contract, must have full information of all the facts relating to the breach of trust, must be aware of the relief to which they would be entitled in a Court of Equity, and must not have acted under compulsion. A cestui que trust who has lately come of age should have independent legal advice.<sup>6</sup>

of trust.

to another portion of the trust-property through another and distinct breach of trust. "When there are two separate funds, subject to trusts," said Kindersley, V. C.,<sup>1</sup> "and the trustees commit a breach of trust as to one, by which it is lost, I think it is impossible to permit the trustees to say 'we have improved the other fund, and that fund is bound to make up the loss on the other.' That I cannot hold. If the trustees have lost one part of the settled funds, they must answer for it, whatever may be the improvement of the other part."<sup>2</sup>

One trustee is not as such liable for a breach of trust committed by his predecessor,<sup>3</sup> or by his co-trustee. The leading case upon this point is Townley v. Sherborne,<sup>4</sup> where it was resolved by all the Judges, "that where lands or leases were conveyed to two or more upon trust, and one of them receives all, or the most part of the profits, and after dieth or decayeth in his estate, his co-trustees shall not be charged, or be compelled in this Court (the Court of Chancery) to answer for the receipts of him so dying or decayed, unless some practice, fraud, or evil dealing appear to have been in them to prejudice their trust; for they being by law joint tenants or tenants-in-common, every one by law may receive either all or as much of the profits as he can come by, and if two executors be, and one of them waste all, or any part of the estate, the devastavit shall, by law, charge him only, and not his co-executor; and in that case, equitas sequitur legem, there having been many precedents that one executor shall not answer, nor be charged for the act or default of his companion.

Liability
for breach of trust by predecessor or co-
trustees.

"And it is no breach of trust to permit one of the trustees to receive all or the most part of the profits, it falling out many times that some of the trustees live far from the lands, and one put in trust out of other respects than to be troubled with the receipt of the profits."<sup>5</sup>

And it was further resolved, that "if, upon the proofs or circumstances, the Court be satisfied that there be dolus malus, or any evil practice, fraud, or ill-intent in him that permitted his companion to receive the whole profits, he may be charged though he receive nothing."

ity.

It is now settled, overruling the earlier cases, that a trustee who joins with his co-trustees in a receipt for trust-money when it is indispensable that he should do so for conformity, will not, from that act alone, be made liable for any misapplication of the trust-property by his co-trustees into whose hands it comes. "It seems," said Lord Cowper,<sup>1</sup> "to be substantial injustice to decree a man to answer for money which he did not receive, at the same time that the charge upon him by his joining in the receipts is but notional."<sup>2</sup> "When the administration of the trust is vested in co-trustees, a receipt for money paid to the account of the trust must be authenticated by the signature of all the trustees in their joint capacity, and it would be tyranny to punish a trustee for an act which the very nature of his office will not permit him to decline."<sup>3</sup> The trustee who seeks to be discharged from liability, on the ground that he only signed the receipt for conformity, must show that the money acknowledged to have been received by all, was in fact received by the co-trustees, and that he only joined for conformity.<sup>4</sup> A joint receipt will charge trustees in solido each, if there is no other proof of the receipt of the money. As if a mortgage is devised in trust to three trustees, and the mortgagor, with his witness, meets them to pay it off; the money is laid on the table, and the mortgagor, having obtained a reconveyance and receipt for his money, withdraws, each trustee is answerable in solido.<sup>5</sup>

And where it cannot be distinguished how much was received by one trustee, and how much by the other, each will be charged with the whole; for, in such case, the trustees are to blame for not keeping distinct accounts. It is like throwing corn or money into another's heap, where there is no reason that he who made the difficulty should have the whole; on the contrary, because it cannot be distinguished he shall have no part.<sup>6</sup>

if he allows the money, for which he has given a receipt, to remain uninvested for a long time,<sup>1</sup> or if he sanctions an improper investment.<sup>2</sup> “Though,” said Lord Eldon,<sup>3</sup> “a trustee is safe, if he does no more than authorize the receipt and retainer of the money as far as the act is within the due execution of the power, yet, if it is proved that a trustee, under a duty to say, his co-trustee shall not retain the money beyond the time during which the transaction requires retainer, and says, with his knowledge, and therefore with his consent, the co-trustee has not laid it out according to the trust, but has kept it, or lent it, in opposition to the trust, and the other trustee permits that for ten years together, the question turns upon this—not whether the receipt of the money was right, but whether the use of it, subsequent to that receipt, was right after the knowledge of the trustee, that it had got into a course of abuse . . . . As soon as a trustee is fixed with knowledge that his co-trustee is misapplying the money, a duty is imposed upon him to bring it back into the joint custody of those who ought to take better care of it. It is the duty of a trustee who signs a receipt for conformity and allows the trust-money to get into the hands of his co-trustee, to ascertain for what purposes the money is required, and personally to ascertain that it has been duly invested. It is not enough for him to rely upon a statement by the co-trustee that such is the case.”<sup>4</sup>

The law on the point now under consideration was discussed at some length in Walker v. Symonds.<sup>5</sup> There a sum of money secured upon a mortgage was assigned to three trustees, Donnithorne, Griffith, and Symonds, upon certain trusts. The mortgage was paid off in 1791, and the proceeds, with the approbation of Griffith and Symonds, came into the hands of Donnithorne, who invested it in securities of the East India Company, which were paid off in 1795. Donnithorne again received the money. The co-trustees allowed Donnithorne to retain the money, taking a bond from him, he promising to give a mortgage over some landed estates belonging to him. This he never did, and died in 1796 insolvent; a bill by the cestuis que trustent against Griffith and Symonds, to set aside a compromise of the breach of trust on the ground that it had been fraudulently obtained, was dismissed, Sir William Grant, M. R., considering that the fraud had not been proved. His Honor said, p. 41 : " What are the transactions ? The money had been properly laid out ; it had been paid in without any act of the trustees ; the trustees did no act to call in the money or change its situation ; they were obliged to receive it ; so far they were blameless. It came to Donnithorne's hands, and the trustees were not to blame in letting it come to his hands ; but they might have afterwards made themselves responsible, by merely not doing what was incumbent on them ; by permitting the money to remain a considerable time in the hands of their co-trustee, they might, without any positive act on their part, have made themselves liable ; that will depend on the degree and extent of their laches in suffering the money to remain in the hands of the trustee. Brice v. Stokes<sup>1</sup> proceeds upon the doctrine, that a trustee may become liable by knowing that his co-trustee had the money, and leaving it there. They being authorized to put the money out on mortgage, it would be rather hard to say they were guilty of laches by giving Donnithorne a little time to find a mortgage, taking his bond in the meantime." On appeal the decision of Sir William Grant was reversed, and an enquiry was directed as to the acts of the trustees as to the receipt and placing out of the trust-moneys up to the date of Donnithorne's death. On the case coming on for further directions, Lord Eldon said :<sup>2</sup> " The case comes back with a report stating a clear breach of trust in leaving the trust-fund in the situation represented from 1791 to 1793 and from 1793 to 1795. The report states that the money was laid out with the consent of the trustees, in India bills, payable to Donnithorne ; a palpable breach of trust, by placing the fund under his control, secured by little more than a promissory note payable to himself. It was probable that in 1793 he would receive the money, and it would be lodged in his hands,—and I repeat, that although the Court in directing an inquiry will proceed as favourably as it can to trustees who have laid out the money on security from which they cannot with activity recover it, yet no Judge can say that they are not guilty of a breach of trust, if they suffer it to lie out on such a security during so long a time.<sup>1</sup> . . . The trustees were guilty of a breach of trust in permitting the money to remain on bills payable to Donnithorne alone, and in leaving the state of the funds unascertained for five years.<sup>2</sup> . . . The Master of the Rolls seems to have thought, that the only breach of trust was taking the bond; that was a breach of trust; but he says, and I think rightly, that if he had not found other grounds for dismissing the bill, inquiry would have been necessary. I agree with the Master of the Rolls, that inquiry might, on the principles of this Court, have discharged the trustees in given circumstances from breach of trust. If, without further participation, they, in 1795, had found that they, being implicated in no breach of trust till that time, had a co-trustee who had been guilty of a shameful violation of his duty, and immediately exerted themselves to obtain from him a mortgage, which was their object at that time, and used their utmost efforts, instead of filing a bill in this Court against him, which, perhaps, might have destroyed his means of giving security, I should have hesitated long before I charged them, if inquiry had satisfied me that for a simple contract debt due to them they had taken a bond and a mortgage, instead of instituting a suit, with the rational hope that by means of the bond and the mortgage they should obtain payment from their co-trustee; in such circumstances, I should readily agree with the Master of the Rolls. But when they take no steps on the arrival of the period at which the bond becomes payable, and choose to communicate to the cestui que trust that they have taken a bond, but not what is the effect of it, that is not a communication which can entitle them, in this stage of the cause, to insist on circumstances of which, if inquiry had been directed, they might possibly have availed themselves for their protection.”

 found to be the result of all the best authorities upon the subject," said Lord Cottenham,<sup>3</sup> "that though a personal representative, acting strictly within the line of his duty, and exercising reasonable care and diligence, will not be responsible for the failure or depreciation of the fund in which any part of the estate may be invested, or for the insolvency or misconduct of any person who may have possessed it, yet if that line of duty be not strictly pursued, and any part of the property be invested by such personal representative in funds or upon securities not authorized, or be put within the control of persons who ought not to be intrusted with it, and a loss be thereby eventually sustained, such personal representative will be liable to make it good, however unexpected the result—however little likely to arise from the course adopted—and however free such conduct may have been from any improper motive. Thus, if he omit to sell property when it ought to be sold, and it be afterwards lost without any fault of his, he is liable;<sup>4</sup> or if he leave money due upon personal security, which, though good at the time, afterwards fails.<sup>5</sup> And the case is stronger if he be himself the author of the improper investment, as upon personal security, or an unauthorized fund. Thus, he is not liable, upon a proper investment in the 3 per cents, for loss occasioned by fluctuations of that fund.<sup>6</sup> But he is for the fluctuations of any unauthorized fund.<sup>7</sup> So, when the loss arises from the dishonesty or failure of any one to whom the possession of part of the estate has been entrusted. Necessity, which includes the regular course of business in administering the property, will, in equity, exonerate the personal representative. But if without such necessity he be instrumental in giving to the person failing possession of any part of the property, he will be

Formerly it was considered that an executor joining in a receipt for conformity made himself liable; for there is no necessity for him to do so, as the receipt of one executor is a sufficient discharge, whereas the receipt of one trustee is not.<sup>2</sup> But this rule has since been modified. In Walker v. Symonds<sup>3</sup> Lord Eldon said: "Without going through all the cases, it is obvious that prima facie there is this distinction between executors and trustees, that one executor can, and one trustee cannot, give a discharge: and it may frequently happen, as in Brice v. Stokes<sup>4</sup> it actually happened, not only that one trustee cannot give a discharge, but that the instrument of trust provides that there shall be no discharge without an act in which all the trustees join. Executors seem formerly to have been charged on much stricter principles, if they joined unnecessarily, though without taking control of the money; that rule is now altered: whether the alteration is wholesome may be a question. It may be laid down now, as in Brice v. Stokes,<sup>5</sup> that though one executor has joined in a receipt, yet whether he is liable shall depend on his acting. The former was a simple rule, that joining shall be considered as acting; but in the cases since the rule, that joining alone does not impose responsibility scarcely two Judges agree." And in Joy v. Campbell<sup>6</sup> Lord Redesdale said: "The distinction seems to be this, with respect to a mere signing, that if a receipt be given for the mere purpose of form, then the signing will not charge the person not receiving; but if it be given under circumstances purporting that the money, though not actually received by both executors, was under the control of both, such a receipt shall charge; and the true question in all these cases seems to have been, whether the money was under the control of both executors. If it was so considered by the person paying the money, then the joining in the receipt by the executor, who did not actually receive it, amounted to a direction to pay his co-executor; for it could have no other meaning. He became responsible for the application of the money just as if he had received it." And in Doyle v. Blake<sup>1</sup> his Lordship said: "The true consideration in a question of this kind is, whether the executor who merely joins in the receipt had a control, and his joining in the receipt is evidence of that control, although the money was actually received by the other." The principles, therefore, which govern the case of trustees joining for conformity will apparently be applicable, and an executor will not be responsible for joining, so long as he acts subsequently in a proper manner. Thus an executor indorsing a bill of exchange,<sup>2</sup> or joining in a sale of securities<sup>3</sup> in order to enable the co-executor to receive the money, will not be liable in the absence of negligence.

Executor

quired.

Executors joining in a transfer to a co-executor upon his representation that the money is required for the payment of debts, must take care to ascertain that the money is really required for that purpose, and will be liable for negligence if it turns out that it was not wanted, or for the portion not applied to that purpose, but not for any portion properly expended. The person to whom the representation is made, has imposed upon him at least ordinary and reasonable diligence to inquire whether the representation is true.<sup>4</sup> In Lord Shipbrook v. Lord Hinchinbrook,<sup>5</sup> which was a case of this nature, Lord Eldon said: "This case depends upon the principle applicable to trustees. The fund being vested in the names of all the executors, it was necessary that all should join in the act which placed the property in the hands of one of them; and my mind had reached this conclusion, that, as these executors could not be held answerable for the balance, for which their co-executor was to account separately, they had a right to contend, at least, that they should be allowed so much of the fund as had been applied to the purpose to which it ought to have been applied, as they might have been compelled so to apply it. . . . These executors ought at least to have made some inquiry of their co-executor as to what had been doing in the administration. If, making that inquiry, they were misled, that is a distinct case; but, making no inquiry, they are satisfied with the information which proves groundless, that he wants the money for the purpose of paying debts. They ought to have inquired how that could be; and though it is not a consequence that they might not place the remainder of the property in his hands, it must surely be at their risk, if they were aware that he had been not acting according to his trust, but grossly violating it.”<sup>1</sup>

The rule that a trustee as such is not liable for a breach of trust committed by his co-trustee, extends to co-executors.<sup>2</sup> But it is otherwise if he has concurred in the misapplication of the fund.<sup>3</sup> In Mucklow v. Fuller<sup>4</sup> a trustee, who as executor had proved the will, was held to be liable to make good a loss incurred by his allowing a debt from his co-executor to remain outstanding, although the will contained the usual indemnity-clause. In Booth v. Booth,<sup>5</sup> a testator bequeathed his estate to his partner Booth and to one Batkin upon trust to invest it for the benefit of his wife and children. Both Booth and Batkin proved the will, and Booth retained the testator's moneys in the trade, and ultimately they were lost. Batkin took no active part in the trusts, but was cognizant of the breach of trust, and took no steps to prevent it. It was held, that he was responsible for the consequences of the breach of trust. “The two executors,” said Lord Langdale, “proved the will; they take on themselves the trust and the duty of performing it. From that moment it was their duty to do all that was necessary for the conversion of the estate into money, and to see the dividends duly applied; but Batkin, unfortunately, did not consider that by proving the will he had undertaken any duty, or incurred any responsibility; he says he proved the will in consequence of the request of the widow, who informed him that he would not thereby undertake any duty or be responsible for anything. It is important that it should be well understood that no one can safely act in that manner, and that the law will not permit a party to neglect the duty which by proving the will he has undertaken. I am of opinion that he became liable for the performance of the trusts, and for any consequences arising from a breach of them. Part of the testator's property was engaged in trade; that trade ought to have been put an end to, and the property invested. Batkin, it appears, went to the place of business from time to time, and it is, therefore, clear that he knew that what ought to have been done was not performed. He acquiesced, week by week, and year by year, in the breach of trust which his co-executor was committing. There is no corrupt motive—no receipt of money which he misapplied to be attributed to him, but he undertook the performance of a duty which he did not perform. This is no small blame: a man cannot be allowed to neglect a duty which he has undertaken. He permitted his co-executor to carry on the trade, and consequently must be considered, in this Court, a party to this breach of duty. It is said, in extenuation, that he did this from the best motives; he thought the brother of the testator was the proper person to carry on the business; he thought there would be more profit made by this mode of dealing with the property, and that it was more advantageous for the children. All this might have been very right to do, and to acquiesce in, if he had undertaken to make good any loss which might occur in the course of the experiment; he could not, however, so act without incurring that responsibility if a loss occurred. I am of opinion, on the authorities and on the established rules of the Court, to which it is not necessary to refer, that a trustee who stands by and sees a breach of trust committed by his co-trustee, becomes responsible for that breach of trust."

Styles v.
Guy.

The authorities on the question of the liability of an executor who allows his co-executor to retain the assets of the testator's estate were discussed in the case of Styles v. Guy<sup>1</sup> by Lord Cottenham. His Lordship, after referring to various cases, said: "In the reported cases, the loss appears to have been of property received by the defaulting executor after the testator's death, and not of a debt due from him before that event; but this cannot furnish any distinction against the co-executor: in the latter case, a debt due from an executor constitutes part of the assets; but over which the co-executor could not have had any control; whereas he had the means of watching, and, if necessary, of interfering with the receipt by the defaulting executor of assets after the death. His being passive cannot be an immunity for him in the case of assets received, and not in the case of a debt retained; but how was this immunity consistent with the admitted liability of all executors for losses from negligence, and inactivity in not calling in debts due to the estate? Could passiveness be a protection in the case of property lost in the hands of a co-executor, but an offence in the case of property lost in the hands of other debtors to the estates? The liability in the latter case arises from the soundest principle. If a person named executor does not choose to accept the office, he has only to renounce, or, at least, to abstain from proving; but if he proves, he thereby accepts the office, and becomes bound to perform the duties of it, and is liable for the consequences of his neglecting to perform them. Of these duties a principal one is to call in and collect such parts of the estate as are not in a proper state of investment. If he knows, or has the means of knowing, that part of the estate is not in a proper state of investment, but is held upon personal security only, and not necessarily so for the purposes of the will, is it not part of the duty he has undertaken, to interfere and to take measures, if necessary, for putting such property in a proper state of investment; or is it no part of his duty because the property is in the hands of a co-executor, and not of any stranger to the estate? It is impossible to find any principle for such a distinction. . . . There cannot be one rule applicable to a portion of the estate given to the executor upon particular trusts, and another rule applicable to another portion of the estate constituting the residue given to the executor for the general purposes of the will. In both cases, the executors are trustees of the funds they are to administer for the purposes specified, and their responsibility with respect to each of such funds must be the same. . . . From what I have already said, it will have been seen that I approve of the principle of the decisions in Mucklow v. Fuller,<sup>1</sup> Booth v. Booth,<sup>2</sup> and Lincoln v. Wright,<sup>3</sup> and that I cannot discover any principle for distinguishing between losses by not calling in debts due from debtors to the estate or balances due from executors. These cases establish, that it is the duty of all

LECTURE VII.        executors to watch over, and, if necessary, to correct the conduct of each other, and the moment that is established, all ground of distinction between the two classes of cases ceases. Finding, therefore, a principle adopted and acted upon for many years and in many decisions, of the justice and grounds of which I fully approve, I cannot feel any disposition to shake its authority, because I cannot reconcile it with dicta and doctrines of a much earlier date respecting the security of an executor who is passive. I have discussed this case much more at large than any difficulty would seem to warrant, because I thought it material to draw the attention of those who may hold the office of executors, to the doctrine that they cannot safely rely upon what they may find in the earlier cases, laying it down that a devastavit by one of two executors shall not charge his companion, provided he has not intentionally or otherwise contributed to it. The later authorities to which I have referred must show them that passiveness will, in many cases, furnish no protection; but that negligence and inattention in not interfering with, and taking proper measures to prevent or correct the improper conduct of their co-executor, may subject them to responsibilities from which the language of the earlier cases might lead them to suppose they were exempt. The co-executors appear, in this case, to be free from any moral blame; they derived no benefit, but have suffered much from the breach of trust of their co-executor; but they knew that part of the testator's property remained in his hands, and that it was, therefore, not in a proper state of investment: they knew, therefore, that a breach of trust by him was actually in operation, and, excepting some unprofitable applications for accounts and a settlement, nothing was done by them to secure this property so known by them to be in peril."

Liability
under decree for common account.

Under a decree against executors for the common accounts, each is chargeable only with his actual or constructive receipts, and, therefore, in such a suit an executor will escape liability by showing, either that he has been only passive, or that he has only acted so far as it was necessary to enable his co-executor to administer the estate; but it is otherwise where he is sought to be made liable for wilful neglect and default.<sup>1</sup>

The principle by which an executor is made liable if he joins with his co-executor in a receipt, is applicable when he has received any portion of the testator's assets and voluntarily and unnecessarily hands it over to his co-executor.<sup>1</sup> So the executor is liable if he sanctions the property remaining in the hands of his co-executor,<sup>2</sup> or does any act by which the co-executor gets absolute possession of the assets, and which but for that act he could not have obtained possession of, such as handing over securities,<sup>3</sup> drawing or endorsing a bill of exchange.<sup>4</sup>

VII.
Unnecessarily handing over assets.

When it was unnecessary that he should do so, the payment over in order to charge must be unnecessary. Under certain circumstances, it may be necessary that one executor should pay over money to his co-executors, and in such a case no liability will attach; as for instance, if the payment is made to enable the executor who receives the money to discharge debts payable where he resides,<sup>5</sup> or to carry on a trade,<sup>6</sup> or where the executor has no legal right to retain the money.<sup>7</sup>

So, the indorsing a bill of exchange made payable to two agents who, on the death of the principal, became his executors in order to enable one to receive the money, was held not to charge the one who did not receive.<sup>8</sup>

If by agreement between the executors one is appointed to receive and intermeddle with such part of the estate and another with such a part, each of them will be chargeable with the whole, because the receipts of each are pursuant to the agreement made betwixt both.<sup>9</sup>

An executor is not liable for any portion of the fund which has been properly applied.<sup>10</sup>

LECTURE VII. If a trustee becomes aware that his co-trustee threatens, or intends to commit a breach of trust, it is his duty to take steps to prevent it, and, if necessary, to apply for an injunction under s. 54 of the Specific Relief Act, 1 of 1877. Restrain- ing intend- ed breach of trust. If a breach of trust has been committed, the trustee should institute proceedings against the co-trustee to compel him to restore the property to its proper condition.<sup>2</sup>

If a trustee conceals a breach of trust,<sup>3</sup> or refrains from taking proceedings,<sup>4</sup> he will be liable for loss.

Several lia- bility of co-trustees. There is no primary liability in respect of a breach of trust, all parties to it being equally liable for the whole of the loss occasioned by the wrongful act or default, and it is no objection to a suit brought by parties seeking relief against a breach of trust, that one of the defendants against whom no relief is prayed, may have been a party to such breach of trust.<sup>5</sup>

If, however, it appears that one trustee took a more active part in the breach of trust, the loss as between the trustees may be thrown upon the more guilty party, who, or if he be dead, his estate, may be ordered to indemnify the passive trustee.<sup>6</sup>

Limitation of liability. The joint liability of trustees may be taken away by express contract, as where it is agreed each trustee shall receive, and only be answerable for a certain proportion of the trust-estate, in such a case the trustees will only be liable for the amount in their own custody.<sup>7</sup>

Where several trustees are involved in one common breach of trust, a cestui que trust, suffering from that breach and proving that the transaction was neither authorized nor adopted by him, may proceed against either or all of the trustees.<sup>8</sup>

Contribu- tion. Should there be no distinction between the guilt of the trustees, and one of them has been compelled to bear the

If there is any fund in Court in the suit, which is payable to the trustee against whom contribution is sought, the Court will impound the fund in order to make good what is due from him. Thus, if a fund in Court is set apart to pay a legacy bequeathed to one of two defaulting trustees who has paid no part of the balance due from him, the other trustee who has paid the whole is entitled to ask the Court to impound the fund, in order to make good the share of the debt which the person who was both trustee and legatee ought to have paid.<sup>6</sup>

ing fund in

Where several defendants are involved in a breach of trust, the Court, in decreeing relief in respect of it, decrees the costs of the suit against them all, on the principle of giving the plaintiff the greater security for the payment, and without regard to the relative degrees of culpability in the defendants.<sup>7</sup>

VII.

An instrument of trust drawn according to the English form, whether a will or a deed, usually contains a clause declaring that one trustee shall not be answerable for the receipts, acts, or defaults of his co-trustee. But the proviso, while it informs the trustee of the general doctrines of the Court, adds nothing to his security against the liabilities of his office.<sup>2</sup> A Court of Equity infuses such a clause into every instrument creating a trust; it comes, therefore, to little more than what a Court of Equity will do without any direction;<sup>3</sup> and a person can have no better right upon the expression of what would, if not expressed, be implied.<sup>4</sup>

clause.

Such a clause only protects a trustee from liability for losses when his acts have been justifiable; as for instance, if he invests in a security authorized by the instrument of trust, and the security fails, he will not be liable.<sup>5</sup>

In Bone v. Cook<sup>6</sup> a testator bequeathed certain property to B and C, and directed them to sell it and invest the proceeds for the benefit of D. B and C sold the property, and the purchase-money was received by B and retained in his hands. After the expiration of two years, C called upon B to make the investment. He was unable to do so, became insolvent, and the money was lost. C was held liable, although there was a provision in the instrument creating the trust that the trustees should not be answerable for any trust-moneys further than each person for what he should actually receive.

In order to exempt a trustee from liability for a breach of trust in respect of any of the acts to which I have referred, by force of an express declaration in the instrument of trust, the declaration must be of the very strongest kind; and no declaration, however strong, can exempt a trustee from liability if he has been guilty of gross misconduct. In Wilkins v. Hogg,<sup>7</sup> a suit against two of three trustees, to make good trust-moneys, &c., they had allowed their co-trustee to receive, was dismissed with costs, the instrument creating the trust having, besides the usual indemnity-clause, provided "that any trustee who should

Section 37 of Act XXVIII of 1866 provides, in cases to which English law is applicable, that every deed, will, or other instrument creating a trust, either expressly or by implication, shall, without prejudice to the clauses actually contained therein, be deemed to contain a clause in the words and to the effect following,—that is to say, "that the trustees or trustee for the time being of the said deed, will, or other instrument, shall be respectively chargeable only for such money, stocks, funds, and securities as they shall respectively actually receive, notwithstanding their respectively signing any receipt for the sake of conformity, and shall be answerable and accountable only for their own acts, receipts, neglects, or defaults, and not for those of each other, nor for any banker, broker, or other person with whom any trust-moneys or securities may be deposited, nor for the insufficiency or deficiency of any stocks, funds, or securities, nor for any other loss, unless the same shall happen through their own wilful default respectively; and also that it shall be lawful for the trustees or trustee, for the time being, of the said deed, will, or other instrument, to reimburse themselves or himself, or pay or discharge out of the trust premises all expenses incurred in or about the execution of the trusts or powers of the said deed, will, or other instrument."

THE trustees are entitled to have the custody of the instrument creating the trust, and of all muniments of title relating to the trust-estate, and it will be a breach of their duty if, where there is a trust to perform, they willingly suffer the title-deeds or muniments relating to the trust-property to get out of their possession,<sup>1</sup> it being, as we have seen,<sup>2</sup> their duty to maintain and defend all suits necessary for the protection and preservation of the trust-property, as for instance, to sue tenants for rent, and for this purpose they must have the documents relating to the trust.<sup>3</sup> Moreover, if a cestui que trust for life were allowed to have the custody of the title-deeds, he might mortgage or convey the trust-property for valuable consideration without notice, and the interests of remaindermen would be injured. In such a case the trustees might, if it appeared that they acted fraudulently or with gross negligence, be made personally responsible not only to the other

LECTURE cestuis que trustent, but to third parties.<sup>1</sup> It being the right of the trustees to have possession of the title-deeds, they may sue to have them delivered up.<sup>2</sup> Trustees are bound to produce all cases and opinions of counsel, not intended for their own defence, to the cestui que trust.<sup>3</sup>

trustee to
ment.

A trustee, as we shall see hereafter, has no right, in the absence of express stipulation, to charge anything for the trouble he incurs in the management of the trust. But he is entitled to be reimbursed for expenses out of pocket,<sup>4</sup> such as the expenses caused by the employment of a bailiff,<sup>5</sup> an agent to collect rents, especially when the estate is at a distance,<sup>6</sup> and of a legal adviser.<sup>7</sup> So he may be reimbursed for fees to counsel<sup>8</sup> and travelling expenses<sup>9</sup> if properly incurred.<sup>10</sup> And it is not necessary that the instrument creating the trust should contain an express provision allowing the trustees to charge.<sup>11</sup>

"The first principle of law," said Lord Cottenham,<sup>12</sup> "is of course to reimburse the trustees all expenses properly incurred by them in discharge of the duties of the trust." "It is," said Lord Eldon, "in the nature of the office of a trustee, whether expressed in the instrument of trust or not, that the trust-property shall reimburse him all the charges and expenses incurred in the execution of the trust."<sup>13</sup> The expenditure must have been necessary, or must have been incurred at the request of the cestui que trust.<sup>14</sup> Trustees of a void deed, however, cannot charge costs and expenses incurred by them as against the persons who get the deed set aside,<sup>15</sup> though they will be allowed for improvements.<sup>1</sup> If the trustees have been guilty of fraud, they will not be allowed their expenses, even if there is a direction in the instrument of trust directing allowances for expenses.<sup>2</sup> Where trustees were wrongfully appointed, but acted bond fide, and believed themselves to have been duly appointed, they were allowed their costs, charges, and expenses notwithstanding the defect of title.<sup>3</sup> A trustee who has obtained his costs as between party and party in a suit respecting the trust-fund, will be entitled to charges and expenses reasonably and properly incurred which would not be allowed on taxation.<sup>4</sup> The fact that a trustee has been unsuccessful in litigation either as plaintiff or defendant, will not, in the absence of misconduct, disentitle him to be reimbursed his costs.<sup>5</sup> And a trustee or executor, who is ordered to pay costs to the plaintiff, is entitled, unless he has forfeited his right by some misconduct, to recover from the estate which he has defended, not only the costs which he has incurred to the adversary, but also the costs which he has paid to his own legal adviser.<sup>6</sup> He will not be allowed interest on costs paid by him.<sup>7</sup> If a suit respecting the trust-fund has been caused by the negligence of the trustees, and à fortiori through their misconduct, or has been instituted in the face of proper advice,<sup>8</sup> they will not be entitled to costs.<sup>9</sup>

A trustee or executor is not entitled to be allowed without question the amount of bills of costs which he has paid bond fide to the legal adviser to the trust, but such bills may be modified by the Court.<sup>10</sup>

LECTURE for the deceased executor in taking the account of his debt
VIII. must be set off against the sum found due from him.<sup>1</sup>

Where, in a suit to set aside a compromise made on behalf of infants by trustees, personal fraud was charged against one of the trustees, and the suit was dismissed with costs to be paid by the next friend, who could not pay, the trustee was held to be entitled to be paid his costs out of the estate, as he had defended the suit for the benefit of the estate, though at the same time he had defended his own character.<sup>2</sup>

Expenses

A trustee will be allowed to reimburse himself for necessary expenses incurred in the management of the trust-estate, even though the instrument of trust provides a remuneration for trouble. Thus, where a testator, who gave annuities to his trustees as a recompense for their care and trouble in the execution of the will, died possessed of a number of houses let at weekly rents, the trustees were held to be entitled to employ an agent to collect the rents and to pay him out of the trust-funds.<sup>3</sup> The trustee should keep a regular account of the expenses incurred. If he does not, the Courts will order a reasonable allowance, taking care that the remissness and negligence of the trustee in not having kept accounts shall not be encouraged.<sup>4</sup>

by trustee.

As it is a rule that the cestui que trust ought to save the trustee harmless as to all damages relating to the trust, so within the reason of that rule, where the trustee has honestly and fairly, without any possibility of being a gainer, laid down money, by which the cestui que trust is discharged from being liable for a loss, or from a plain and great hazard of being so, the trustee ought to be repaid.<sup>5</sup> If he has a right to protect the property from immediate and direct injury, he must have the same right where the injury threatened is indirect but probable.<sup>6</sup> Thus, in several cases it has been held, that conservators of public works and Municipal Commissioners are entitled to use the trust-funds at their disposal in opposing proposed Acts of Parliament which would injure the trust-property.<sup>7</sup>

And trustees have been allowed expenses for acts which Repairs. were reasonable, though perhaps not strictly according to law.<sup>2</sup> But a trustee, though he will be allowed to reimburse himself for moneys expended in the repair and preservation of the trust-property, will not be allowed to charge for sums laid out in increasing the value of it.<sup>3</sup>

A trustee is entitled to a lien upon the trust-estate for Lien for expenses. his out-of-pocket expenses, so long as it remains trust-estate,<sup>4</sup> but not for the expenses of any act not warranted by the trust.<sup>5</sup> He may retain the trust-deeds,<sup>6</sup> and the cestui que trust cannot compel a conveyance until the lien is discharged, and this lien has priority over costs of a suit,<sup>7</sup> or to any charge created by the cestui que trust.<sup>8</sup>

If a cestui que trust advances money for the purpose of paying a sum properly payable out of the corpus of the trust-funds, he will be entitled to a lien on the corpus for the amount advanced.<sup>9</sup>

But agents and other persons employed by the trustees, Agents have no lien. such as solicitors, surveyors, &c., have no lien,<sup>10</sup> and except in the case of fraud are accountable only to the trustees.<sup>11</sup> If the instrument creating the trust expressly directs that a particular individual is to be employed at a salary, there will be a trust in his favour, and he will have a claim for his remuneration, but that can hardly be called a lien.<sup>12</sup> It must appear that it was the intention of the author of the trust that the person named should be employed; a

LECTURE VIII. — mere request or recommendation is not sufficient.<sup>1</sup> The solicitor of trustees may set off payments which have properly been made by him in the performance of the trust against his receipts in the same matter.<sup>2</sup>

Interest on advances. A trustee who pays money out of his own pocket in respect of debts is in no worse position than a stranger who makes advances, and is entitled to interest on his debt.<sup>3</sup>

Advances in respect of different trusts. "If a person be trustee of different estates for the same cestui que trust under the same instrument, and he incurs expenses on account of one estate in respect of which he has no funds, it is presumed that he may apply to their discharge any money which has come to his hands from any other of the estates; but he would not be justified in mixing up claims under one instrument of trust with those under another."<sup>4</sup>

Personal liability of cestui que trust to reimburse. If the trust-fund fails, and the trustees, acting in good faith and within their powers, have expended money for the benefit of the trust-estate, they may call upon the cestuis que trustent personally to reimburse them. "I think," said Turner, L. J.,<sup>5</sup> "that where parties place others in the position of trustees for them, they are in equity personally bound to indemnify them against the consequences resulting from that position." The money must have been properly expended.<sup>6</sup>

Indemnity. A trustee who has incurred a liability in respect of the trust-estate, may call upon the cestuis que trustent to indemnify him against the liability,<sup>7</sup> even before any actual loss has been incurred.<sup>8</sup>

Suit to recover advances. A trustee who has expended monies on the trust-estate at the request of a cestui que trust, may institute proceedings against him, or if he be dead, against his representatives, to recover the amount expended, provided that the expenditure was justifiable.<sup>9</sup>

A person other than a trustee, who has reaped the benefit of a breach of trust, must indemnify the trustee to the extent of the amount actually received by such person under the breach; and where he is a beneficiary, the trustee has a charge on his interest in the trust-property for such amount.<sup>2</sup> "Now," said Lord Langdale,<sup>3</sup> "nothing can be more clear than the rule which is adopted by the Court in these cases, that if one party having a partial interest in the trust-fund induces the trustee to depart from the direction of the trust for his own benefit, and enjoys that benefit, he shall not be permitted personally to enjoy the benefit of the trust, while the trustees are subjected to a serious liability which he has brought upon them. What the Court does in such a case, is to lay hold of the partial interest to which that person is entitled, and apply it, so far as it will extend, in exoneration of the trustees, who, by his request and desire or acquiescence, or by any other mode of concurrence, have been induced to do the improper act."<sup>4</sup> But in such a case the Court will not order the cestui que trust personally to recoup the trustee.<sup>5</sup>

Application to Court for opinion in management of trust-property.

The Trustees' and Mortgagees' Powers Act<sup>2</sup> provides, in cases to which English law is applicable, that "any trustee, executor, or administrator, shall be at liberty, without the institution of a suit, to apply by petition to any Judge of the High Court for the opinion, advice, or direction of such Judge on any question respecting the management or administration of the trust-property, or the assets of any testator or intestate. Such application shall be served upon, or the hearing thereof shall be attended by, all persons interested in such application, or such of them as the said Judge shall think expedient. The trustee, executor, or administrator acting upon the opinion, advice, or direction given by the said Judge, shall be deemed, so far as regards his own responsibility, to have discharged his duty as such trustee, executor, or administrator in the subject-matter of such application. Provided, nevertheless, that this Act shall not extend to indemnify any trustee, executor, or administrator in respect of any act done in accordance with such opinion, advice, or direction as aforesaid, if such trustee, executor, or administrator shall have been guilty of any fraud or wilful concealment or misrepresentation in obtaining such opinion, advice, or direction: and the costs of such application as aforesaid shall be in the discretion of the Judge to whom the said application shall be made." These provisions are substantially the same as those of Lord St. Leonards's Act.<sup>3</sup> Under that Statute the Court of Chancery in England has advised trustees as to the appropriation of a fund for a legacy; as to advancement, maintenance, and advancement out of capital, change of investments, sale of houses, compromises; and as to taking proceedings.<sup>4</sup> Petitions for the advice of the Court should relate only to the management and investment of trust-property; the Court will not construe an instrument, or make any order affecting the rights of parties.<sup>5</sup> In In re Mackintosh's Settlement,<sup>6</sup> the Court sanctioned the compromise by trustees of a claim depending on foreign law and the accounts of disbursements on an estate in a foreign country, which accounts the trustees had no means of verifying. LECTURE

VIII.

No appeal lies in England from an order made by a Judge of first instance on such a petition, but an opinion has been given by the Lords Justices of Appeal at the request of one of the Vice-Chancellors.<sup>1</sup>

An order made under this section will only indemnify the trustees upon the facts stated in the petition.<sup>2</sup> No affidavits can be used.<sup>3</sup> It is not necessary that all the trustees should join in the petition, the words are "any trustee may apply."<sup>4</sup>

After the trust has been completed, the trustee is entitled to have his accounts examined and to have a settlement of them. He is bound to give accounts if demanded, but giving the accounts he is entitled, to use a familiar phrase, to have them wound up. If the party to receive is satisfied upon the account sent in, that nothing more is coming to him, he ought to close the account and give an acknowledgment which will be equivalent to a release; on the other hand, if the cestui que trust is dissatisfied with the accounts, he ought to require to have the accounts taken; he is not at liberty to do neither, and keep an action for an account hanging for an indefinite time over the head of the trustee.<sup>5</sup> Right to
of accounts.

A trustee may do all acts which are reasonable and proper for the realization, protection, or benefit of the trust-property, and for the safety and support of a cestui que trust who is not competent to contract, unless his powers in the case of a special trust are limited, when he may not go outside them. "Under particular circumstances," says Mr. Lewin,<sup>6</sup> "the trustee is held capable of exercising the discretionary powers of the bond fide proprietor; for the trust-estate itself might otherwise be injuriously affected. The necessity of the moment may demand immediate decision, while the sanction of the parties who are beneficially interested could not be procured without great inconvenience (as where the cestuis que trustent are a numerous class), or perhaps could not be obtained at all (as where the cestuis que trustent are under disability, or not yet in existence), the alternative of consulting the Court would always be attended with considerable expense, and, it may be, an expense wholly disproportioned to the importance of the occasion, and perhaps in the meantime the opportunity might be lost. It is, therefore, evidently in furtherance of the cestui que trust's own interest, that, where the circumstances of the case require it, the trustee should be at liberty to exercise a reasonable discretionary power.<sup>1</sup> But a trustee for adults should not take any proceeding without consulting his cestuis que trustent; and if he do, and the proceeding is disavowed by them, he may have to pay the costs himself.<sup>2</sup>

trust.

If there is a discretion to be exercised under the trust, the trustee may apply to the cestui que trust for his advice and assistance in the exercise of it, and if the cestui que trust refuses his aid, he will not be entitled afterwards to complain of what the trustee has done in the exercise of his own discretion. So again, where it is doubtful what ought to be done under a trust, the trustee may give notice to the cestui que trust of his intention to do a particular act, unless the cestui que trust interferes; and if the cestui que trust does not interfere, the Court will hold that the trustee is not liable for doing that act. There are cases in which the trust is not definite or precise. If the trust is definite and clear, the trustee is bound to follow it, and will not be excused for a breach of trust, merely because he has given notice to the cestui que trust of the act which he intends to commit.<sup>3</sup>

What acts
may do.

Trustees are entitled to do any act which they would be compelled to do by the Court at the suit of the cestuis que trustent, or which the Court itself would direct to be done.<sup>4</sup> For instance, trustees may cut down decaying timber,<sup>5</sup> or appropriate a legacy when the appropriation would have been directed by the Court.<sup>6</sup> So if they are authorized to sell land, they may do such acts as in the bond fide exercise of their discretion are necessary to carry out the sale.<sup>1</sup> And if a trustee acting in the bond fide exercise of his discretion, makes a payment which, though not authorized by the trust, is in his opinion necessary to enable him to execute the trust, he will be allowed such payment in passing his accounts, though he does not act prudently in assuming the responsibility of making such a payment without the sanction of the Court.<sup>2</sup> Again, trustees may avoid unnecessary formalities.<sup>3</sup>

VIII.

Where the cestui que trust is incapable of contracting, the trustee may expend money in necessary repairs in improving the estate.<sup>4</sup> But he may not expend money in unnecessary expenses, such as ornamental improvements.<sup>5</sup> So a trustee might be justified in insuring,<sup>6</sup> but where there is a tenant-for-life, he could not be advised to do so out of the income without the tenant-for-life's consent. But if an annuity and a policy on the life of the cestui que vie be made the subject of a settlement, it is implied that the trustee is to pay the premiums out of the income.<sup>7</sup>

An executor will be allowed a reasonable time for breaking up his testator's domestic establishment, and discharging his servants, and a period of two months is not an unreasonable delay.<sup>8</sup> An executor is not bound to pay or deliver any legacy until the expiration of one year from the testator's death;<sup>9</sup> but if the assets are sufficient, he may pay before the expiration of the year.<sup>10</sup>

ing or releasing
debts.

Trustees or executor may, under certain circumstances, compound or release debts where it is clearly for the benefit of the trust-fund that they should do so.<sup>3</sup> If they are unable to show that they have acted for the benefit of the estate, they will be liable for the debt.<sup>4</sup> According to English law, an executor or administrator may pay a debt barred by the Statutes of Limitation,<sup>5</sup> and the same rule obtains in this country,<sup>6</sup> the principle being, that the law of limitation merely bars the remedy but does not extinguish the debt.<sup>7</sup> An executor would not be justified in paying a barred debt after a decree for administration.<sup>8</sup>

"Trustees of an equity of redemption of lands mortgaged for more than their value, may, it is conceived, release the equity of redemption to the mortgagee, rather than be made defendants to a foreclosure-suit, the costs of which, so far as incurred by themselves, would fall upon the trust-estate."<sup>9</sup>

property may be sold.

Where the instrument of trust authorizes the trustees to sell the trust-property, the trustees may sell either by public auction or private contract, as they may think most beneficial,<sup>10</sup> and it is not necessary that they should, before selling by private contract, have advertised the property for sale by public auction.<sup>11</sup> They should not delegate the general trust for sale. But there are many acts which the trustees must necessarily do through the agency of other persons and which are valid when so done, and the employment of agents to do such acts as an ordinary person acting with common care would employ agents to do, is justifiable.<sup>12</sup>

Where the trustees sell by public auction, they must take care to have the property properly advertised, and that due notice of the sale is given. If they neglect these precautions, the sale may be stayed by injunction at the suit of the cestui que trust, it being the duty of the trustee to sell to the best advantage.<sup>1</sup> The property may be sold in different lots, should that seem to be the course most likely to attract purchasers,<sup>2</sup> unless the instrument of trust provides that the property is to be sold in one lot.

The Trustees' and Mortgagees' Powers Act (XXVIII of 1866) provides, in cases to which English law is applicable (s. 2), that "in all cases where by any will, deed, or other instrument of settlement, it is expressly declared that trustees or other persons therein named or indicated shall have a power of sale, either generally or in any particular event, over any immoveable property named or referred to in, or from time to time subject to the uses or trusts of such will, deed, or other instrument, it shall be lawful for such trustees or other persons, whether such property be vested in them or not, to exercise such power of sale by selling such property either together or in lots, and either by public auction or private contract, and either at one time or at several times."

The trustees should take care that every necessary and no unnecessary condition is attached to the sale.<sup>3</sup> They must not omit any condition which the state of their title requires, but the employment by them of conditions of such a depreciatory character as to involve the purchaser in a breach of trust, will constitute an objection to the title, besides rendering them liable to their cestuis que trustent.<sup>4</sup> "I have always understood it to be the law consistently with authority and principle," said James, L. J.,<sup>5</sup> "that however large may be the power of trustees under their trust-deed to introduce conditions limiting the title and other special conditions which have, or are calculated to have, a depreciatory effect on the sale, they are

VIII. must not rashly or improvidently introduce a depreciatory — condition for which there is no necessity.” No general rule can be laid down, determining what conditions do, and what do not, fall within this description. Each case must depend mainly on its own circumstances, and a Court of Equity will allow trustees a fair discretion in employing special conditions.<sup>1</sup> They may stipulate that all objections to the title shall be taken within twenty-one days from the delivery of the abstract, or be deemed waived, and that time in that respect is to be deemed of the essence of the contract, and that if a valid objection be taken, they shall be at liberty to rescind the contract on returning the deposit, and to re-sell.<sup>2</sup> Such a condition may, in a certain sense, be depreciatory, yet it is one which a prudent owner selling in his own right would introduce.<sup>3</sup> The trustees must be careful to avoid misdescriptions, since it seems that they cannot enforce a condition for compensation if they make an error in describing the property.<sup>4</sup> Where a sale is made by trustees or mortgagees, or other persons who do not enter into the usual covenants for title, the fact should be mentioned in the conditions.<sup>5</sup>

The condition should be framed so as to entitle the vendor to rescind, not merely on the purchaser insisting upon some objection as to title, but on his insisting on any objection or requisition as to either title or conveyance; and should provide that the right may be exercised notwithstanding any intermediate negotiation in respect of such objection or requisition.<sup>6</sup> A condition that the trustees shall only be called upon to covenant against incumbrances is not unusual.<sup>7</sup> So, where the trustees have no power to give receipts, they may stipulate that their receipts shall be sufficient, and that the concurrence of the cestuis que trustent shall not be required.<sup>8</sup>

at that price.<sup>1</sup> They must be careful not to delay in re-selling, otherwise, if there is a loss on the re-sale, they may be held liable.<sup>2</sup> LECTURE
VIII.

The Trustees' and Mortgagees' Powers Act<sup>3</sup> provides, in cases to which English law is applicable, that "it shall be lawful for the persons making any sale to insert any such special or other stipulations, either as to title or evidence of title or otherwise, in any conditions of sale, or contract of sale, as they shall think fit; and also to buy in the property or any part thereof at any sale by auction, and to rescind or vary any contract for sale, and to re-sell the property which shall be so bought in, or as to which the contract shall be so rescinded, without being responsible for any loss which may be occasioned thereby; and no purchaser under any such sale shall be bound to enquire whether the persons making the same may or may not have in contemplation any particular re-investment of the purchase-money in the purchase of any other property or otherwise." But this section would not warrant trustees in introducing stipulations which are plainly not rendered necessary by the state of the title, and are calculated to damp the success of the sale.<sup>4</sup>

When the trust-property has been sold either by public auction or private contract, the trustees must convey it to the purchaser in such manner as may be necessary. The Trustees' and Mortgagees' Powers Act<sup>5</sup> provides, that, "for the purpose of completing any sale, the persons empowered to sell shall have full power to convey or otherwise dispose of the property in question in such manner as may be necessary." Power to convey.

Trustees do not usually enter into covenants for title beyond a covenant against incumbrances,<sup>6</sup> and they cannot be compelled to enter into a covenant for further assurance.<sup>7</sup>

Where the instrument creating the trust does not contain any power to the trustees to alter the mode of investment, the trustees may, nevertheless, sell the property, and invest Power to

Where the cestuis que trustent, or some of them, are infants, the trustees may apply the trust-fund towards their maintenance,<sup>3</sup> either out of interest or under certain circumstances out of the principal. But the principal should not be touched if it can be helped. The father, if alive, is the proper person to maintain the infants, and the Court will not direct maintenance without inquiring whether the father is able to maintain the infant himself; but no inquiry will be directed in the case of a widow applying for maintenance.<sup>4</sup>

If, however, the father has abandoned his children, or is wholly insufficient. Thus, where four infants were entitled to a share of £1,538, 3 consols, and their father, a man of improvident habits, living apart from his wife, did not contribute to the support of either wife or children, the trustees were allowed two sums of £200 and £100, applied by them towards the maintenance of the infants.<sup>1</sup>

If the fund is considerable, say Rs. 10,000, the trustees would not be safe in applying the principal without the sanction of the Court.<sup>2</sup>

In certain cases the trustees may expend a portion of the principal of the trust-fund for the advancement of a child, unless there is a limitation over, for then the Court itself could not order the advancement.<sup>3</sup>

The Trustees' and Mortgagees' Powers Act<sup>4</sup> provides, that, "in all cases where any property is held by trustees in trust for a minor, either absolutely or contingently on his attaining majority, or on the occurrence of any event previously to his attaining majority, it shall be lawful for such trustees, at their sole discretion, to pay to the guardians (if any) of such minor, or otherwise to apply for or towards the maintenance or education of such minor, the whole or any part of the income to which such minor may be entitled in respect of such property, whether there be any other fund applicable, for the same purpose, or any other person bound by law to provide for such maintenance or education or not: and such trustees shall accumulate all the residue of such income by way of compound interest, by investing the same and the resulting income thereof, from time to time, in proper securities, for the benefit of the person who shall ultimately become entitled to the property from which such accumulations shall have arisen. Provided always, that it shall be lawful for such trustees at any time, if it shall be appear to them expedient, to apply the whole or any part of such accumulations as if the same were part of the income arising in the then current year."

Various Acts regarding the property of minors have been passed from time to time. Act XL of 1858 contains provisions for placing the property of minors not being European British subjects, and who are not brought under the superintendence of the Court of Wards, under the charge either of a relative of the minor, or of a public curator; and s. 11 gives the Civil Court power to fix such allowance as it may think proper for the maintenance of the minor. Section 25 made it incumbent upon the guardians of minors to provide for their education. That section was repealed by Act IV (B. C.) of 1870, s. 86, which provides, s. 64, that general superintendence and control of every minor ward is thenceforth to be vested in the Court of Wards. This section only applies to minors who are subject to the Court of Wards.

Act XX of 1864, which provides for minors in the Presidency of Bombay, and contains similar provisions to Act XV of 1858 as to placing the property of minors not being European British subjects under the charge of relatives or a public curator, provides (s. 10) that the Civil Court may fix such allowance as it may think fit for the maintenance of the minor; and (s. 25) for his education.

Act XXI of 1855, an Act for making better provision for the education of male minors subject to the superintendence of the Court of Wards in the Presidency of Fort St. George, gives the Collector (ss. 2 and 3) power to make provision for the maintenance and education of minors subject to the Court.

And Act XIII of 1874, the European British Minors' Act, which extends to the Punjab, Oudh, the Central Provinces, British Burma, Coorg, Ajmeer, Mairwara, and Assam, provides that the Court may order that the principal of the ward's property, or any part thereof, shall be applied for his maintenance, education, or advancement.

Liability of

application of
purchase-
money.

All the trustees must, as we have seen, join in giving receipts for any property transferred to them as trustees. In properly drawn instruments of trusts, whether deeds or settlements, a power is inserted authorizing the trustees to give receipts for trust-moneys or other funds paid or transferred to them. Where there is no such power, it is in general incumbent on the person paying trust-money to see that it is applied as directed by the instrument of trust. The leading case on this point is Elliot v. Merryman;<sup>1</sup> there it was decided (1) that a purchaser of personal property from an executor will not be liable to see to the application of the purchase-money, except in cases of fraud; (2) that it is a general rule, that, where real estate is devised to trustees upon trust to sell for payment of debts generally, the purchaser is not bound to see to the application of the money, and that the same rule applies where real estate is not devised to be sold for the payment of debts, but is only charged with such payment; and (3) that if real estate is devised upon trust to be sold for the payment of certain debts, mentioning to whom in particular the debts are owing, the purchaser is bound to see that the money is applied for the payment of those debts.

The reason for the rule is this, at law the trustees are the owners, and they can, therefore, give a valid discharge. But in equity the cestuis que trustent are the owners, and Courts of Equity, therefore, hold, that a purchaser must get a discharge from them unless the instrument of trust authorizes the trustees to give receipts.

The Fines and Recoveries Act<sup>1</sup> provides (s. 17), that where any property is sold, the proceeds of which are subject to any trust, the bond fide purchaser of the property shall not in any case be bound to see to the application of the purchase-money to the purposes of the trust.

Act.

Act XXVIII of 1866, in cases to which English law is applicable, provides (s. 36), that "the receipts of any trustees or trustee for any money payable to them or him by reason or in the exercise of any trusts or powers reposed or vested in them or him, shall be sufficient discharges for the money therein expressed to be received, and shall effectually exonerate the persons paying such money from seeing to the application thereof, or from being answerable for any loss or misapplication thereof."

The purchase-money should be paid to the vendor personally. An agent or solicitor has no implied authority to receive it, and if the purchaser pays his purchase-money to a person not authorized to receive it, he is liable to pay it over again. The possession of the executed conveyance, with the signed receipt for the consideration-money indorsed, is not of itself an authority to the solicitor of the vendor to receive the purchase-money.<sup>2</sup> Such a receipt is not conclusive evidence of payment.<sup>3</sup>

of debts.

It has been said, that where the vendors sell in a fiduciary character as executors or trustees, they should receive the purchase-money themselves.<sup>1</sup> In Webb v. Ledsam,<sup>2</sup> however, Wood, V. C., said, that he knew of no authority for holding a man liable to pay over again purchase-money which he had paid to one of several trustees upon a receipt signed by them all.

Where there is a charge of debts generally under a will, a purchaser is not bound to see to the application of the purchase-money,<sup>3</sup> nor where there is a charge of debts and legacies;<sup>4</sup> and it is immaterial that there were no debts existing, or that the debts and legacies have been since discharged.<sup>5</sup> “When,” said Lord St. Leonards,<sup>6</sup> “a testator, by his will, charges his estate with debts and legacies, he shows that he means to entrust his trustees with the power of receiving the money, anticipating that there will be debts, and thus providing for the payment of them; it is by implication a declaration by the testator that he intends to intrust the trustees with the receipt and application of the money, and not to throw any obligation at all upon the purchaser or mortgagee; that intention does not cease because there are no debts; it remains just as much if there are no debts as if there are debts, because the power arises from the circumstance that the debts are provided for, there being in the very creation of the trust a clear indication amounting to a declaration by the testator that he means that the trustees are alone to receive the money and apply it.”

The purchaser will not be bound to see to the application of the purchase-money, even if he knew that there were no debts, if the other purposes of the trust require a sale.<sup>7</sup> And where real estate is directed by will to be sold generally, the proceeds to form part of the personal estate, and subject to debts to be divided, the purchaser is not bound to see to the application of the

The trustee is not bound to give the purchaser any information as to the existence of debts.<sup>3</sup>

If the nature of the transaction affords intrinsic evidence that the fiduciary vendor is not acting in the execution of his duty, but is committing a breach of trust, as where the consideration of the mortgage or sale is a personal debt due from the vendor to the purchaser, there the purchaser being a party to the breach of trust does not hold the property discharged from the trusts, but equally subject to the payment of debts and legacies as it would have been in the hands of the executor.<sup>4</sup> And if a purchaser or mortgagee knows that there were no debts existing at the time of the testator's death, or that they have since been paid, leaving only legacies due, and that the money was raised for the private purposes of the parties raising it, he will be postponed to the unpaid legatees.<sup>5</sup>

Where a particular time is fixed for the sale, and the proceeds are divisible among infants or persons then unborn,<sup>6</sup> the purchaser need not see to the application of the purchase-money; nor where it is to be applied upon trusts requiring time for their performance, as where other estates are to be purchased with it,<sup>7</sup> or the trust is for persons not immediately ascertainable, as for instance, creditors coming in after a certain time under a deed.<sup>8</sup> Where there is a charge of debts and power-of-sale in the event of the personal estate proving insufficient, the trustees are not bound to show, nor the purchasers to ascertain, that there is a deficiency.<sup>9</sup>

Hindu devisee are liable in the purchaser's hands for the testator's debts was considered, and Pontifex, J., held, that the question is on the same footing as a similar question would be under the English law.

His Lordship said,<sup>1</sup> that the creditors of the ancestor or testator may "follow his lands into the possession of a purchaser from the heir or devisee if it can be proved that such purchaser knew—(i) that there were debts of the ancestor or testator left unsatisfied; and also (ii) that the heir or devisee to whom he paid his purchase-money intended to apply it otherwise than in the payment of such debts. But a purchaser, ignorant on either of these points, has a safe title, for no duty is cast upon the purchaser from the heir or devisee to enquire whether there are any debts of the ancestor or testator, or to see to the application of his purchase-money. The decision in Corser v. Cartwright<sup>2</sup> is an authority for this, even in the far stronger case where there is an express charge of debts by the testator on the devised estate, at least when the devisee is also executor, for the Lord Chancellor cautiously confined his judgment to the case before him, and it is also an authority to show that even where there is an express charge of debts, the burden of proof is entirely on the creditor to show that the purchaser from the devisee had notice that the latter intended to misapply the purchase-money."<sup>3</sup> decree.

After a suit has been instituted for the purpose of administering the trust, and a decree has been made, the trustees cannot act on their own responsibility, but must come to the Court, whenever they have to do any acts regarding the property.<sup>4</sup> They cannot commence or defend any suit without the leave of the Court;<sup>5</sup> nor can trustees for sale sell.<sup>6</sup> And an executor cannot pay debts, or invest his testator's assets.<sup>8</sup> But it has never been decided that an executor after the institution of a suit cannot sign a valid receipt for any part of the testator's personal estate.<sup>1</sup> A decree must have been made in the suit. The reason of this rule is, that the plaintiff may, at any time before decree, withdraw his suit;<sup>2</sup> and should he do so, the progress of the trust may have been arrested for no purpose. Still it is safer for the trustees, after a suit has been instituted, not to act without the leave of the Court; and if, by acting independently of the Court, expenses be incurred, which might have been avoided had the trustees applied to the Court, they may be made to bear them personally.<sup>3</sup>

cannot renounce
after ac-

AFTER a trustee has once accepted the trust, either expressly or impliedly, he cannot, by any act of his own, without communication with his cestui que trust, denude himself of the character of trustee until he has performed his trust;<sup>1</sup> any subsequent renunciation will be void.<sup>2</sup> Thus, the trustee of a temple cannot alienate the trust-property subject to the trusts attaching to it, and so get rid of the office.<sup>1</sup> The only way in which a trustee can obtain a release from the office is by obtaining his discharge from the Court,<sup>2</sup> or, if all the cestuis que trustent are competent to contract, by obtaining their consent to his renunciation; or by retiring under a special power in the instrument of trust. With the subject of appointments of new trustees I shall deal hereafter. Thus, where A was named executor in a will, and acted on behalf of particular legatees, disclaiming an intention of interfering generally, and afterwards renounced in favour of B, who was named a trustee in the same will, and who thereupon obtained administration with the will annexed; and B subsequently died insolvent after having possessed himself of the assets,—it was held, that A was liable as executor notwithstanding his renunciation, and was answerable for the acts of B. “Executors,” said Lord Redesdale, “must either wholly renounce, or if they act to a certain extent as executors, and take upon them that character, they can be discharged only by administering the effects themselves, or by putting the administration into the hands of a Court of Equity.”<sup>3</sup> Where a trustee gave a bond to convey trust-property, and the administrator of the cestui que trust sued upon the bond and recovered the penalty, it was held, nevertheless, upon a bill to compel a conveyance, that the trustee was liable to carry out the trust upon the penalty being refunded with interest.<sup>4</sup>

IX.

As a general rule, a trustee cannot delegate his office. If he does so, he will be liable for any breach of trust committed by the person to whom the office has been entrusted, for trustees cannot divest themselves of their trust at their pleasure.<sup>5</sup> “Trustees,” said Lord Langdale,<sup>6</sup> “who take on themselves the management of property for the benefit of others, have no right to shift their duties on other persons; and if they employ an agent, they remain subject to responsibility towards their cestui que trust, for whom they have undertaken the duty.” In that case the LECTURE IX. trustees were empowered by the trust-deed to employ an agent, and the decree directed an enquiry as to whether it was by the neglect or default of the trustees that they were unable to render a better account. And in a subsequent case<sup>1</sup> Lord Langdale said: "In cases of breach of trust, it is of great importance to the community that trustees, who take on themselves the protection of the property of others, should be made to feel that they will be held liable for trust-property which is lost by their acts of omission or commission, and that such liability will be enforced against them."

Employment of solicitor to invest.

Trustees have been held liable when they have employed their solicitors to invest the trust-fund, and it has been lost through the fraudulent acts of the persons employed. "If," said Lord Eldon,<sup>2</sup> "a trustee trusts an attorney, he must abide by the effect of that confidence." And it is no defence that, in the employment of the solicitor, ordinary care and discretion was exercised.<sup>3</sup> In one case trustees were held liable for lending money on the valuation of the mortgagor's agent without looking into the matter themselves.<sup>4</sup>

Delegation to co-trustee or co-executor.

If trustees or executors delegate the execution of the trust or the distribution of the assets to one of their own number, and a loss ensues through his wrongful act, they will be liable, for it is the duty of each trustee or executor to watch over the trust-property.<sup>5</sup>

But where an executor who had proved, but never acted, received a bill of exchange by post on account of the estate, and immediately sent it to the acting executor, and it was lost,—it was held, that the first executor was not liable, as he had never acted in the trust.<sup>6</sup>

Necessary delegation.

In Ex parte Belchier<sup>7</sup> it was sought to make the assignee of a bankrupt liable for the default of a broker, who had been employed to sell some of the bankrupt's property. Lord Hardwicke said: "If the assignee is chargeable in this case, no man in his senses would act as assignee under commissions of bankrupt. This Court has laid down a rule with regard to the transactions of assignees, and more so of trustees, so as not to strike a terror into mankind acting for the benefit of others, and not for their own. Courts of Law, and Equity too, are more strict as to executors and administrators; but where trustees act by other hands, either from necessity, or conformable to the common usage of mankind, they are not answerable for losses. There are two sorts of necessities: first, legal necessity; secondly, moral necessity. As to the first, a distinction prevails where two executors join in giving a discharge for money, and one of them only receives it, they are both answerable for it, because there is no necessity for both to join in the discharge, the receipt of either being sufficient; but if trustees join in giving a discharge, and one only receives, the other is not answerable, because his joining in the discharge was necessary.

“Moral necessity, from the usage of mankind. If a trustee acts as prudently for the trust as for himself and according to the usage of business, he will not be liable.

“If a trustee appoints rents to be paid to a banker at that time in credit, and the banker afterwards breaks, the trustee is not answerable. So, in the employment of stewards and agents, the receiver of Lord Plymouth’s estate<sup>1</sup> took bills in the country of persons who at the time were reputed of credit and substance, in order to return the rents to London: the bills were protested and the money lost, and yet the steward was excused. None of these cases are on account of necessity, but because the persons acted in the usual method of business.”<sup>2</sup>

Where an executor possessing assets of his testator hands over the assets to a co-executor, and they are misapplied by him, the executor who so hands them over will be answerable for their misapplication, because he had a legal right to retain them, and might have preserved them, and it was his duty to do so; unless, indeed, they were so handed over for the express purpose of a special administration by the co-executor as for the payment of a particular debt.<sup>3</sup>

Delegation authorized by author
of trust.

But trustees cannot be answerable, if the instrument of trust provides for delegation, and they follow the directions given by it. Thus, a testator by his will recommended his executors to employ A (who had been in the testator's own employment) as their clerk or agent. The executors gave A a power-of-attorney to receive debts, and A subsequently became insolvent. It was contended that the executors were answerable for the default of A; but Sir A. Hart said, that if a testator pointed out an agent to be employed by the executor, and such employee received a sum of money, and immediately made default, the executor would clear himself by showing that the testator designated the person, and that he could not by the exercise of reasonable diligence recover the money.<sup>1</sup>

Representatives of surviving
trustee.

Again, where property was bequeathed to trustees upon certain trusts, to be executed by them or the survivor of them, or the assigns of such survivor, and one of the trustees died,—it was held, that the survivor might bequeath the trust-property to trustees upon the trusts of the original will.<sup>2</sup> “Where,” said Lord Langdale, “a trust-estate is limited to several trustees and the survivor of them, and the heirs of the survivor, and no power of appointing new trustees is given, we observe a personal confidence given, or at least probably given, to every one of the several trustees, as any one may be the survivor; the whole power will eventually come to that one, and he is entrusted with it, and being so, he is not, without a special power to assign it to any other, he cannot of his own authority, during his own life, relieve himself from the duties and responsibilities which he has undertaken.

“But we cannot assume that the author of the trust placed any personal confidence in the heir of the survivor; it cannot be known beforehand which one of the several trustees may be the survivor; and as to the contingent survivor, it cannot be known beforehand whether he may have an heir or not, or whether the heir may be one, or may consist of many persons, trustworthy or not, married women, infants, or bankrupts, within or without the jurisdiction. The reasons, therefore, which forbid the surviving trustee from making an assignment, inter vivos, in such a case, do not seem to apply to an assignment by devise or bequest; which being made to take effect only after the death of the last surviving trustee, and consequently after the expiration of all personal confidence, may perhaps not improperly be considered as made without any violation or breach of trust. It is to take effect only at a time when there must be a substitution or change of trustees,—there must be a devolution or transmission of the estate to some one or more persons not immediately or directly trusted by the author of the trust,—and the estate subject to the trusts must pass either to the hæres natus or hæres factus of the surviving trustee, and if the heir or heirs-at-law, whatever may be their situation, condition, or number, must be the substituted trustee or trustees, the greatest inconvenience may arise, and there are no means of obviating them other than by an application to the Court. With great respect to those who think otherwise, and quite aware that some inconveniences which can only be obviated in the Court may arise from devising trust-estates to improper persons for improper purposes, I cannot at present see my way to the conclusion, that in the case contemplated, the surviving trustee commits a breach of trust by not permitting the trust-estate to descend, or by devising it to proper persons, on the trusts to which it was subject in the hands of the surviving trustees.”

And trustees are not liable to their cestuis que trustent for money belonging to the trust which a co-trustee gets into his possession without their consent or knowledge and by a fraud upon them. Thus, where trustees drew a cheque upon a banker, and crossed the cheque with the names of other bankers, and delivered it over to one of their number for the purpose of paying it into the bank of the bankers with whose name the cheque was crossed, it was held, that the co-trustees were not liable for the misapplication of the money by the trustee to whom the cheque was delivered.<sup>1</sup>

co-trustees.

If the trust is of a discretionary character, a trustee cannot delegate the execution of it under any circumstances either to a stranger or to a co-trustee, or co-executor, and not only will the trustee so delegating be liable for any

acts.

A trustee may carry out the ministerial portion of an act connected with the trust by attorney or proxy; for instance, if he has agreed to sell the trust-property, he may execute the instrument transferring the property by his attorney, for he does not delegate any portion of the confidence reposed in him.<sup>2</sup>

agent.

The agent of a trustee is not accountable to the cestuis que trustent, though a substituted trustee is,<sup>3</sup> and payment to an agent authorized by trustees to receive trust-moneys discharges the person paying the money.<sup>4</sup> An agent who has been party to a breach of trust, will, however, be responsible to the cestuis que trustent.<sup>5</sup>

Co-trustees
singly.

The office of co-trustees is joint, they all form as it were one collective trustee, and therefore must execute the duties of their office in their joint capacity.<sup>6</sup> An act done by one may be subsequently approved by the other; but the approval must be strictly proved.<sup>7</sup> It is not uncommon to hear one of several trustees spoken of as the acting trustee, but the Court knows of no such distinction; all who accept the office are in the eye of the law acting trustees. During the joint lives of the trustees if one refuse to act, the other cannot act without him; but the trust devolves upon the Court.<sup>8</sup>

All trustees must join in receipt

It follows from this doctrine of unity among co-trustees, that they must all join in giving a receipt; and that, unless the instrument of trust specially provides that the receipt of some or one of the trustees shall be a discharge, a receipt not signed by all will be invalid.<sup>9</sup> So they must all join in a conveyance of the trust-estate.<sup>10</sup>

IX.

One of several executors may, on the insolvency of a debtor to the estate, prove the debt; but one of several trustees cannot prove without the order of the Court.<sup>2</sup>

insolvency.

There is an exception to the general rule that all trustees must join in executing the office, in the case of a trust of a public character. There the act of the majority is to be considered the act of the whole body.<sup>3</sup> The majority of course have no right to deal with the trust-property otherwise than according to the true construction of the deed of trust.<sup>4</sup>

Exception to rule in case of public
trust.

Where a special power is given to trustees, it cannot be exercised by the majority only, but all must join; if the settlement, for instance, declares that, on the death or resignation of a trustee, the surviving or continuing trustees shall appoint a successor, it is apprehended that the appointment of the new trustee must be the joint act of all the surviving or continuing trustees.<sup>5</sup>

power.

The Limitation Act<sup>6</sup> provides, that nothing in ss. 19 and 20 renders one of several joint executors or mortgagees chargeable by reason only of a written acknowledgment signed, or of a payment made by, or by the agent of, any other or others of them. This, corresponds with the English law.<sup>7</sup>

ledgment.

"As co-trustees are a joint body, the Court requires them, unless under special circumstances, to defend a suit jointly; and if they sever, the extra costs thereby occasioned must be borne by the defaulting party. It is conceived that this rule, so strictly observed in Court, must not be lost sight of in transactions out of Court, and that co-trustees are bound, unless they can show good reason to the contrary, to act by the same solicitor and the same counsel. It would be a strange anomaly if four trustees were allowed only one solicitor and one counsel in Court, and four separate solicitors and four separate counsel out of Court.

Every trustee should be prepared to act in harmony with his co-trustees, or he should not accept the office. It may be said that as each trustee is responsible for the due administration of the trust, he ought to be at liberty to employ a professional adviser of his own choosing, but this argument would, à fortiori, apply to so important a matter as the defence of a suit, and yet there the Court pays no attention to it.”<sup>1</sup>

We have seen that the Court will not, as a rule, interfere with a discretionary power reposed in trustees, ante, p. 153. But the Court has a controlling power over all trustees,<sup>2</sup> and will interfere when the discretion is mischievously and ruinously exercised, as by leaving the trust-fund outstanding on hazardous securities,<sup>3</sup> or where it is corruptly exercised,<sup>4</sup> or not exercised in good faith,<sup>5</sup> or where the trustees misbehave,<sup>6</sup> or decline to exercise the discretion.<sup>7</sup> In this last case the Court will not, as a matter of course, exercise the discretion with which the trustees are invested, but will follow its own established and known rules, unless the intention of the testator plainly appears to exclude such a mode of proceeding.<sup>8</sup> Where a case has been shown for bringing the trustees before the Court, the Court, though it will not control the discretion of the trustees, will still, to use the words of Lord Hardwicke, “keep a hand over them.”<sup>9</sup>

Injunction. The Court may, if necessary, interfere by injunction.<sup>10</sup> If the act complained of would be irremediable, the Court will interfere as a matter of course.<sup>11</sup> ary one. The leading case on this point is Robinson v. Pett.<sup>1</sup> There Lord Talbot, L. C., said: "It is an established rule, that a trustee, executor, or administrator shall have no allowance for his care and trouble; the reason of which seems to be, for that, on these pretences if allowed, the trust-estate might be loaded and rendered of little value: besides, the great difficulty there might be in settling and adjusting the quantum of such allowance, especially as one man's time may be more valuable than that of another; and there can be no hardship in this respect upon any trustee who may choose whether he will accept the trust or not."

IX.

"The reason of the rule," said Lord Cottenham,<sup>2</sup> "is well stated in Robinson v. Pett. It is not because the trust-estate is in any particular case charged with more than it might otherwise have to bear, but that the principle, if allowed, would lead to such consequences in general."<sup>3</sup> "The true ground, however," says Mr. Lewin,<sup>4</sup> "is, that if the trustee were allowed to perform the duties of the office, and to claim compensation for his services, his interest would be opposed to his duty, and as a matter of prudence, the Court would not allow a trustee or executor to place himself in such a false position."<sup>5</sup>

The rule extends to all persons who acquire a fiduciary character. Thus, an agent who becomes executor is not entitled to charge commission on business done subsequently to the testator's death,<sup>6</sup> nor if he sells as trustee will he be allowed more than expenses out of pocket.<sup>7</sup> So an auctioneer, who is also mortgagee, cannot charge commission for selling the mortgaged property;<sup>8</sup> and it is a general rule that a mortgagee shall not be allowed to charge for receiving the rents of the mortgaged property personally.<sup>9</sup> A receiver is not entitled to compensation for trouble in doing acts which have not been ordered.<sup>10</sup> Nor is the committee of a lunatic's estate entitled to any remuneration.

neration for his trouble. Where any allowance is made, it is not for his sake, but for the benefit of the estate, as where rents cannot be effectually collected by the committee without assistance.<sup>1</sup>

on business.

If a surviving partner carries on the business of the partnership retaining the deceased partner's capital in the concern, he will be considered as a constructive trustee, and will have to account for the profits; but proper allowances will be made for the management of the business,<sup>2</sup> and the amount of the allowances may be fixed by the Court without an enquiry.<sup>3</sup>

Surviving
trustee.

If, however, the surviving partner is an express trustee or an executor, he will not, as a general rule, in the absence of any direct stipulation, be entitled to an allowance for carrying on the business,<sup>4</sup> or to make any charge for his trouble or loss of time, although great advantages may have accrued to his cestuis que trustent; as where he has carried on a trade or business with great personal trouble, and at a great sacrifice of time, he will not be allowed to charge for more than out-of-pocket expenses: and even settled accounts upon the footing of such charges will be set aside.<sup>5</sup>

trustee.

A solicitor who sustains the character of trustee will not, unless there be an agreement for the purpose,<sup>6</sup> be permitted to charge for his time, trouble or attendance, but only for his actual disbursements.<sup>7</sup> "It would," said Lord Lyndhurst, "be placing his interest at variance with the duties he has to discharge. It is said, the bill may be taxed, but that would not be a sufficient check: the estate has a right not only to the protection of the taxing officer, but also to the vigilance and guardianship of the executor or trustee: a trustee placed in the situation of a solicitor might, if allowed to perform the duties of a solicitor and to be paid for them, find it very often proper to institute and carry on legal proceedings, which he would not do if he were to derive no emolument from them himself, and if he were to employ another person.”<sup>1</sup> And the rule is not restricted to cases of express trusts, but applies to the case of an executor or trustee, though there be no express trust.<sup>2</sup>

IX.

When a solicitor has liberty to charge for his professional services, he can only charge for services strictly professional, and not for matters which an executor ought to have done without the intervention of a solicitor, such as attendance to pay premiums on policies, attending at the bank to make transfers, attendances on auctioneers, legatees, and creditors.<sup>3</sup> The rule applies even where the business is done by the solicitor's partner, who is not a trustee.<sup>4</sup> If, however, the business is done exclusively by the partner and he alone receives the costs to the exclusion of the trustee-partner, the charge will be allowed;<sup>5</sup> and so will the costs of an agent, also a solicitor, for professional work.<sup>6</sup> In one case it was held, that a solicitor, a trustee, might act for his cestuis que trustent or himself, and his co-trustees or cestuis que trustent, provided the costs were not increased thereby.<sup>7</sup> But this case has been since disapproved of by the House of Lords in Manson v. Baillie,<sup>8</sup> where Lord Cranworth, C., said, that “the true principle is, that each trustee should be a check and control on each and all of the co-trustees—a principle which is placed in danger by the allowance of a pecuniary profit.”

Extent of
allowed.

And in another case,<sup>9</sup> Lord Cranworth said: “The rule applicable to the subject has been treated at the bar, as if it were sufficiently enunciated, by saying, that a trustee shall not be able to make a profit of his trust; but that is not stating it so widely as it ought to be stated. rule really is, that no one who has a duty to perform shall place himself in a situation to have his interests conflicting with that duty, and a case for the application of the rule is that of a trustee himself doing acts which he might employ others to perform, and taking payment in some way for doing them. As the trustee might make the payment to others, this Court says, he shall not make it to himself; and it says the same in the case of agents, where they may employ others under them. The good sense of the rule is obvious, because it is one of the duties of a trustee to take care that no improper charges are made by persons employed for the estate."

In In the Matter of the Port Canning Land Co.,<sup>1</sup> Phear, J., drew a distinction between the case of a trustee and a director of a public company, and allowed the claim of the partner of one of the directors who did work for the company as a solicitor, there being nothing to show that he had not been duly appointed by the directors.

A solicitor, who is also a trustee, who invests trust-money on a mortgage, and is employed as the mortgagor's solicitor, and is paid by him, is not chargeable at the suit of the cestui que trust with the profit thus made.<sup>2</sup>

A solicitor-trustee, who acts for himself in a suit, will be entitled to his costs against parties who unsuccessfully attempt to set aside the trust-deed.<sup>3</sup>

Securities given to a solicitor-trustee to cover costs to which he would not be entitled, will be set aside even as against a purchaser for value who had notice.<sup>4</sup>

Trustee

Where a trustee is appointed by the Court, and the nature of the trust is such that he is fairly entitled to compensation, he should take care to arrange for his remuneration before he accepts the office.<sup>5</sup> In Marshall v. Holloway,<sup>6</sup> the decree, after reciting that the nature and circumstances of the estate of the testator required the application of a great proportion of time by and on the part of the trustees for the due execution of the trusts of his will in regard to his estate, and that they could not

The Court will not allow a trustee to make professional charges for professional business done by him for the trust, unless, of course, there is express authority given by the settlor, for, to do so would be to place a person, having a duty conflicting with his interest, in the position of having to make out his own bill against himself, leaving any error which might occur to be settled and set right at some future occasion; but the Court will only allow him a salary.<sup>1</sup>

for remuneration with cestuis
que trustent.

And where the instrument of trust does not make any provision for the remuneration of the trustees, they may, nevertheless, contract with the cestuis que trustent, if the latter are competent to contract, for an allowance for time and trouble expended in the administration of the trust.<sup>1</sup> In Ayliffe v. Murray,<sup>2</sup> Lord Hardwicke said: "Whether upon general grounds a trustee may make an agreement with his cestui que trust for an extraordinary allowance, over and above what he is allowed by the terms of the trust, I think there may be cases where this Court would establish such agreements, but at the same time would be extremely cautious and wary in doing it. In general, this Court looks upon trusts as honorary, and a burthen upon the honour and conscience of the person intrusted, and not undertaken upon mercenary views; and there is a strong reason too against allowing anything beyond the terms of the trust, because it gives an undue advantage to a trustee to distress a cestui que trust, and therefore this Court has always held a strict hand upon trustees in this particular. If a trustee comes in a fair and open manner, and tells the cestui que trust that he will not act in such a troublesome and burthensome office, unless the cestui que trust will give him a further compensation, over and above the terms of the trust, and it is contracted for between them, I will not say this Court will set it aside, though there is no instance where they have confirmed such a bargain."

The contract should in its terms explain the arrangement, and if the trustee is a solicitor, the cestui que trust should have independent professional advice.<sup>3</sup>

If the trustee fail from any cause to perform his part of the contract, the charges will not be allowed.<sup>4</sup>

Gift coupled with duty.

If a gift is coupled with a duty, the duty must be performed in order to entitle the donee to claim the gift. Thus, if a bequest is given to an executor as remuneration for his trouble, he will not be entitled to claim it unless he proves the will and acts,<sup>5</sup> even though he is prevented by the act of God, as in the case of severe illness, from taking out probate.<sup>6</sup> So a gift of an annuity to a trustee,

Although a person acting in a fiduciary capacity may not charge anything for his trouble, yet he may, as we have already seen,<sup>2</sup> employ paid agents. So if an executor employs a solicitor to do business for him in the management of the testator's affairs, he will be allowed what he pays the solicitor for such business,<sup>3</sup> unless the business is such as he should have transacted himself.<sup>4</sup> of agent.

If the accounts be complicated, and the executor or trustee take upon himself to adjust and settle them, although it may take up a great deal of his time and attention, the principle of equity is, that he cannot claim compensation; but if he choose to save his own trouble by the employment of an accountant, he is entitled to charge the trust-estate with it under the head of expenses.<sup>5</sup>

General.

Formerly, administrators in this country to the estates of persons dying abroad were allowed a commission of 5 per cent upon receipts or payments. This practice, however, was abolished in the Presidency of Bengal by Act VII of 1849, and in the Presidencies of Madras and Bombay by Act II of 1850; and now it is provided by the Administrator-Generals' Act<sup>1</sup> that "no person other than the Administrator-General acting officially shall receive or retain any commission or agency charges for anything done as executor or administrator under any probate or letters of administration, or letters ad colligenda bona which have been granted by the Supreme Court or High Court at Fort William in Bengal since the passing of Act No. VII of 1849, or by either of the Supreme or High Courts at Madras and Bombay since the passing of Act II of 1850, or which shall have been or shall be granted by any Court of competent jurisdiction within the meaning of ss. 187 and 190 of the Indian Succession Act." It is illegal, therefore, for any person other than the Administrator-General to charge commission for administering estates.<sup>2</sup> Section 52 of the Act provides, that the Administrator-General of Bengal shall be entitled to commission at the rate of 3 per cent, and the Administrators-General of Madras and Bombay respectively at the rate of 5 per cent upon the value of the assets which they respectively collect and distribute in due course of administration. The section does not apply to the property of officers and soldiers dying on service (s. 53). And s. 55 authorizes the Governor-General in Council to alter the rates of commission.

Trustee
may not make a profit from his office.

It is an invariable rule that a trustee shall gain no benefit to himself by any act done by him as trustee, but that all his acts shall be for the benefit of his cestui que trust. This rule was established in order to keep trustees in the line of their duty.<sup>3</sup> So that wherever a trustee, or one standing in the relation of a trustee, violates his duty, and deals with the trust-estate for his own behoof, he must account to the cestui que trust for all the gain which he has made; as where a profit is made by employing trust-money in buying and selling land, or stock, or in a commercial adventure, in all these cases the profit made by the transaction will not be allowed to go to the trustee, who has so applied the money, but to the cestui que trust, whose money has been so applied. In like manner, where a trustee or executor has used the fund committed to his care in stock speculations, though the loss, if any, must fall upon himself, yet for every farthing of profit he may make he will be accountable to the trust-estate. So, if he lay out the trust-money in a commercial adventure, as in buying or fitting out a vessel for a voyage, or put it in the trade of another person, from which he is to derive a certain stipulated profit, he must account for the profits received by the adventure or from the concern.<sup>1</sup> And the rule applies to a mortgagee, who is not allowed to have more out of the mortgage-fund than his principal and interest.<sup>2</sup> It does not matter that the original trust-fund has not been impaired; the rule is based on the principle that a trustee shall not be allowed to do an act which brings his private interests and his duty to the trust in conflict.<sup>3</sup>

So, if a trustee or executor employs trust-funds in his own business, he must account to his cestuis que trustent for all profits made by so employing the trust-funds, and he will be liable for all losses.<sup>4</sup> "If," said Lord Cairns,<sup>5</sup> "a partner in a trading firm dies, and if he constitutes one or more of his copartners his executors, and if there is nothing special in the contract of copartnership, and if the assets of the testator are not withdrawn from the copartnership, but are left in it, and no liquidation is arrived at, no settlement of accounts come to, it is a trite and familiar rule in the Court of Chancery to hold, that the estate of that testator is, to all intents and purposes, entitled to the benefit of a share in the profits which are made in the trade after his death. And if this should happen, which is the principle of another class of cases, that the partnership

LECTURE IX. articles have given the surviving partners an option to take to the interest of the testator on certain terms, at a certain price to be fixed by arrangement after the death of the testator, an option or power which may be accepted or refused, but which, if accepted and acted upon, must be acted upon according to the terms on which it is given—if, I say in a case of that kind, the surviving partners or one or more of them, being also executors of the deceased partner, are found not to have pursued exactly the terms of the power or option which has been given, there again the power or option to become purchasers of the interest of the testator after his death falls to the ground, and the partnership remains an unliquidated partnership, to a due share of the profits of which the estate of the testator will continue to be entitled until liquidation actually takes place. It is a rule without exception, that to authorize executors to carry on a trade with the property of their testator, there must be the most distinct and positive authority and direction given by the will itself for that purpose.”<sup>1</sup>

ing debts or mortgages and purchasing Upon these principles, if executors or trustees compound debts or mortgages, and buy them in for less than is due thereon, they will not be allowed to take the benefit of the purchase themselves; but other creditors and legatees will have the advantage of it, and for want of them, the benefit will go to the party entitled to the surplus; whereas if one who acts for himself, and is not in the circumstances of an executor or trustee, buys in a mortgage or debt for less than is due, or for less than it is worth, he will be allowed all that is due thereon.<sup>2</sup>

Purchase
for benefit of cestui
que trust. But the rule that a trustee cannot purchase applies only where the trustee purchases for his own benefit. If he buys for the benefit of his cestuis que trustent, and they repudiate the transaction, and it subsequently turns out to be profitable, they cannot claim the benefit.<sup>3</sup>

Cestui que trust cannot give to trustee. So strongly do Courts of Equity object to allowing a trustee to make any profit out of the trust-estate, that it has been held that a cestui que trust cannot give a benefit to his trustee.<sup>4</sup>

THE rule that a trustee shall not be allowed to make a profit out of the trust-property, applies not only to cases where there is an express trust, and a certain fund is in the hands of trustees to be applied in a particular manner for the benefit of particular persons, but to all cases in which persons stand in a fiduciary relation to each other.

LECTURE

Rule applies to all fiduciary relations.

Thus, partners are bound to use the joint property for the benefit of all the owners, and one partner will not be allowed to make profit to himself out of the partnership transactions.<sup>1</sup> And if, after a partnership has terminated, whatever the cause of the termination may be, one partner carries on the partnership business and retains the share of the outgoing partner in the business, he must account for the profits which he makes by the money he has retained,<sup>2</sup> subject to "just allowances" for special skill, industry, or other matters, by which profit is gained apart from the use of capital.<sup>3</sup>

Partners.

In Knox v. Gye<sup>4</sup> a difference of opinion arose as to whether a surviving partner was a trustee for the representatives of a deceased partner. Lord Westbury said: "There is nothing fiduciary between the surviving partner and the dead partner's representatives, except that they may respectively sue each other in equity. There are certain legal rights and duties which attach to them; but it is a mistake to apply the word 'trust' to the legal relation which is thereby created." Lord Hatherley, on the other hand, said: "I thought it was an elementary principle of law that the partnership, which at law survives to the surviving partner, which carries to him at law the whole interest in the partnership assets, which, treating him as a joint tenant, vests the whole of the partnership estates in him, was always subject to the doctrine of a Court of Equity; that, in equity, the interest of a partner in the partnership is that of a tenancy in common as between the two partners: so that the executors of a deceased partner have an interest in those assets which the surviving

The executors of the deceased partner have a right to a sale of every portion of the partnership property. So completely are they held to be in a fiduciary position, so completely are the assets, including the plant or houses, the machinery or stock-in-trade, or whatever the description of property may be that comes into the hands of the surviving partner by right of his survivorship at law, and which are all vested in that surviving partner by right of his survivorship at law, held to be property in all of which, whether they are chattels of the partnership, or estates of the partnership, the executors of a deceased partner have an interest commensurate with the extent of the share of their testator. There is nothing, however, which prevents a surviving partner from purchasing the share of a deceased partner from his representatives.<sup>1</sup>

The principle that a person holding a fiduciary position shall not obtain for himself a benefit from the trust-funds, extends to an agent becoming a trustee or executor;<sup>2</sup> guardians<sup>3</sup> (who are trustees of such property only as comes to their hands);<sup>4</sup> directors of companies, who cannot be allowed to make a profit out of work done by them for the company beyond their regular salary as directors,<sup>5</sup> unless the articles of association of the company expressly stipulate that they may do work for the company in their private capacity, and receive remuneration for the work so done.<sup>1</sup> And the rule applies to the officers of companies,<sup>2</sup> or promoters,<sup>3</sup> inspectors under creditor's deeds;<sup>4</sup> and it has been held to extend to the mayor of a corporation.<sup>5</sup> So a broker,<sup>6</sup> or auctioneer,<sup>7</sup> who assumes a fiduciary position, cannot charge commission for selling the trust-property unless expressly authorized to do so by the will.<sup>8</sup> In Morison v. Morison<sup>9</sup> an executor and trustee was appointed a consignee, with the usual profits, by the Court, the appointment being for the benefit of the estate. And trustees who are bankers cannot advance money to the trust at compound interest, although such a course of procedure may be usual; but can only charge simple interest.<sup>10</sup> A trustee will not, as a general rule, be appointed a receiver, the principle being that the person who accepts the office of trustee engages to do the whole duty of a receiver without emolument. And if a receiver is appointed, the Court looks to the trustee to examine with an adverse eye, to see that the receiver does his duty. The consequence is, that a trustee is seldom appointed receiver, and only when he engages to act without emoluments.<sup>11</sup>

Where a testator appointed two trustees as executors of his will, but by a codicil he excluded them and appointed two other persons, one of whom retired in consideration of a sum of money paid to him by one of the excluded trustees, and executed a deed appointing the excluded trustee to act as trustee in his room, the Court directed the new trustee to be removed and the deed to be cancelled, declared the conveyance to be void, and directed the purchase-money to form part of the assets.<sup>12</sup>

liability.

If the person using the trust-fund is not a trustee, he will be liable to the cestui que trust only for the principal and interest, but not for the profits; as for example, where a trustee lends the trust-fund to a trader to be used in his business, in this case there is no fiduciary relationship between the trader and the cestui que trust, and the trader is only liable as on an ordinary loan.<sup>1</sup>

heirs of cestui que
trust.

If property is vested in a trustee upon trust for a certain person and his heirs, and such person dies without heirs and intestate, the trustee will then be entitled to hold the property for his own purposes. The author of the trust has parted with his interest, and there is no person claiming through the cestui que trust who has any right of suit against the trustee. Under these circumstances, the trustee can retain the property, not from any positive right in himself, but because there is no person entitled to oust him from possession.<sup>2</sup>

next-of-kin.

If a cestui que trust of chattels, whether real or personal, dies intestate without leaving any next-of-kin, the beneficial interest will not in this case remain with the trustee, but, like all other bona vacantia, will vest in the Crown by the prerogative.<sup>3</sup>

Trustee for sale cannot
purchase.

There is another class of cases in which the principle, that a trustee shall not be allowed to do any act which brings his interest and his duty as a trustee in conflict, is applied,—namely, those cases where a trustee for the sale of trust-property himself becomes the purchaser. These cases again may be divided into two classes: (1) where the trustee attempts to purchase directly from himself, (2) where the purchase is effected by contract or agreement between the trustee and his cestui que trust.

Trustee
purchasing from himself.

In the first class of cases, the rule is absolute that a trustee shall not buy from himself. The principle is, that as the trustee is bound by his duty to acquire all the knowledge possible to enable him to sell to the utmost advantage for the cestui que trust, the question what knowledge he has obtained, and whether he has fairly given the benefit of that knowledge to the cestui que trust, which he acquires at the expense of the cestui que trust, no Court can discuss with competent sufficiency or safety to the parties;<sup>1</sup> the same person cannot be both buyer and seller; "he who undertakes to act for another in any matter, shall not in the same matter act for himself."<sup>2</sup>

IX.

The reason why a trustee is not permitted to purchase is, because the Court will not permit a man to have an interest adverse and inconsistent with the duty which he owes to another; and as a trustee for sale is bound to get the best price for property to be sold that he can, the Court will not permit him to have an interest of his own adverse to the discharge of his duty to his principal. If he is the purchaser, he is interested in getting the property at the lowest price he can; but if he is acting bond fide for the owner of the property, his duty is to sell at the best price he can obtain; and the Court will not permit a party to place himself in a situation in which his interest conflicts with his duty; for taking mankind at large, it is not very safe to allow a man to put his private interest in conflict with the duty which he owes to another.<sup>3</sup>

It may be that the price given is fair, and that the trustee has not gained any advantage by the transaction, the purchase is nevertheless invalid.<sup>4</sup> "The rule I take to be this," said Lord Eldon,<sup>5</sup> "not that a trustee cannot buy from his cestui que trust, but that he shall not buy from himself." "Without any consideration of fraud, or looking beyond the relation of the parties, that contract is void," said Lord Erskine,<sup>6</sup> speaking of the case of a trustee selling to himself.<sup>7</sup> If the trustee has made a profit on the transaction, as by a resale, he will have to account for such profit.<sup>8</sup>

IX.Or mode of
purchase.

So it is immaterial that the purchase is made by the trustee at a public sale by auction.<sup>1</sup> "If persons who are trustees to sell an estate are there professedly as bidders to buy, that is a discouragement to others to bid. The persons present seeing the seller there to bid for the estate to or above its value, do not like to enter into that competition."<sup>2</sup> And it makes no difference that the purchase is in the name of another person as the trustee's agent.<sup>3</sup> And the rule applies to the case of one of several trustees buying for himself.<sup>4</sup>

Purchase
by trustee
for another.

So a trustee may not purchase for another person. "One of the reasons for setting aside such transactions," said Sir Barnes Peacock,<sup>5</sup> "is, that the purchaser is presumed from his position to have better means than the vendor has of ascertaining the value of the property purchased. Well, then, if a person knowing that another holds a fiduciary position and has a better knowledge of the value than the vendor, employs that person to purchase for him, and the trustee purchases secretly in his own name for the benefit of that other, it appears to their Lordships that the sale is equally invalid against the person for whose benefit it is purchased by the trustee as it would be against the trustee himself."

A mortgagee, who sells under a power of sale, cannot, except with the leave of the Court, be allowed to purchase the mortgaged estate.<sup>6</sup>

who has never acted.

A person who has been named as a trustee for sale in an instrument, but who has never accepted or acted in the trust, is not a trustee; and consequently he will not be disabled from purchasing the trust-property.<sup>7</sup> So a merely nominal trustee may purchase. In this case there is no conflict between duty and interest on the part of the

However fair, open, and honest the transaction may be, although the trustee may have given as much for the property as it is reasonably worth, and as much as any one else would give; and although no fraud, mismanagement, or negligence appears to the Court, yet the sale is always liable to be set aside at the suit of the cestui que trust.<sup>2</sup> It is, as we have seen, immaterial that the trustee has not made any advantage. "If the connection (between the trustee and cestui que trust) does not satisfactorily appear to have been dissolved," said Lord Eldon,<sup>3</sup> "it is in the choice of the cestuis que trustent, whether they will take back the property or not. It is founded upon this, that though you may see in a particular case that he has not made advantage, it is utterly impossible to examine upon satisfactory evidence in the power of the Court—by which I mean in the power of the parties—in ninety-nine cases out of an hundred, whether he has made advantage or not. Suppose a trustee buys any estate, and by the knowledge acquired in that character discovers a valuable coal-mine under it; and locking that up in his own breast, enters into a contract with the cestui que trust, if he chooses, how can the Court try that against that denial? The probability is, that a trustee who has once conceived such a purpose will never disclose it; and the cestui que trust will be effectually defrauded."<sup>4</sup>

cestui que
trust may set aside sale.

"If," said Lord Eldon in another case,<sup>5</sup> "a trustee can buy in an honest case, he may in a case having that appearance, but which, from the infirmity of human testimony, may be grossly otherwise."

The duties imposed upon trustees prevent their buying for themselves, and it follows from the general rule that they cannot be permitted to buy for a third person; for the Court can, with as little effect, examine whether that was done by making an undue use of the information received in the course of their duty in the one case as in the other.<sup>6</sup>

may not

Agent of trustee
may not
purchase.

The agent of a trustee for the sale of an estate employed for the sale of the estate cannot purchase;<sup>1</sup> the reasons which disqualify his principal from purchasing apply equally to him. Practically, he is the person who conducts the sale, and it is on his exertions that the result of the sale depends; and, therefore, to say that the principal is incapacitated, but that the agent is not, would be an absurd distinction, the reason remaining the same and being as applicable to the one as to the other.<sup>2</sup>

An agent not for sale, but for management only, and a receiver appointed by the Court, stand in a confidential relation, and cannot purchase without putting themselves at arm's length and a full disclosure of their knowledge.<sup>3</sup>

Trustee
taking lease.

The principle that we are now considering applies to the case of a trustee taking a lease of the trust-property to himself. His duty and his interest may conflict, and therefore, if the lease is advantageous to him, for that is equivalent to a purchase, he must account to the cestui que trust for the profits, and must give up the lease; if it is disadvantageous to him, he will be held to his bargain.<sup>4</sup>

Time within which sale must be
set aside.

Although the Limitation Act (Act XV of 1877, s. 10) provides, that no suit against a person in whom property has become vested in trust for any specific purpose, or against his legal representatives or assigns (not being assigns for valuable consideration) for the purpose of following in his or their hands such property, shall be barred by any length of time; yet a cestui que trust who seeks to set aside a purchase must do so within a reasonable time,<sup>5</sup> otherwise if he allows the trustee to remain in possession for a length of time as absolute owner, his right to relief may be affected by his acquiescence.<sup>6</sup> What period of time would operate as an absolute bar to relief cannot be laid down exactly. Relief has been refused after an acquiescence of seventeen years.<sup>7</sup>

Sales have been set aside after acquiescence for ten<sup>3</sup> and eleven years.<sup>4</sup> But if there has been disguise and concealment on the part of the trustee, the purchase may be set aside even after an interval of twenty years;<sup>5</sup> and there can, of course, be no acquiescence on the part of persons who are not competent to contract. Nor can there be acquiescence if the cestui que trust was ignorant of the fact that the trustee was the purchaser.<sup>6</sup>

The rule as to acquiescence will not apply with the same force if the cestui que trust has been hindered from taking proceedings by poverty,<sup>7</sup> or in the case of creditors.<sup>8</sup> But they may be barred by gross laches, such as delay for thirty-three years.<sup>9</sup>

If the cestui que trust is a person competent to contract, he may confirm the sale, and will be estopped from subsequently disputing it,<sup>10</sup> unless the confirmation has been obtained fraudulently, or he was ignorant of the facts.<sup>11</sup>

The confirmation must not be contemporaneous with the conveyance,<sup>12</sup> and it must be the solemn and deliberate act of the cestui que trust.<sup>13</sup>

In Coles v. Trecothick<sup>3</sup> the same learned Judge said: "Upon the question as to a purchase by a trustee from the cestui que trust, I agree the cestui que trust may deal with his trustee so, that the trustee may become the purchaser of the estate. But, though permitted, it is a transaction of great delicacy, and which the Court will watch with the utmost diligence; so much, that it is very hazardous for a trustee to engage in such a transaction . . . . A trustee may buy from the cestui que trust, provided there is a distinct and clear contract, ascertained to be such after a jealous and scrupulous examination of all the circumstances, proving that the cestui que trust intended the trustee should buy, and there is no fraud, no concealment, no advantage taken by the trustee of information acquired by him in the character of trustee. I admit it is a difficult case to make out, wherever it is contended, that the exception prevails."<sup>4</sup>

Fiduciary

If the relation of trustee and cestui que trust has been in some way dissolved, or if not, the parties are so much at arm's length that they agree to take the character of purchaser and vendor,<sup>5</sup>—if the cestui que trust is well advised of what his rights are,<sup>6</sup> and it is distinctly and fully understood by him that he is selling to the trustee, and the trustee takes no advantage of his situation to produce a beneficial bargain to himself,<sup>7</sup> the trustee may purchase from his cestui que trust, for then he purchases not indeed from himself as trustee, but under a specific contract with his cestui que trust.<sup>8</sup> The consequence is, that until the trustee has by contract done what all the cases admit he may do,—that is to say, effectually shaken off the character of trustee, and put himself in circumstances in which he shall be no

IX.

The burden of proof to show the bona fides of the transaction throughout, that the utmost price that could have been produced was obtained, and that the cestui que trust has not in any way been defrauded, lies upon the trustee.<sup>2</sup> Burden of proof.

A trustee cannot be allowed to act up to the time of sale, to get all the information that may be useful to him, and then to discharge himself from the character of trustee and buy for himself. He must at the time of purchase have fully shaken off the character of trustee by the consent of the cestui que trust freely given, after full information and after the right to purchase has been bargained for.<sup>3</sup>

Where the cestui que trust has taken upon himself the conduct of all the preliminary proceedings requisite for the sale, such as the surveys, the mode and conditions of sale, the plans, the choice of the auctioneer; and has thus acquired a perfect knowledge of the value of the property, and the trustee has not been in a situation to acquire any exclusive information respecting the property, and a contract has then been made for sale by the cestui que trust to the trustee, the Court will deal with the contract as if made between two indifferent persons putting each other at arm's length, and will give effect to the sale, though made for an inadequate price.<sup>4</sup>

So the purchase has been supported where the cestui que trust proposed and pressed it upon the trustee.<sup>5</sup>

And where the trustee had exerted himself considerably to sell the trust-estate, but had not been able to meet with a purchaser, and subsequently agreed to purchase the premises for himself, with the consent and approval of the cestui que trust, Lord Northington refused to set the transaction aside, though he said that he did not like the circumstance of a trustee dealing with his cestui que trust.<sup>6</sup>

LECTURE with the trustee for the purchase by the trustee of the IX. trust-property.<sup>1</sup>

Purchase
by creditors.

Where the cestuis que trustent are creditors of an insolvent estate, the trustee can only purchase with the consent of all the creditors. In Whelpdale v. Cookson,<sup>2</sup> Lord Hardwicke confirmed the sale in case the majority of the creditors interested should not dissent. Lord Eldon, however, in Ex parte Lacey,<sup>3</sup> differed from Lord Hardwicke, saying "I doubt the authority of that case; for if the trustee is a trustee for all the creditors, he is a trustee for them all in the article of selling to others; and if the jealousy of the Court arises from the difficulty of a cestui que trust duly informing himself what is most or least for his advantage, I have considerable doubt whether the majority in that article can bind the minority."

Assignee.

Leave has been given to assignees to purchase upon the condition that the consent of the creditors at a meeting called for the purpose shall have been first obtained.<sup>4</sup>

bid.

The Court will not, where the cestuis que trustent are sui juris, give the trustee leave to bid at a sale by auction. In the case of infants, as we shall see presently, the rule is different. It is for the cestui que trust, the person interested, to decide whether he will sell to the trustee, and not a matter for the Court.<sup>5</sup> The reason why a trustee is not allowed to bid is, because he must have acquired much information, and the Court could feel no security that he would do his duty and communicate this information so as to raise the price if he had a prospect of becoming a purchaser. But if the Court is satisfied that no purchaser, at an adequate price, can be found, then the trustee may be allowed to make proposals and to become the purchaser.<sup>6</sup>

Purchase
from infants.

The cestuis que trustent must be in such a position that they can act for themselves, and can effectually contract with the trustee. A purchase, therefore, by a trustee from infant cestuis que trustent will be void, as the cestuis que trustent are persons incapable of entering into a binding contract.<sup>7</sup> It may be that the trustee is willing to give more than any one else for the property; and in such a case the only way by which he can safely purchase is to institute a suit, and apply to the Court by motion to let him be the purchaser, saying that so much is bid and that he will give more. The Court will examine into the circumstances,—ask who had the conduct of the transaction,—whether there is any reason to suppose the premises could be sold better; and upon the result of that inquiry will let another person prepare the particulars of sale, and let the trustee bid.<sup>1</sup>

An executor or administrator cannot be permitted, either immediately or by means of a trustee, to be the purchaser of any parts of the assets of his testator or intestate, but will be considered as a trustee for the persons interested, and must account to them for the utmost extent of the profit made by him.<sup>2</sup> And the general rule that a trustee shall not purchase trust-property applies to an executor de son tort,<sup>3</sup> or an agent,<sup>4</sup> and to any persons who may stand in a fiduciary position.

Legal re-
tives.

But the rule does not extend to a purchase by a mortgagee from his mortgagor, for the circumstance that two parties stand to each other in the relation of trustee and cestui que trust does not affect any dealing between them unconnected with the subject of the trust.<sup>5</sup> Nor is there any principle in equity that a surviving partner cannot purchase the share of a deceased partner from his representatives.<sup>6</sup> And a creditor taking out execution is not precluded from becoming the purchaser of the property seized under it.<sup>7</sup>

Mortgagee.

If the instrument creating the trust authorizes the trustees to invest on personal security, it is a breach of trust if the trustees lend to one of themselves. The author of the trust relies upon the united vigilance of all the trustees with respect to the solvency of the borrower, and the

X.Right of
cestui que
trust to rents and profits.Tidd v. Lister.

IN the case of a passive trust, the cestui que trust has a right to take the rents and profits or income of the trust-property;<sup>1</sup> and where there is only one cestui que trust, he may compel the trustee to put him in possession of the estate.<sup>2</sup> The cause of action in such a case accrues upon refusal by the trustee to give up the property upon demand by the cestui que trust, and not from the date when the trustee enters into possession.<sup>3</sup> If trustees eject a cestui que trust, they will have to account, not only for rents which they receive, but for the whole of the rents which the tenants were bound to pay.<sup>4</sup> But if there are several cestuis que trustent, the Court will not, as a rule, take the property out of the hands of the trustees, or if it does do so, it will take care that the transfer shall be accompanied with such conditions and restrictions as the nature of the case may require in order to protect the interests of the cestuis que trustent who do not get possession. In Tidd v. Lister,<sup>5</sup> where successive estates were limited by will, it was argued that it was a matter of course in a Court of Equity to divest trustees of the management of the trust-property and to deliver possession of it to the cestui que trust. Sir John Leach, V. C., however, refused to remove the trustees from the management, saying, "My first impressions were strongly against the existence of any such rule. It is perfectly plain from the continuing nature of this trust, that the testator intended that the actual possession of the trust-property should remain with the trustees; and it did appear to me a singular proposition that if a testator, who gives in the first instance a beneficial interest for life only, thinks fit to place the direction of the property in other hands, which is the obvious means of securing the provident management of that property for the advantage of those who are to take in succession, that it should be a principle in a Court of Equity to disappoint that intention, and to deliver over the estate to the cestui que trust for life, unprotected against that bias which he must naturally have to prefer his own immediate interest to the fair rights of those who are to take in remainder . . . . There may be cases in which it may be plain from the expressions in the will, that the testator did not intend that the property should remain under the personal management of the trustees. There may be cases in which it may be plain from the nature of the property that the testator could not mean to exclude the cestui que trust for life from the personal possession of the property, as in the case of a family residence. There may be very special cases in which this Court would deliver the possession of the property to the cestui que trust for life, although the testator's intention appeared to be that it should remain with the trustees, as where the personal occupation of the trust-property was beneficial to the cestui que trust. There the Court, taking means to secure the due protection of the property for the benefit of those in remainder, would in substance be performing the trust according to the intention of the testator."<sup>1</sup>

And where a cestui que trust would be entitled to require the trustee to put him in possession of the trust-property, he may call upon the trustee to convey the property to such person as he may require.<sup>2</sup> Should the trustee refuse to convey, the cestui que trust may institute a suit to compel him to do so, and if it appears that there was no good ground for the refusal, the trustee will have to pay the costs of the suit,<sup>3</sup> as where a trustee has insisted upon enquiring into matters connected with a distinct trust,<sup>4</sup> or refuses to convey through obstinacy and caprice.<sup>5</sup> But a trustee will not be made to pay costs where he acts in good faith and under competent advice, though the fact that the trustee consulted counsel will not necessarily entitle him to his costs.<sup>6</sup> Nor will he be made to pay costs where information as to the existence of the trusts has been withheld from him,<sup>7</sup> or where he has refused to convey in pursuance of an opinion expressed by counsel that the concurrence of certain parties was necessary.<sup>1</sup> "I admit," said Lord Gifford,<sup>2</sup> "that it is only in a strong case that costs will be given against trustees: yet where they refuse without a reasonable motive, for their refusal to act without suit, they will be visited with costs." "Trustees," said Sir J. Leach, V.C.,<sup>3</sup> "are entitled to the protection and direction of the Court in the exercise of their trusts, and can never be called upon to pay costs, unless they refuse to act without suit merely from obstinacy and caprice. In the present case, I am of opinion that the suit has been rendered necessary by the caprice and pertinacity of the trustees; and considering the immense expense to which beneficiaries may be exposed, where a trustee who might have satisfied himself out of Court concerning the propriety of what he was called upon to do, as well as by coming into Court, refuses to act unless he is compelled by a decree, the defendant must pay the costs of the suit."

Indemnity. If there is any real difficulty, the trustees are entitled to require an indemnity.<sup>4</sup>

A trustee is entitled to protect himself from liability. For instance, he may require that all necessary persons are made parties,<sup>5</sup> and he cannot be required to convey any other estate than that conveyed to him.<sup>6</sup> Nor can he be required to accept incorrect recitals.<sup>7</sup> Apparently, a trustee cannot be called upon from time to time to divest himself of different parcels of the trust-estate so as to involve himself as a party to conveyances to a number of different persons. He has a right to say, "If you mean to divest me of my trust, divest me of it altogether, and then make your conveyances as you think proper."<sup>8</sup> If the trustee has reasonable suspicions that the cestui que trust has been induced to enter into the contract by coercion, undue influence, fraud, misrepresentation or mistake, it is his duty to refuse to convey; and he will not be visited with the costs of a suit to compel him to convey, even though it appears that the suspicions were unfounded. But he must take some steps to ascertain whether or not the contract is really of an improper character; mere suspicion is not of itself sufficient to warrant a refusal to convey, for enquiry may show that it is groundless.<sup>1</sup>

If the property is liable to succession duty, the trustee must see that it is paid.<sup>2</sup>

The cestui que trust has the right to have the intention of the author of the trust specifically enforced to the extent of his particular interest. The Specific Relief Act<sup>3</sup> provides, that the specific performance of any contract may, in the discretion of the Court, be enforced, (a) when the act agreed to be done is in the performance, wholly or partly, of a trust, and the following illustration is appended to the section: "A holds certain stock in trust for B. A wrongfully disposes of the stock. The law creates an obligation on A to restore the same quantity of stock to B, and B may enforce specific performance of this obligation."

The other parties entitled may express a desire that the trust should be differently administered; but if such a divergence from the donor's will would prejudice or injuriously affect the rights of any one cestui que trust, he may compel the trustees to adhere strictly and literally to the line of duty prescribed to them.<sup>4</sup>

If property is given to trustees to hold for the benefit of any persons until they attain some age over the age of majority, and then to pay it over to such persons absolutely, the Court will allow the cestuis que trustent, on attaining majority, to have the property handed over. The cestuis que trustent, if they have an absolute and indefeasible interest in the trust-property, are not bound to wait until the time fixed by the author of the trust. If some other person is to have the enjoyment of the property until the time fixed, then the cestuis que trustent must wait until the time arrives. on his attaining twenty-five, he may claim the fund on attaining majority. If, however, the trust is to pay the income to A until B attains twenty-five, and then to hand over the principal to B, B must wait until he attains twenty-five before he can claim the fund.<sup>1</sup> If a sum of money is bequeathed to trustees upon trust to purchase an annuity for a certain person who is of age, and there is no gift over, or provision for cesser, he may claim the sum given, instead of the annuity.<sup>2</sup> So a trust for the maintenance of an adult, is a trust for his benefit generally, and the principal will, on his insolvency, pass to his assignee.<sup>3</sup>

use.

There is one exception to the rule that a cestui que trust, who has an absolute interest in a trust-fund, may claim the fund on attaining majority,—namely, where property is settled upon a married woman for her separate use, without power of anticipation. In such a case she is not entitled to claim the fund, and cannot by any device evade the restraint upon anticipation.<sup>4</sup> The reason for this is the peculiar nature of this trust. It is intended as a provision for the wife, and the object would be defeated if the wife could obtain possession of the principal.

Cestuis que trustent have a right at all reasonable times to inspect the documents relating to the trust, and at their own expense to be furnished with copies of them.<sup>5</sup> And where the relation of trustee and cestui que trust has been established, all cases submitted, and opinions taken, by the trustee to guide himself in the administration of his trust, and not for the purpose of his own defence in any litigation against himself, must be produced to the cestui que trust.<sup>6</sup>

title-deeds.

Trustees do not act negligently in leaving documents of title in the hands of one of their number and allowing him to receive the income. The reason is, that the deeds must be held by some one person, unless they are deposited with bankers or placed in a box secured by a number of

A cestui que trust, if competent to contract, may alienate or devise his interest in the trust-fund,<sup>2</sup> even if his interest only amounts to a bare possibility.<sup>3</sup> The cestui que trust may exercise this right of ownership without the intervention of the trustees, who have no power of interfering,<sup>4</sup> and where the cestui que trust conveys his interest in the trust-fund to a purchaser, the purchaser may institute a suit against the trustee for a conveyance of his interest.<sup>5</sup> But a mere right to sue a trustee for the chance of recovering from him interest or profits of part of the trust-funds in respect of which he is alleged to have committed a breach of trust, is not assignable.<sup>6</sup>

"The purchaser of an equitable interest in choses-in-action should, for his security, never dispense with the two following precautions: First, he should make inquiries of the trustee or debtor whether the equity or claim of the vendor has been made the subject of any prior incumbrance. The purchaser, as the implied agent of the cestui que trust, has a right to require all the necessary information; and if the trustee or debtor refuse to answer the inquiry, or be guilty of misrepresentation, or even of misstatement from forgetfulness, the purchaser may charge him personally with the amount of the consequent loss. Secondly, upon the execution of the assignment, the purchaser should himself give notice of his own equitable title to the trustee or debtor, by means of which he will gain precedence of all prior incumbrancers who have not been equally diligent, and will prevent the postponement of himself to subsequent incumbrancers more diligent than himself; and of course the trustee or debtor will be personally responsible, if after such notice he parts with the fund to any person not having a prior claim."<sup>7</sup>

 Separate use. If property is settled upon a married woman for her separate use without power of anticipation, she cannot, upon the same principle that prevents her from claiming the trust-fund (see ante, p. 272), part with her interest in the trust-fund. But a general restriction against alienation is against the policy of the law, and will not operate to prevent the cestui que trust from parting with his interest.<sup>1</sup>

Method of conveyance. As far as regards persons other than European British subjects, the cestui que trust may convey his interest by word of mouth. The 9th section of the Statute of Frauds, which provides that all grants and assignments of any trust or confidence must be in writing, signed by the party granting or assigning the same, otherwise they are utterly void, is still in force, at least in the Presidency-towns, so far as regards European British subjects, and from them a writing is therefore necessary. This section refers to assignments by the cestui que trust.<sup>2</sup> Before the Statute, the transfer of an equitable interest might have been made by parol. A writing is all that is now necessary, but it is the practice to employ the same species of instrument and the same form of words in the transfer of equitable as of legal estates.<sup>3</sup>

Assignee takes subject to all equities. The assignee of the interest of a cestui que trust, as a general rule, takes it subject to all the equities to which it was liable in the hands of the assignor,<sup>4</sup> and he may even be liable to equities subsequently attaching. Thus, if an executor assigns his reversionary legacy, and is subsequently guilty of a devastavit, the legacy must make good the loss thereby occasioned.<sup>5</sup>

Set-off. The assignee takes subject to any right of set-off which may exist. In Cavendish v. Geaves,<sup>6</sup> the principles were thus stated by Lord Romilly, M. R.: "If a customer borrow money from his banker, and give a bond to secure it, and afterwards, on the balance of his general banking account, a balance is due to the customer from the same bankers who are the obligees of the bond, a right to set off the balance against the money due on the bond will exist both at law and in equity. LECTURE

“If, the firm were altered, and the bond assigned by the original obligees to the new firm, and notice of that assignment given to the debtor, and if after this a balance were due to him from the new firm (the assignees of the bond), then . . . the customer would be entitled to set off the balance due to him against the bond-debt due from him.

“If, after the bond had been given, it had been assigned to strangers, and no notice of that assignment had been given to the original debtor (the obligor of the bond), then his rights would remain the same . . . and the assignees of the chose-in-action would be bound by the equities affecting their assignors.

“But if notice of that assignment had been given to the original debtor, no right of set off would exist for the balance subsequently due by the bankers to the obligor; because the persons entitled to the bond would, as the obligor knew, be different persons from the debtor to him on the general account with whom he had continued to deal.

“If the assignment of the bond had been made to the new firm with notice to the obligor, they would, if debtors on the general account, be liable to the same rights of set-off as if they had been the obligee.

“If after the alteration of the firm, and after the assignment of the bond to the new firm, with notice to the debtor or obligor of that assignment, an assignment had been made of the bond to strangers, and no notice of that second assignment was given to the obligor, then the rights of set-off would still remain to him in equity as against the first assignees of whose assignment he had notice, and the second assignees would be bound by it, because, as I have stated, the assignees of the bond take it subject to all the equities which affect the assignors.”<sup>1</sup>

Set-off will not be allowed where the mutual demands are between the parties in different rights, as if A give a legacy to B, and appoint C his executor, or executor and residuary legatee, B may sue C for the legacy, and C cannot set off a debt owing by B to C not as executor, but Mutual

respect of same rights.

Notice to trustees.

When the cestui que trust assigns his interest in the trust-fund, the assignee should take care to give notice to the trustees of the assignment. It is not necessary that notice should be given, but it is highly advisable.<sup>3</sup> First, in order to prevent a subsequent assignee from gaining priority by giving notice; for notice of the assignment of a chose-in-action gives priority, and is equivalent to the possession of personalty capable of actual delivery. The principles upon which the Court acts were thus stated by Sir T. Plumer in Dearle v. Hall:<sup>4</sup> "Wherever it is intended to complete the transfer of a chose-in-action, there is a mode of dealing with it, which a Court of Equity considers tantamount to possession,—namely, notice given to the legal depository of the fund. Where a contract respecting property in the hands of other persons, who have a legal right to the possession, is made behind the back of those in whom the legal estate is thus vested, it is necessary, if the security is intended to attach on the thing itself, to lay hold of that thing in the manner in which its nature permits it to be laid hold of,—that is, by giving notice of the contract to those in whom the legal interest is. By such notice, the legal holders are converted into trustees for the new purchaser, and are charged with responsibility towards him; and the cestui que trust is deprived of the power of carrying the same security repeatedly into the market, and of inducing third persons to advance money upon it, under the erroneous belief that it continues to belong to him absolutely, free from incumbrance, and that the trustees are still trustees for him and for no one else. That precaution is always taken by diligent purchasers and incumbrancers: if it is not taken there is neglect, and it is fit that it should be understood, that the solicitor who conducts the business for the party advancing the money is responsible for that neglect. The consequence of such neglect is, that the trustee of the fund remains ignorant of any alteration having been made in the equitable rights affecting it: he considers himself to be a trustee for the same individual as before, and no other person is known to him as his cestui que trust. The original cestui que trust, though he has in fact parted with his interest, appears to the world to be the complete equitable owner, and remains in the order, management, and disposition of the property as absolutely as ever, so that he has it in his power to obtain by means of it a false and delusive credit. He may come into the market to dispose of that which he has previously sold; and how can those who may chance to deal with him protect themselves from his fraud? Whatever diligence may be used by a puisne incumbrancer or purchaser, whatever inquiries he may make in order to investigate the title, and to ascertain the exact state of the original right of the vendor, and his continuing right, the trustees who are the persons to whom application for information would naturally be made, will truly and unhesitatingly represent to all who put questions to them, that the fund remains the sole absolute property of the proposed vendor. These inconveniences and mischiefs are the natural consequences of omitting to give notice to trustees, and they must be considered as foreseen by those who in transactions of that kind omit to give notice; for they are the consequences which in the experience of mankind usually follow such omissions. To give notice is a matter of no difficulty; and whenever persons, treating for a chose-in-action, do not give notice to the trustee or executor, who is the legal holder of the funds, they do not perfect their title; they do not do all that is necessary in order to make the thing belong to them in preference to all other persons; and they become responsible in some respects for the easily foreseen consequences of their negligence.”<sup>1</sup>

The assignment may be by way of mortgage, and in the case of mortgages of policies or shares, it would seem that the actual possession of the policy or certificate is immaterial as affecting the priority gained by notice.<sup>2</sup> Where a policy is deposited as security for money advanced, and the intention of the parties was only to give a lien by the deposit, and not to confer an equitable right on the lender to receive the money, the instrument is not in the order and disposition of the borrower.<sup>1</sup> But if the deposit is made upon an agreement that the depositee shall have conferred upon him a right to the money, then as the debt would pass to the assignee, the instrument which is the title-deed to the debt will pass also.<sup>2</sup> Where a policy was to become void in certain cases, unless it "should have been legally assigned," it was held, that this meant "validly and effectually assigned," that an equitable charge, by mere deposit, came within the exception, and that notice of it to the office was unnecessary.<sup>3</sup>

Secondly.—Notice is necessary to prevent the trustee from paying over the trust-fund to the cestui que trust,<sup>4</sup> and in the case of a policy of assurance, to prevent the office from taking a surrender from him.<sup>5</sup>

Thirdly.—Notice is necessary in order to prevent choses-in-action in the possession, order, and disposition of an insolvent, or of which he is the reputed owner, from passing to the Official Assignee, for choses-in-action are goods and chattels within the reputed-ownership clause of the Insolvent Act.<sup>6</sup> The assignment of a policy of insurance does not take it out of the order and disposition of the assignor, if no notice is given to the insurer.<sup>7</sup> Shares in companies are not things in action within the Act;<sup>8</sup> but debentures of a company by which they undertake to pay a sum of money and interest, and charge the undertaking and property with the payment thereof are within it.<sup>9</sup>

of property.

The notice should specify the property charged with reasonable accuracy. A mistake will not vitiate the notice as against a subsequent purchaser, if the fund to be charged is mentioned.<sup>10</sup> Notice by parol is sufficient, but it is better to give it in writing.<sup>11</sup>

Knowledge of an incumbrance acquired not by notice but aliunde is apparently sufficient. In Lloyd v. Banks,<sup>1</sup> Lord Cairns, L. C., said: "I do not think it would be consistent with the principles upon which this Court has always proceeded, if I were to hold that, under no circumstances, could a trustee, without express notice from the incumbrancer, be fixed with knowledge of an incumbrance upon the fund of which he is the trustee, so as to give the incumbrancer the same benefit which he would have had if he had himself given notice to the trustee. It must depend upon the facts of the case; but I am quite prepared to say that I think the Court would expect to find that those who alleged that the trustee had knowledge of the incumbrance had made it out, not by any evidence of casual conversation, much less by any proof of what would only be constructive notice, but by proof that the mind of the trustee has in some way been brought to an intelligent apprehension of the nature of the incumbrance which has come upon the property, so that a reasonable man, or an ordinary man of business, would act upon the information and would regulate his conduct by it in the execution of the trust. If it can be shown that in any way the trustee has got knowledge of that kind—knowledge which would operate on the mind of any rational man, or man of business, and make him act with reference to the knowledge he has so acquired—then I think the end is attained, and that there has been fixed upon the conscience of the trustee, and through that upon the trust-fund, a security against its being parted with in any way that would be inconsistent with the incumbrance which has been created."<sup>2</sup>

 X trustees or of the person liable, is notice to the client.<sup>2</sup> — But notice to a solicitor employed in one transaction is not notice to him when employed for another person in a different transaction.<sup>3</sup> The circumstances of a mortgagor being a solicitor and preparing the mortgage-deed, and of the mortgagee employing no other solicitor, are not sufficient to constitute the former the solicitor of the latter, so as to affect him with notice of an incumbrance known to the solicitor.<sup>4</sup>

Agents. When the agent of a company and the assignor are the same person, notice to the agent is not sufficient.<sup>5</sup>

Notice to one of several trustees. Notice to one of several trustees is sufficient during his lifetime,<sup>6</sup> but it is better that notice should be given to all.<sup>7</sup> If only one trustee has had notice, and he dies, or ceases to be trustee, a subsequent incumbrancer will gain priority by giving notice to a surviving or other trustee prior to any notice to him by the first incumbrancer.<sup>8</sup>

Notice before trust-fund received. Notice to persons who are not trustees, though they are

It may be observed that the assignee of a debt is not bound to give notice of its nonpayment to the assignor.<sup>6</sup> Where two assignments are contained in one deed, notice of one is not constructive notice of the other.<sup>7</sup> execution

 of trust.

If a trust has been properly created either by the declaration of the author, or by implication of law, it will not be allowed to fail for want of a trustee.<sup>4</sup> Thus, if property is bequeathed to trustees upon certain trusts, and the trustees die in the lifetime of the testator, the trusts will not be void;<sup>5</sup> or if the trustee disclaims,<sup>6</sup> or is incapable of taking,<sup>7</sup> or if the trustee fail from any other cause, the failure will be supplied by the Court.<sup>8</sup> "I take it," said Wilmot, C. J., "to be a first and fundamental principle in equity, that the trust follows the legal estate wheresoever it goes, except it comes into the hands of a purchaser for valuable consideration without notice. A Court of Equity considers devises of trust as distinct substantive devises, standing on their own basis independent of the legal estate, and the legal estate is nothing but the shadow which always follows the trust-estate in the hands of a Court of Equity."<sup>9</sup>

Suit for
 of trust.

If the trustee fails, the cestui que trust may institute a suit for the execution of the trust, and the trust will be executed by the Court until trustees can be appointed. "The Court," said Lord Eldon, "will not permit the negligence of the trustee, accident, or other circumstances to disappoint the interests of those for whose benefit the trust is to be executed."<sup>10</sup> "The person who creates a trust," said Wilmot, C. J., "means it should at all events be executed. The individuals named as trustees are only the nominal instruments to execute that intention, and if they fail, either by death, or by being under disability, or by refusing to act, the constitution has provided a trustee. Where no trustees are appointed at all, this Court assumes the office. There is some personalty in every choice of trustees; and if the trust cannot be executed through the medium which was in the primary view of the testator, it must be executed through the medium which the constitution has substituted in its place."<sup>1</sup>

In executing a trust, the Court acts upon and carries out the intention of the author of the trust, and does not go beyond it, except in cases where the parties have the same common interest, or those who have an adverse interest are consenting. And the Court will, in some cases, act retrospectively, as in directing past maintenance.<sup>2</sup> The difficulty and impracticability of carrying the trust into execution will not prevent the Court from acting. However arduous the trust is, the Court will carry it into execution.<sup>3</sup> However difficult it may be to select the persons intended to be benefited, and though it must depend from the nature of the trust upon the opinion of the trustees as to the merits of the persons who are the objects, yet the Court will execute the trust. If a trust can by any possibility be exercised by the Court, the non-execution by the trustees shall not prejudice the cestuis que trustent.<sup>4</sup> If the settlor has laid down a rule for the trusts, or if he has empowered his trustees to act upon a certain state of facts of which the Court can be informed by evidence, and judge as well as the trustees could, the Court can make the judgment as well as the trustees, and when informed by the evidence, can judge what is just and equitable.<sup>5</sup> If no rule has been given by the trustees, the Court will generally act upon the maxim that "equality is equity."<sup>6</sup> If, however, the nature of the trust is such that equal division is impossible, the Court

 trustees.

The cestui que trust has a right to have the trust-property administered by proper persons, and by a proper number of persons. If, therefore, a trustee dies,<sup>2</sup> or goes abroad,<sup>3</sup> the cestui que trust, even though only in remainder,<sup>4</sup> may sue to have the proper number of trustees filled up.

Suit for appoint-
 trustees.

So, if a trustee disclaims the office or refuses to act,<sup>5</sup> or if there is a disability on the part of the trustee to act, as where he takes up his permanent residence abroad,<sup>6</sup> the cestui que trust may institute a suit to have him removed and to have a new trustee appointed in his place. The taking up a permanent residence abroad does not ipso facto deprive a trustee of his office, but still it is such a disqualification as entitles the cestui que trust to have a new trustee appointed.<sup>7</sup> So it is a good ground for the removal of a trustee and the appointment of a new trustee that he has become insolvent,<sup>8</sup> although insolvency, as we have seen (ante, p. 131), is not necessarily a disqualification for the office. Again a trustee may be removed if he misapplies the revenues of the trust-property, and grossly misbehaves himself in the execution of the trust,<sup>9</sup> as by renewing a lease for his own benefit,<sup>10</sup> purchasing the trust-property,<sup>11</sup> concurring in a breach of trust,<sup>12</sup> or absconding under a charge of forgery.<sup>13</sup>

"If the trust be under the administration of the Court, and the surviving trustee dies, the appointment of other trustees is not a matter of course, but rests in the discretion of the Court, having regard to the state of the trust at the time."<sup>14</sup>

In a suit filed by the cestui que trust for the purpose of removing a trustee, it is not scandalous or impertinent to challenge every act of the trustee as misconduct, nor to impute to him any corrupt or improper motive in the execution of the trust, nor to allege that his conduct is the vindictive consequence of some act on the part of the cestui que trust, or of some change in his situation; but it is impertinent, and may be scandalous, to state any circumstances as evidence of general malice or personal hostility.<sup>1</sup>

If the trustee is removed on the ground of misconduct, he must bear the costs of the suit, as it is an act necessitated by himself.<sup>2</sup> Costs.

The Court will not discharge a trustee merely because, in the exercise of his discretion, he refuses to do some act required by his cestui que trust, as where he refuses to consent to a particular investment, even though the trustee is willing to be relieved from the trust.<sup>3</sup> Nor will the Court remove a trustee because he has been under a misunderstanding as to his duty.<sup>4</sup> Grounds for removal of trustee.

Where it appeared that the co-trustees were unwilling to act in the trust with the trustee who was sought to be discharged, and he insisted on being continued, Lord Nottingham said,—“I like not that a man should be ambitious of a trust, when he can get nothing but trouble by it;” and without any reflection on the trustee, declared that he should meddle no further in the trust.<sup>5</sup>

Where the Court appoints new trustees, it will not give them the power of appointing new trustees in their stead.<sup>6</sup>

In appointing new trustees, the fitness of the proposed new trustee is a matter for consideration. The author of the trust is unfettered in his selection of trustees, but when the Court appoints new trustees, it requires to be satisfied as to their fitness for the office. Near relations of the cestui que trust, though they may be appointed by the person creating the trust, will not be appointed by the Court except in cases of absolute necessity.<sup>7</sup> Rules for selecting new trustees.

LECTURE X. The principles upon which the Court acts in appointing new trustees were thus stated by Turner, L. J., in In re Tempest:<sup>1</sup>—"It was said in argument, and it has been frequently said, that, in making such appointments, the Court acts upon and exercises its discretion; and this, no doubt, is generally true; but the discretion which the Court has and exercises in making such appointments, is not, as I conceive, a mere arbitrary discretion, but a discretion in the exercise of which the Court is, and ought to be, governed by some general rule and principles; and, in my opinion, the difficulty which the Court has to encounter in these cases lies not so much in ascertaining the rules and principles by which it ought to be guided, as in applying those rules and principles to the varying circumstances of each particular case. The following rules and principles may, I think, safely be laid down as applying to all cases of appointments, by the Court, of new trustees:—

"First, the Court will have regard to the wishes of the persons by whom the trust has been created, if expressed in the instrument of trust, or clearly to be collected from it. I think this rule may be safely laid down, because if the author of the trust has in terms declared that a particular person, or a person filling a particular character, should not be a trustee of the instrument, there cannot, as I apprehend, be the least doubt that the Court would not appoint to the office a person whose appointment was so prohibited; and I do not think that upon a question of this description any distinction can be drawn between express declarations and demonstrated intention. The analogy of the course which the Court pursues in the appointment of guardians affords, I think, some support to this rule. The Court in those cases attends to the wishes of the parents, however informally they may be expressed.

"Another rule which may, I think, safely be laid down is this—that the Court will not appoint a person to be trustee with a view to the interest of some of the persons interested under the trust, in opposition either to the wishes of the testator or to the interests of others of the cestuis que trustent. I think so for this reason, that it is of the essence of the duty of every trustee to hold an even hand between the parties interested under the trust. Every trustee is in duty bound to look to the interests of all, and not

A third rule which, I think, may safely be laid down, is—that the Court, in appointing a trustee, will have regard to the question, whether his appointment will promote or impede the execution of the trust, for the very purpose of the appointment is, that the trust may be better carried into execution.”

And as another rule, it may be said, that the Court will have regard to the wishes of the persons, if any, empowered to appoint new trustees.<sup>1</sup>

We have seen (ante, p. 137) that a trustee is bound to protect the trust-estate; and if he fails in his duty, the cestui que trust may institute a suit to compel him to act.<sup>2</sup> Where, by the terms of a marriage settlement, a trustee was to compel payment of a sum of money due on covenant, but by consent of the cestuis que trustent the money was left outstanding on that security, it was held, upon their subsequent application to have the money called in and invested, that the trustee was bound, if necessary, to enforce payment by an action on the covenant without requiring any indemnity from the cestuis que trustent; and in default of so doing, he was compelled to pay the costs of a suit brought against him to enforce the execution of the covenant.<sup>3</sup>

Not only may a cestui que trust institute a suit to compel a trustee to do any particular act of his duty as such, but he may obtain an injunction to restrain his trustee from doing any act which would amount to a breach of trust. It is a principle of the Court of Equity that a trustee shall not be permitted to use the powers which the trust may confer upon him except for the legitimate purposes of the trust.<sup>4</sup> The Specific Relief Act<sup>5</sup> provides that “a perpetual injunction may be granted to prevent the breach of an obligation existing in favour of the applicant, whether expressly or by implication. When the defendant invades, or threatens to invade, the plaintiff’s right to, or enjoyment of, property, the Court may grant a perpetual injunction in the following case (namely):—

And the following illustration is appended to the section, —“A trustee threatens a breach of trust. His co-trustees, if any, should, and the beneficial owners may, sue for an injunction to prevent the breach of trust.”<sup>1</sup> When the act complained of would, if done, be irremediable, the Court will interfere as a matter of course.<sup>2</sup> The jurisdiction of the Court, however, rests not upon the fact that the injury would be irremediable, but upon the breach of trust.<sup>3</sup> If a sale by trustees is conducted in such a manner that, as between the trustees, who have the power of sale, and the cestuis que trustent, it constitutes a breach of trust, the cestuis qui trustent are entitled to prevent the sale from being completed, leaving the purchaser to his remedy against the trustees.<sup>4</sup> Any one of the cestuis que trustent, however small his interest may be, and though an infant, may sue.<sup>5</sup> Although the words of an Act be imperative, and there is no qualification on the face of the section, the inherent authority of a Court of Equity to repress fraud and prevent unfair dealing, and to exercise a wholesome control over persons standing in the character of trustees, empowers the Court to look into the circumstances and to decide whether it ought or not to do that which the Legislature has, prima facie, commanded to be done. An injunction accordingly was granted, on a proper case being made out, to restrain the directors of a company from acting on an order for payment out of Court to them of a sum of money, notwithstanding the words of the Act under which the order was made were imperative.<sup>6</sup> A cestui que trust, who has a common interest with others in the trust-property, is entitled to sue on behalf of himself and the others for the protection of the property by injunction.<sup>7</sup> And the Court may interfere by injunction, even though no breach of trust has been committed, if from the character of the trustee it is probable that the trust-fund may be lost or injured. Thus, an injunction against parting with the trust-property may be obtained against an insolvent trustee,<sup>1</sup> or one who is proved to be of bad character, drunken habits, and great poverty.<sup>2</sup> But the Court will not grant such an injunction merely because the trustee is poor.<sup>3</sup>

There is another important class of cases in which a cestui que trust has the right to seek the assistance of a Court of Equity against his trustee,—namely, those in which the trustee has improperly purchased the trust-estate.<sup>4</sup> I now propose to consider the nature of the relief which the Court will grant in such cases.

Wrongful
by trustee.

The cestui que trust, or his representatives, may, if the property is still in the hands of the trustee, insist upon a reconveyance by the trustee,<sup>5</sup> who will be discharged at once.<sup>6</sup>

If the trustee has sold the property to a purchaser with notice of the breach of trust, the cestui que trust can insist upon a reconveyance by the purchaser.<sup>7</sup>

The reconveyance will be without prejudice to the interests of persons, such as lessees, who have contracted with the trustee or his vendor bond fide before the suit was instituted.<sup>8</sup>

The cestui que trust must, on the reconveyance, repay the purchase-money with interest,<sup>9</sup> which in this country would be at the rate of 6 per cent. Where a trustee had paid a part of the purchase-money into Court, and it had

for outlay.

If the trustee has expended money in substantial improvements or lasting repairs,<sup>5</sup> or such as have a tendency to bring the estate to a better sale,<sup>6</sup> he will be allowed credit for the moneys so expended. In estimating the improvements, old buildings, if incapable of repair, will be valued as old materials, but otherwise as buildings standing.<sup>7</sup> On the other hand, the trustee will be charged for acts that deteriorate the value of the estate.<sup>8</sup> When the contract is vitiated by the presence of actual fraud, allowance will still be made to the trustee for necessary repairs;<sup>9</sup> and in one case allowance was made for material repairs and lasting improvements.<sup>10</sup> But in another case of actual fraud the Court refused any allowance for improvements. "If," said Lord Fitzgibbon, "a man has acquired an estate by rank and abominable fraud, and shall afterwards expend his money in improving the estate, is he therefore to retain it in his hands against the lawful proprietor? If such a rule should prevail, it would justify a proposition I once heard at the bar, that the common equity of the country was to improve the right owner out of the possession of his estate."<sup>11</sup>

The cestui que trust may, instead of a reconveyance, require the property to be resold. If he adopts this course, the practice is to put up the estate for auction at the price given by the trustee, together with any sums expended by him for repairs and improvements. If any advance is made, the trustee will not be allowed to have the estate; if not, he will be held to his bargain.<sup>1</sup>

X.

If the trustee bought the estate in one lot, and the cestui que trust is desirous of selling it in several lots, he must repay the trustee his purchase-money with interest, and then may sell as he likes.<sup>2</sup>

If the trustee has resold the estate, he must account for any profit with interest.<sup>3</sup>

If a trustee, who has purchased the trust-estate, sells to a purchaser for value without notice, the cestui que trust may charge the trustee, either with the difference between the price for which the trustee gave, and the price at which he sold,<sup>4</sup> or the real value of the estate at the time of sale<sup>5</sup> with interest.<sup>6</sup>

Where a sale to a trustee is set aside, the trustee must pay the costs of the suit.<sup>7</sup> But if there be great delay on the part of the cestui que trust, costs will be refused him, though he succeed in the suit;<sup>8</sup> and, on the other hand, if the suit be dismissed, not merely because the transaction was not originally impeachable, but merely on account of the great interval of time, the Court may refuse to order the costs of the defendant.<sup>9</sup>

We have now to consider the rights of the cestui que trust as against third persons to whom the trust-property has been wrongfully conveyed. If the person to whom the property has been conveyed is a volunteer,—that is to

LECTURE X. — say, a person who has given no consideration for the conveyance, the trust-estate may be followed into his hands, whether he had notice of the trust or not, for the Court implies notice where no consideration has passed.<sup>1</sup>

Purchasers for value. If the person into whose hands the property has come, purchased it for valuable consideration, with notice of the trust, he is bound to the same extent and in the same manner as the person from whom he purchased.<sup>2</sup> "If," said Lord Hardwicke, "a person will purchase with notice of another's rights, his giving a consideration will not avail him, for he throws away his money voluntarily, and of his own free will."<sup>3</sup>

So, a purchaser will be affected with any incumbrance on the estate if he had notice of it when he purchased,<sup>4</sup> or of a lien for unpaid purchase-money.<sup>5</sup> And the assignee of a chose-in-action must take it subject, as we have just seen, to all the equities.<sup>6</sup>

"The rules of this Court," said Malins, V. C.,<sup>7</sup> "are perfectly well settled, and are the rules of honesty and fair dealing, that no party to an illegal or fraudulent contract can derive any benefit from it; and that all persons who obtain possession of trust-funds, with a knowledge that their title is derived from a breach of trust, will be compelled to restore such trust-funds."

Purchase from guardian. When a person, after attaining majority, questions any sale of property made by his guardian during his minority, the burden lies on the person who upholds the purchase, not only to show that, under the circumstances of the case, either the guardian had the power to sell, or that the purchaser reasonably supposed that he had such power, but further, that the whole transaction as regards the purchaser's part in it was bonâ fide. When either the person who sells labours under a disqualification, or the purchaser stands in a fiduciary relation to the owner of the property, the bona fides of the dealing cannot be presumed, but must be made out by the purchaser.<sup>1</sup>

The notice need not be express, but may be constructive. The principle of constructive notice is, that a man shall be deemed to know such matters affecting the property which he purchases, as would have come to his knowledge if he had made proper inquiries. Where one of three trustees, who was also the solicitor of the purchaser, executed an assignment of leasehold property held jointly by them to a purchaser, and forged the signatures of his two co-trustees, and also the requisite assent of the cestui que trust to the sale, it was held, that the circumstances attending the transaction were sufficient to affect the purchaser with notice of some trust, if not the actual nature of it; and that he had constructive notice of the trust through the knowledge of his solicitor.<sup>2</sup>

If, however, the trust-property is conveyed to a purchaser for valuable consideration without notice of the trust, the purchaser is entitled to hold the property discharged of the trust, leaving the cestuis que trustent to their remedy against the trustees.<sup>3</sup> "From a purchaser for value without notice," said James, L. J.,<sup>4</sup> "the Court takes away nothing which that purchaser has honestly acquired. If the purchaser has got possession of a piece of parchment or of property, or of anything else which he thought he was getting honestly, this Court, in my opinion, has no right to interfere with him."

A purchaser without notice from a purchaser with notice is not liable. He is in the same position as if he had himself originally purchased without notice, and the fact that the sale to him was fraudulent does not affect him.<sup>5</sup>

Nor is a purchaser with notice from a purchaser without

Fraud.

If a purchaser, however honest, on the completion of his purchase, acquires a defective title, the Court will not allow that defective title to be strengthened, either by his own fraud, or by the fraud of any other person.<sup>2</sup>

Doubtful equity.

In some cases it may be doubtful what construction would be put on the instrument of trust, and the purchaser may take with a doubtful equity. The question may then arise, how far the purchaser would be bound. Upon this point Lord Leonards said, that where, upon the whole articles, it is plain what construction the Court would have put upon them had it been called upon to execute them at the time they were made, they should be enforced, however difficult the construction might be, even as against a purchaser with notice, but not after a lapse of time, where there was anything so equivocal or ambiguous in them as to render it doubtful how they ought to be effectuated.<sup>3</sup>

Following converted trust-property.

Where a trustee has wrongfully disposed of trust-property, the cestui que trust may follow the purchase-money, or any other property that has been substituted in the place of the trust-estate, in the hands of the trustee or his representatives; and such substituted property will be impressed with the same trusts as the original trust-property was subject to.<sup>4</sup> Thus, if a trustee expends the whole of the trust-money in the purchase of land, the cestui que trust will be entitled to the land.<sup>5</sup>

Proof of purchase with trust-money.

The cestui que trust must, of course, prove that the land was purchased with the trust-moneys. This may be proved, either by direct evidence, as where trust-money was paid to a trustee by a cheque, which was next day paid over by him in part-payment for the estate,<sup>6</sup> or by mere parol evidence of declarations by the trustees; but these, in the absence of corroborating circumstances, will be received with great caution.<sup>1</sup> The presumption, however, is, that a purchase made by a trustee, whose duty is so to invest trust-money, has been made in execution of the trust.<sup>2</sup> And where a trustee paid in trust-moneys (applicable to be invested in the purchase of real estate), and moneys of his own, to his general account at his bankers, and then bought real estate, and paid for it by a cheque on his bankers, the Court—the purchase having proved a beneficial one—decided that the cestuis que trustent were entitled to hold, that such payment was made out of that part of the moneys standing to the general account which it was proper so to employ,—i.e., the trust-moneys.<sup>3</sup>

The mere fact that a trustee has trust-money in his hands when he makes a purchase, is not sufficient to attach the trust to lands bought by him.<sup>4</sup> The fact that a trustee for purchase of lands has purchased lands, does not necessarily raise the presumption that he invested the trust-money in the purchase. Such a presumption may, however, be raised when the sum paid is the precise, or nearly precise, amount of trust-money.<sup>5</sup>

Where the trust-property has been converted into money, currency notes, or negotiable instruments, greater difficulty arises in tracing it in the hands of the trustee or his representatives. It was at one time said that such property could not be traced, because it had no 'earmark.' But in Miller v. Race,<sup>6</sup> Lord Mansfield said: "It has been quaintly said 'that the reason why money cannot be followed is, because it has no earmark;' but this is not true. The true reason is, upon account of the currency of it, it cannot be recovered after it has passed in currency. So, in case of money stolen, the true owner cannot recover it, after it has been paid away fairly and honestly upon a valuable and bona fide consideration; but before money has passed in currency, an action may be brought for the money itself. LECTURE case in 1 G., 1, at the sittings—Thomas v. Whip—before X. Lord Macclesfield, which was an action upon assumpsit by — an administrator against the defendant for money had and received to his use. The defendant was nurse to the intestate during his sickness; and being alone, conveyed away the money. And Lord Macclesfield held, that the action lay. Now this must be esteemed a finding at least. Apply this to a case of a bank-note,—an action may lie against the finder, it is true; but not after it has been paid away in currency.” “It makes no difference in reason or law,” said Lord Ellenborough, C. J.,<sup>1</sup> “into what other form, different from the original, the change may have been made,—whether it be into that of promissory notes for the security of the money which was produced by the sale of the goods of the principal, or into other merchandize, for the product of, or substitute for, the original thing still follows the nature of the thing itself, as long as it can be ascertained to be such, and the right only ceases when the means of ascertainment fail, which is the case when the subject is turned into money, and mixed and confounded in a general mass of the same description. The difficulty which arises in such a case is a difficulty of fact and not of law, and the dictum that money has no ear-mark must be understood in the same way,—i. e., as predicated only of an undivided and undistinguishable mass of current money. But money in a bag, or otherwise kept apart from other moneys, guineas, or other coin marked (if the fact were so) for the purpose of being distinguished, are so far earmarked as to fall within the rule on this subject, which applies to every other description of personal property whilst it remains in the hand of the factor or his general legal representatives.”

These cases show, that money and notes, if not paid away to a bond fide holder, can be followed into the hands of a trustee. And it has been decided that the same principle applies to bills of exchange and other negotiable instruments.<sup>2</sup> And they may be followed when the transferee had express notice of the trust.<sup>3</sup> The difference between money and notes and negotiable instruments is, that the particular coin cannot be distinguished, but notes and negotiable instruments are distinguishable, as they have distinct marks and numbers on them.<sup>1</sup>

Trust-funds may be followed, although the trustee has mixed them with his own money, as by paying them into his own account at a bank. If the trustee has employed the trust-money, together with his own money, in the purchase of an estate, the cestui que trust will have a lien over the purchased estate for the whole amount of the fund misapplied, though no particular part of the estate was purchased with the trust-money only.<sup>2</sup> The guiding principle in all cases of this class is, that a trustee cannot assert a title of his own to trust-property. If he destroys a trust-fund by dissipating it altogether, there remains nothing to be the subject of a trust. But so long as the trust-property can be traced and followed into other property into which it has been converted, that remains subject to the trust. A second principle is, that if a man mixes trust-funds with his own, the whole will be treated as the trust-property, except so far as he may be able to distinguish what is his own.<sup>3</sup>

Trust-fund
mixed with trustee's
money.

The doctrines upon which a Court of Equity acts in following trust-moneys were very fully discussed in the case of Pennell v. Deffell.<sup>4</sup> There a trustee paid various trust-funds to his credit at two banks, and the question was, how far the moneys at his credit belonged specifically to the trust. Knight Bruce, L. J., said: "Let us suppose that the several sums for which the trustee was accountable at his death had been (that is to say, that the very coins and the very notes received by him on account of the trusts respectively had been) placed by him together in a particular repository, such as a chest, mixed confusedly together as among themselves; but in a state of clear and distinct separation from everything else, and had so remained at his death. It is, I apprehend, certain, that, after his death, the coins and notes thus circumstanced would not have formed part of his general assets, would not have been permitted so to be used, but would have been specifically applicable to the purposes of the trusts on account of

Suppose the case that I have just suggested to be varied only by the fact, that in the same chest, with these coins and notes, the trustee had placed money of his own (in every sense his own) of a known amount, had never taken it out again, but had so mixed and blended it with the rest of the contents of the chest, that the particular coins or notes of which this money of his own consisted, could not be pointed out—could not be identified,—what difference would that make? None, as I apprehend, except (if it is an exception) that his executor would possibly be entitled to receive from the contents of the repository an amount equal to the ascertained amount of the money in every sense his own, so mixed by himself with the other money. But not in either case, as I conceive, would the blending together of the trust-moneys, however confusedly, be of any moment as between the various cestuis que trustent on the one hand, and the executors as representing the general creditors on the other.

“Let it be imagined that, in the second case supposed, the trustee, after mixing the known amount of money of his own with the trust-moneys, had taken from the repository a sum for his own private purposes, and it could not be ascertained whether in fact the specific coins and notes forming it included or consisted of those or any of those which were, in every sense, his own specifically,—what would be the consequence? I apprehend that, in equity at least, if not at law also, what he took would be solely or primarily ascribed to those contents of the repository which were in every sense his own. He would, in the absence of evidence that he intended a wrong, be deemed to have intended and done what was right; and if the act could not in that way be wholly justified, it would be deemed to have been just to the utmost amount possible. If these propositions, which I believe to be founded on principle, and supported by authorities, are true,—can the plaintiff be wholly wrong in his actual contention? I apprehend not

. . . . . When a trustee pays trust-money into a bank to his credit, the account being a simple account with himself, not marked or distinguished in any other manner, the debt thus constituted from the bank to him is one which, as long as it remains due, belongs specifically to the trust as much and as effectually as the money so paid would have done, had it specifically been placed by the trustee in a particular repository and so remained,—that is to say, if the specific debt shall be claimed on behalf of the cestuis que trustent, it must be deemed specifically theirs, as between the trustee and his executors and the general creditors after his death on the other, whether the cestuis que trustent are bound to take to the debt—whether the deposit was a breach of trust, is a different question.

“This state of things would not, I apprehend, be varied by the circumstance of the bank holding also for the trustee, or owing also to him money in every sense his own.”

And Turner, L. J., said: “It is, I apprehend, an undoubted principle of this Court, that, as between cestui que trust and trustee, and all parties claiming under the trustee otherwise than by purchase for valuable consideration without notice, all property belonging to a trust, however much it may be changed or altered in its nature or character, and all the fruit of such property, whether in its original or in its altered state, continues to be subject to, or affected by, the trust.

“This principle cannot be better illustrated than by referring to a case of familiar, almost daily occurrence, the case of trust-moneys employed in trade. An executor of a deceased partner continues his capital in the trade with the concurrence of the surviving partners, and carries on the trade with them. The very capital itself may consist only of the balance which at the death of the partner was due to him on the result of the partnership account. That capital may have no existence but in the stock-in-trade and debts of the partnership. The stock-in-trade may undergo a continual course of change and fluctuation, and yet this Court follows the trust capital throughout all its ramifications, and gives to the beneficiaries of the deceased partner's estate the fruits derived from that capital so continually altered and changed.” His Lordship then referred to the supposed impossibility of ascertaining what portions of the balances at the banker's belonged to the trust, and what portion to the estate of the trustee, and continued: “In order to test this question, suppose a trustee pays into a bank moneys belonging to his trust to an account not marked or distinguished as a trust-account, and pays in no other moneys: could it for one moment be denied that the moneys, standing to the account of the debt due from the banker's arising from the moneys so paid in, would belong to the trust and not to the private estate of the trustee? Then suppose the trustee subsequently pays in moneys of his own, not belonging to the trust, to the same account: would the character of the moneys which he had before paid in, if the debt which had before accrued, be altered? Again, suppose the trustee, instead of subsequently paying moneys into the bank, draws out part of the trust-moneys which he has before paid in: would the remainder of those moneys and of the debt contracted in respect of them lose their trust character? Then, can the circumstance of the account consisting of a continued series of moneys paid in and drawn out alter the principle? It may, indeed, increase the difficulty of ascertaining what belongs to the trust, but I can see no possible ground on which it can affect the principle."

Estate.

In the recent case of In re Hallett's Estate, Knatchbull v. Hallett,<sup>1</sup> trust-money had been paid in by a trustee to his own account at his bankers, and the question was, whether the rule in Clayton's case,<sup>2</sup> that the first drawings out by the trustee must be attributed to the first payments, applied to the case of a trustee mixing his moneys with the trust-funds; and it was held, that it did not, the Court dissenting to this extent from Pennell v. Deffell.<sup>3</sup> "The modern doctrine of equity," said Jessel, M. R., "as regards property disposed of by persons in a fiduciary position, is a very clear and well-established doctrine. You can, if the sale was rightful, take the proceeds of the sale, if you can identify them. There is no distinction, therefore, between a rightful and a wrongful disposition of the property so far as regards the right of the beneficial owner to follow the proceeds. The proceeds may have been invested together with money belonging to the person in a fiduciary position in a purchase. He may have bought land with it, for instance, or he may have bought chattels with it. Now what is the position of the beneficial owner as regards such purchases? I will, first of all, take his position when the purchase is clearly made with what I will call, for shortness, the trust-money, although it is not confined, as I will show presently, to express trusts. In that case, according to the now well-established doctrine of equity, the beneficial owner has a right to elect either to take the property purchased, or to hold it as a security for the amount of the trust-money laid out in the purchase ; or, as we generally express it, he is entitled at his election either to take the property, or to have a charge on the property for the amount of the trust-money. But in the second case, where a trustee has mixed the money with his own, there is this distinction, that the cestui que trust, or beneficial owner, can no longer elect to take the property, because it is no longer bought with the trust-money simply and purely, but with a mixed fund. He is, however, still entitled to a charge on the property purchased for the amount of the trust-money laid out in the purchase ; and the charge is quite independent of the fact of the amount laid out by the trustee. The moment you get a substantial portion of it furnished by the trustee, using the word 'trustee' in the sense I have mentioned, as including all persons in a fiduciary relation, the right to the charge follows." His Lordship then stated that there was no distinction between an express trustee, an agent, a bailee, or a collector of rents, or anybody else in a fiduciary position ; and continued : " Now that being the established doctrine of equity on this point, I will take the case of the pure bailee. If the bailee sells the goods bailed, the bailor can in equity follow the proceeds, and can follow the proceeds wherever they can be distinguished, either being actually kept separate, or being mixed up with other moneys. I have only to advert to one other point, and that is this—supposing, instead of being invested in the purchase of land or goods, the money were simply mixed with other moneys of the trustee, using the term again in its full sense as including every person in a fiduciary relation,—does it make any difference according to the modern doctrine of equity ? I say none. It would be very remarkable if it were to do so. Supposing the trust-money was 1,000 sovereigns, and the trustee put them into a bag, and by mistake or otherwise dropped a sovereign of his own into the bag, could anybody suppose that a Judge in equity would find any difficulty in saying that the cestui que trust has a right to take 1,000 sovereigns out of that bag ? I do not like to call it a charge of 1,000 sovereigns on the 1,001 sovereigns, but that is the effect of it. I have no doubt of it. It would make no difference if, instead of one sovereign, it was another 1,000 sovereigns ; but if instead of putting it into his bag, or after putting it into his bag

— he carries the bag to his bankers,—what then? According to law the bankers are his debtors for the total amount; but if you lend the trust-money to a third person, you can follow it. If, in the case supposed, the trustee had lent the £1,000 to a man without security, you could follow the debt and take it from the debtor. If he lent it on a promissory note, you could take the promissory note; or the bond, if it were a bond. If, instead of lending the whole amount in one sum simply, he had added a sovereign, or had added £500 of his own to the £1,000, the only difference is this, that, instead of taking the bond or the promissory note, the cestui que trust would have a charge for the amount of the trust-money on the bond or promissory note. So it would be on the simple contract debt; that is, if the debt were of such a nature as that, between the creditor and debtor, you could not sever the debt into two, so as to show what part was trust-money, then the cestui que trust would have a right to a charge upon the whole." And Thesiger, L. J., said: "The principle may be stated, as it appears to me, in the form of a very simple, though at the same time very wide and general, proposition. I would state that proposition in these terms,—namely, that wherever a specific chattel is intrusted by one man to another, either for the purposes of safe custody or for the purpose of being disposed of for the benefit of the person intrusting the chattel, then either the chattel itself, or the proceeds of the chattel, whether the chattel has been rightfully or wrongfully disposed of, may be followed at any time, although either the chattel itself or the money constituting the proceeds of that chattel, may have been mixed and confounded in a mass of the like material."

Upon the question as to whether the principle of Clayton's case<sup>1</sup> could be applied to the case of trust-moneys, Jessel, M. R., said: "Nothing can be better settled either in our own law, or, I suppose, the law of all civilized countries, than this, that where a man does an act which may be rightfully performed, he cannot say that that act was intentionally and in fact done wrongly. . . . When we come to apply that principle to the case of a trustee who has blended trust-moneys with his own, it seems to me perfectly plain that he cannot be heard to say that he took the trust-money when he had a right to take away his own money. The simplest case put is the mingling of trust-moneys in a bag with money of the trustee's own. Suppose he has a hundred sovereigns in a bag, and he adds to them another hundred sovereigns of his own, so that they cannot be distinguished, and the next day he draws out for his own purposes £100,—is it tolerable for any one to allege that what he drew out was the first £100, the trust-money, and that he misappropriated it, and left his own £100 in the bag? It is obvious that he must have taken away that which he had a right to take away, his own £100. What difference does it make if, instead of being in a bag, he deposits it with his banker, and then pays in other money of his own, and draws out some money for his own purposes? Could he say that he had actually drawn out anything but his own money? His money was there, and he had a right to draw it out, and why should the natural act of simply drawing out the money be attributed to anything except to his ownership of money which was at his bankers." And Baggallay, L. J., agreed with Jessell, M. R. But Thesiger, L. J., while agreeing with the reasoning of the Master of the Rolls, felt himself bound by Pennell v. Deffell<sup>1</sup> as being the judgment of a Court of co-ordinate jurisdiction.

If the trust-fund has been employed together with money Lien. belonging to the trustee in the purchase of land, the cestui que trust will have a lien on the whole land for the trust-money and interest.<sup>2</sup> But if the trust-fund only has been so employed, the cestui que trust has a right to the land itself.<sup>3</sup>

It is a well settled principle of equity that time is no Limitation bar to a claim by a cestui que trust against his trustee in the case of an express trust.<sup>4</sup> Nor is it a bar against a purchaser with notice,<sup>5</sup> but it is otherwise in the case of a constructive trust.<sup>6</sup> Thus, time was held to be a bar as between a cestui que trust and a person who had become possessed of the trust-estate even by reason of the breach of trust on the part of the trustee.<sup>7</sup>

Section 10 of Act XV of 1877 provides, that “no suit against a person in whom property has become vested in trust for any specific purpose, or against his legal representatives or assigns (not being assigns for valuable consideration), for the purpose of following in his or their hands, such property, shall be barred by any length of time.” This section is substantially the same as s. 10 of Act IX of 1871, which has been construed to mean, that when a trust has been created expressly for some specific purpose or object, and property has become vested in a trustee upon such trust (either from such person having been originally named as trustee, or having become so subsequently by operation of law), the person or persons who for the time being may be beneficially interested in that trust may bring a suit against such trustee to enforce that trust at any distance of time without being barred by limitation; and further, that the language of the section is specially framed so as to exclude implied trusts, or such trusts as the law would infer merely from the existence of particular facts or fiduciary relations.<sup>1</sup> And in Greender Chunder Ghose v. Mackintosh,<sup>2</sup> it was held by Garth, C. J., that the words “in trust for a specific purpose” are intended to apply to trusts created for some defined or particular purpose or object, as distinguished from trusts of a general nature, such as the law impresses upon executors and others who hold fiduciary positions; and by White, J., that those words are used in a restrictive sense, and limit the character and nature of the trust attaching to the property which is sought to be followed, and that the phrase is a compendious form of expression for trusts of the nature and character mentioned in arts. 133 and 134 of sched. ii to the Act,—namely, such as attach to property conveyed in trust, deposited, pawned or mortgaged.

Where a clause of the wajib-ul-arz of a village stated in general terms that absconders from such village should receive back their property on their return, and certain persons who absconded from such village before such wajib-ul-arz was framed, sued to enforce such clause against the purchaser of their property from the co-sharer who had taken possession of it on their absconding, and who was no party to such wajib-ul-arz, alleging that their property

 from manager of joint
 family.

A person who lends money to, or purchases from, the manager of a joint Hindu family governed by the Mitakshara law, is bound to enquire into the necessity for the loan or sale.<sup>1</sup> The leading case on this point is Hunooman Persaud Panday v. M.S. Babooee Munraj Koonweree.<sup>2</sup> Their Lordships of the Privy Council say: "The power of the manager for an infant heir to charge an estate not his own, is, under the Hindu law, a limited and qualified power. It can only be exercised rightly in a case of need, or for the benefit of the estate. But where, in the particular instance, the charge is one that a prudent owner would make in order to benefit the estate, the bond fide lender is not affected by the precedent mismanagement of the estate. The actual pressure on the estate, the danger to be averted, or the benefit to be conferred upon it in the particular instance, is the thing to be regarded. But of course, if that danger arises, or has arisen, from any misconduct to which the lender is or has been a party, he cannot take advantage of his own wrong to support a charge in his own favour against the heir, grounded on a necessity which his wrong has helped to cause. Therefore the lender in this case, unless he is shown to have acted mala fide, will not be affected, though it be shown that, with better management, the estate might have been kept free from debt. Their Lordships think that the lender is bound to inquire into the necessities for the loan, and to satisfy himself, as well as he can, with reference to the parties with whom he is dealing, that the manager is acting in the particular instance for the benefit of the estate. But they think that if he does so inquire, and acts honestly, the real existence of an alleged, sufficient, and reasonably credited necessity is not a condition precedent to the validity of his charge; and they do not think that, under such circumstances, he is bound to see to the application of the money. It is obvious that money to be secured on any estate is likely to be obtained on easier terms than a loan which rests on mere personal security; and that, therefore, the mere creation of a charge securing a proper debt cannot be viewed as improper management; the purposes for which a loan is wanted are often future as respects the actual application, and a lender can rarely have, unless he enters on the management, the means of controlling and rightly directing the actual application. Their Lordships do not think that a bond fide creditor should suffer when he has acted honestly and with due caution, but is himself deceived."

The position of a shebait of a debutter estate is analogous to that of a manager of an infant heir, and the foregoing principles apply to the case of a purchaser from him.<sup>1</sup>

shebait.

He who sets up a charge upon a minor's estate, created in his favour by the guardian, is bound to show, at least, that when the charge was so created, there was reasonable ground for believing that the transaction was for the benefit of the estate.<sup>2</sup> It is sufficient for the purchaser or lender to be satisfied of the fact of necessity; he need not inquire into its causes.<sup>3</sup> It is only necessary for him to establish that he made bond fide enquiry into the matter, and was in that inquiry reasonably led to suppose that the necessity did exist.<sup>4</sup>

purchaser.

When a sale is set aside, the plaintiff can only get possession on repayment of so much of the purchase-money as has been applied towards the liquidation of debts.<sup>5</sup>

Terms on which sale
set aside.

It is the duty of the manager to pay off debts by strict economy if possible, and not to sell the property, because it is the easier mode of clearing the estate.<sup>6</sup> A sale of family property made by a Hindu father living under the Mitakshara law, merely to enable him to redeem a mortgage, the term of which has not nearly expired, is

manager.

LECTURE not made under such pressing legal necessity as would X. prevent his son from suing to set it aside if made without the son's acquiescence.

What is sufficient necessity.

Want of acquiescence on the son's part is sufficient to make the sale by the father void in the absence of legal necessity. It is not necessary that the sale by the father should be wasteful, it might even be advantageous.<sup>1</sup> A sale to pay debts and maintain the family is good,<sup>2</sup> so are sales to defray Government revenue or to defray funeral or marriage ceremonies.<sup>3</sup> Where the Court has expressly found the existence of debts, and that the sale of ancestral property was a bond fide one, the circumstance that there was no actual pressure at the time, in the shape of suits by the creditors for the recovery of their debts, is not of itself sufficient to invalidate the alienation.<sup>4</sup> The fact that there is a decree, an attachment, and a proclamation of sale,<sup>5</sup> or even a decree which may at any time be enforced against ancestral property,<sup>6</sup> is sufficient evidence of pressure and justification for a sale or mortgage. A sale of ancestral property merely for the purpose of procuring funds for the repurchase of other property formerly belonging to the family, cannot, of itself, be considered as a sale for any of the necessary purposes sanctioned by law.<sup>7</sup> Although, as a general rule, it may lie upon those who claim, under an alienation of ancestral property for necessary purposes, to show that the alienation was within the limited powers of the party alienating, yet particular circumstances may shift the burden of proof. No fixed rule can be laid down as to the degree of proof requisite in such cases.<sup>8</sup>

Sale to pay
debts.

A father governed by the Mitakshara law may sell ancestral property in order to pay off debts which his sons would be under a pious obligation to pay after his death.<sup>9</sup> "The interests of the sons," said their Lordships of the Privy Council, "as well as the interest of the father in the property, although it is ancestral, is liable for the payment of the father's debts." Referring to this passage Phear, J., said:<sup>1</sup> "It would, therefore, seem to follow that any disposition of the property, which is reasonably made by the father for the purpose of discharging a debt of this kind, i.e., a debt of the father, which does not fall within the exception (for immoral purposes) is one of those spoken of and authorized as 'unavoidable' by paras. 28 and 29, s. 1, chap. i, Mitakshara. The debt being of such a nature that the property is ultimately liable to discharge it, the alienation of that property, whether by mortgage or sale, by the father, upon reasonable terms, for the purpose of discharging the debt, must be substantially an unavoidable transaction."

The question in these cases is, whether the debt is one which, if left unsatisfied, the sons would, under the Hindu law, be under an obligation to discharge;<sup>2</sup> and the lender is bound to show for what purpose the loan was contracted, and that the purpose was one which justified the father in charging, or which the lender had at least good grounds for believing did justify the father in charging, the interests of the sons in the ancestral property.<sup>3</sup> In Hunooman Persaud Panday v. M. S. Babooee Munraj Koonwaree<sup>4</sup> their Lordships of the Privy Council said:—"As to the consideration for the bond the argument for the appellants in the reply, if correct, would indeed reduce the matter for consideration to a very short point; for, according to that argument, if the factum of a deed of charge by a manager for an infant be established, and the fact of the advance be proved, the presumption of law is prima facie to support the charge, and the onus of disproving it rests on the heir. For this position a decision, or rather a dictum of the Sudder Dewany Adawlut at Agra in the case of Oomed Rai v. Heera Lall<sup>5</sup> was quoted and relied upon. But the dictum there, though general, must be read in connection with the facts of that case. It might be a very correct course to adopt with reference to suits of that particular character, which was one where

LECTURE X. the sons of a living father were, with his suspected collusion, attempting to get rid of the charge on an ancestral estate created by the father on the ground of the alleged misconduct of the father in extravagant waste of the estate. Now it is to be observed that a lender of money may reasonably be expected to prove the circumstances connected with his own particular loan, but cannot reasonably be expected to know or to come prepared with proof of the antecedent economy and good conduct of the owner of an ancestral estate; whilst the antecedents of their father's career would be more likely to be in the knowledge of the sons, members of the same family, than of a stranger; consequently this dictum may, perhaps, be supported on the general principle that the allegation and proof of facts, presumably in his better knowledge, is to be looked for from the party who possesses that better knowledge as well as on the obvious ground in such suits, of the danger of collusion between father and sons in fraud of the creditor of the former. But this case is of a description wholly different, and the dictum does not profess to be a general one, nor is it so to be regarded. Their Lordships think that the question, on whom does the onus of proof lie in such suits as the present, is one not capable of a general and inflexible answer. The presumption proper to be made will vary with circumstances, and must be regulated by, and dependent on, them. Thus, where the mortgagee himself, with whom the transaction took place, is setting up a charge in his favour made by one whose title to alienate he necessarily knew to be limited and qualified, he may be reasonably expected to allege and prove facts presumably better known to him than to the infant heir,—namely, those facts which embody the representations made to him of the alleged needs of the estate, and the motives influencing his immediate loan.

“It is to be observed that the representation by the manager accompanying the loan as part of the res gestae, and as the contemporaneous declarations of an agent, though not actually selected by the principal, have been held to be evidence against the heir; and as their Lordships are informed that such prima facie proof has been generally required in the Supreme Court of Calcutta between the lender and the heir, where the lender is enforcing his security against the heir, they think it reasonable and right that it should be required.

It is obvious, however, that it might be unreasonable to require such proof from one not an original party after a lapse of time, and enjoyment, and apparent acquiescence; consequently, if, as is the case here as to part of the charge, it be created by substitution of a new security for an older one, where the consideration for the older one was an old precedent debt of an ancestor not previously questioned, a presumption of the kind contended for by the appellant would be reasonable."<sup>1</sup>

A purchaser under an execution is not bound to go back beyond the decree to ascertain whether the Court was right in giving the decree, or having given it, in putting up the property for sale under an execution upon it,<sup>2</sup> for a judgment-debt is prima facie proof of necessity.<sup>3</sup>

execution.

The rule applies where a minor seeks to set aside a sale made by his guardian to pay off a decree against the minor.<sup>4</sup>

The decree alone is not, however, sufficient proof,<sup>5</sup> but there should be evidence of the nature of the debts on which the decree originated.<sup>6</sup>

In a suit by the members of an undivided family governed by the law of the Mitakshara, to set aside a sale of joint ancestral property which had been sold in execution of a decree obtained against their deceased father, on the ground that the debt was not one for which such property could be made liable, it appeared that, prior to the sale, the plaintiffs had preferred a claim of objection on the same grounds, and that the Court of execution structive, of the objections made to the sale by the plaintiffs, and of the order then made, and to have purchased with knowledge of the plaintiffs' claim, and subject to the result of their suit.<sup>2</sup>

Under Hindu law, where there is found to be an ancestral debt, and a sale is effected to pay it, the purchaser at such sale is not bound to inquire whether the debt could have been met from other sources.<sup>3</sup>

It may be shown that the ostensible purpose of the loan was to pay off Government revenue; but to render such a loan binding upon those who had reversionary interests in the property, it must also be satisfactorily proved that such loan was at the time absolutely necessary from failure of the resources of the estate itself, and was not raised through the caprice or extravagance of the proprietor.<sup>4</sup>

Where the lender has shown that a justifiable debt existed, and persons claiming through the borrower allege that it has been satisfied, the ordinary rule requires the party who alleges payment to prove payment, and the debt will not be presumed to be satisfied until the contrary is shown by the creditor.<sup>5</sup> has been alienated by the heir-at-law, whether by sale or mortgage. But where the alienation is made during the pendency of a suit in which the creditor obtains a decree for the payment of his debt out of the assets of the estate which have come into the hands of the heir-at-law, the alienee will be held to take with notice, and will be

If an executor or administrator retains the assets of his testator after paying debts and legacies, and either neglects to invest or employ the surplus in his business,<sup>2</sup> and does not account to the residuary legatees or next-of-kin as the case may be, he will, after the expiration of the year which he is allowed<sup>3</sup> to realize his testator's assets,<sup>4</sup> be charged with interest on the amount he has retained.<sup>5</sup> And if the money has been employed in his business, he may be charged with compound interest.<sup>6</sup>

executor

pay interest.

It is the duty of executors to make the fund productive, and if there is a debt due from the testator's estate which is carrying interest, they should apply the assets in paying the debt; and if they neglect to do so, they will be charged with the amount of the interest.<sup>7</sup>

So it has been held, that the trustee of a bankrupt's estate, who neglects to declare a dividend for the benefit of creditors, is liable to pay interest on the assets in his hands;<sup>8</sup> and a receiver who neglects to obey a direction to invest the rents and profits of the estate in his hands, must pay interest on the sums he has received.<sup>9</sup> The rate would, in this country, be 6 per cent, the Court rate of interest.<sup>10</sup>

It is no excuse that the executor has made no profit from the money in his hands; it is his duty to make it profitable for the estate, and he will be made to pay interest, though he has left the money in his banker's hands at a separate account.<sup>11</sup>

Liability of trustee who leaves property uninvested.

If a trustee whose duty it is to call in and invest the trust-property, improperly leaves it outstanding, and it is lost, he will be liable for the amount of the property, but not for interest.<sup>1</sup> In a case before the Privy Council,<sup>2</sup> A sued B, a debtor of his intestate, upon a bond-debt, and obtained a decree against him for the amount. B appealed to the Sudder Court. By a deed of arrangement entered into by A and C after the commencement of the suit, C became entitled to a six-anna share of the debt. Pending the appeal to the Sudder Court, A entered into a compromise with B, postponing the payment of the amount recovered by the decree for three years, and foregoing altogether interest upon the principal. This was done without the privity or consent of C. B failed to pay the amount within the stipulated time, and proceedings were taken by A against him, but he had not realized the amount of the decree. In a suit by C against A to make him chargeable for the six annas share in the decree, the Sudder Court held, that A was liable to C for such share with interest. On appeal, the Privy Council held, that A must be treated as a trustee for C, and that, in the absence of fraud upon the cestui que trust in executing the compromise, or that it was not beneficial for all parties, he was responsible only to C for such amount of the debt as had been recovered, or without his wilful default might have been recovered.

When trustee liable to pay interest.

Although a trustee is not liable for interest if he improperly leaves the trust-property outstanding, he will be liable to pay interest if he unnecessarily delay in investing the trust-property or in paying it over to a person entitled to receive, even though the plaint does not pray for interest; and<sup>3</sup> if there has been very great delay, may have to pay the costs.<sup>4</sup>

Trustee employing trust-funds in trade.

If a trustee mixes trust-funds with his own moneys, and employs the mixed fund in a trade or adventure of his own, the cestui que trust may, if he prefers it, insist upon charging the trustee with the principal and a proportionate share of the profits, instead of with the principal and interest only. He cannot claim both interest and profits in respect of the money employed in trade, but must elect between them.<sup>1</sup> The leading case on this point is Docker v. Somes,<sup>2</sup> and the principles upon which the Court acts were very clearly stated by Lord Brougham, L. C. His Lordship said: "Wherever a trustee, or one standing in the relation of a trustee, violates his duty, and deals with the trust-estate for his own behoof, the rule is, that he shall account to the cestui que trust for all the gain which he has made. Thus, if trust-money is laid out in buying and selling land, and a profit made by the transaction, that shall not go to the trustee who has so applied the money, but to the cestui que trust whose money has been thus applied. In like manner (and cases of this kind are more numerous) where a trustee or executor has used the fund committed to his care in stock speculations, though the loss, if any, must fall upon himself, yet, for every farthing of profit he may make, he shall be accountable to the trust-estate. So, if he lay out the trust-money in a commercial adventure, as in buying or fitting out a vessel for a voyage, or put it in the trade of another person, from which he is to derive a certain stipulated profit, although I will not say that this has been decided, I hold it to be quite clear that he must account for the profits received by the adventure or from the concern. In all these cases it is easy to tell what the gains are; the fund is kept distinct from the trustee's other moneys, and whatever he gets he must account for and pay over. It is so much fruit—so much increase on the estate or chattel of another, and must follow the ownership of the property and go to the proprietor. So it is also where one not expressly a trustee has bought or trafficked with another's money. The law raises a trust by implication, clothing him, though a stranger, with the fiduciary character for the purpose of making him accountable. If a person has purchased land in his own name with my money, there is a resulting trust for me; if he has invested my money in any other speculation without my consent, he is held a trustee for my benefit. And so an attorney, guardian, or other person standing in a like situation to another, gains not for himself, but for the client, infant, or other party whose confidence has been abused.

“Such being the undeniable principle of equity—such the rule by which breach of trust is discouraged and punished—discouraged by intercepting its gains, and thus frustrating the intentions that caused it—punished by charging all losses on the wrong-doer, while no profit can ever accrue to him,—can the Court consistently draw the line, as the cases would seem to draw it, and except from the general rule those instances where the risk of the malversation is most imminent—those instances where the trustee is most likely to misappropriate,—namely, those in which he uses the trust-funds in his own traffic? At first sight this seems grossly absurd, and some reflection is required to understand how the Court could ever, even in appearance, tolerate such an anomaly. The reason which has induced Judges to be satisfied with allowing interest only, I take to have been this—they could not easily sever the profits attributable to the trust-money from those belonging to the whole capital stock; and the process became still more difficult, where a great proportion of the gains proceeded from skill or labour employed upon the capital. In case of separate appropriation there was no such difficulty; as where land or stock had been bought and then sold again at a profit; and here, accordingly, there was no hesitation in at once making the trustee account for the whole gains he had made. But where, having engaged in some trade himself, he had invested the trust-money in that trade along with his own, there was so much difficulty in severing the profits which might be supposed to come from the money misapplied from those which came from the rest of the capital embarked, that it was deemed more convenient to take another course, and instead of endeavouring to ascertain what profit had been really made, to fix upon certain rates of interest as the supposed measure or representative of the profits, and assign that to the trust-estate.

“This principle is, undoubtedly, attended with one advantage; it avoids the necessity of an investigation of more or less nicety in each individual case, and it thus attains one of the important benefits resulting from all general rules. But mark what sacrifices of justice and of expediency are made for this convenience. All trust-estates receive the same compensation, whatever risks they may have run during the period of their misappropriation; all profit equally, whatever may be the real gain derived by the trustee from his breach of duty; nor can any amount of profit made be reached by the Court, or even the most moderate rate of merchantile profit, that is, the legal rate of profits, be exceeded, whatever the actual gains may have been, unless by the very clumsy and arbitrary method of allowing rests, in other words, compound interest; and this without regard to the profits actually realized; for, in the most remarkable case in which this method has been resorted to<sup>1</sup> (which, indeed, is always cited to be doubted, if not disapproved), the compound interest was given with a view to the culpability of the trustee's conduct, and not upon any estimate of the profits he had made by it.

"But the principal objection which I have to the rule is founded upon its tendency to cripple the just power of this Court in by far the most wholesome, and indeed necessary, exercise of its functions, and the encouragement thus held out to fraud and breach of trust. What avails it towards preventing such malversation, that the contrivers of sordid injustice feel the power of the Court only where they are clumsy enough to keep the gains of their dishonesty severed from the rest of their stores. It is in vain they are told of the Court's arm being long enough to reach them, and strong enough to hold them, if they know that a certain delicacy of touch is required without which the hand might as well be paralysed or shrunk up. The distinction, I will not say sanctioned, but pointed at, by the negative authority of the cases, proclaims to executors and trustees, that they have only to invest the trust-money in the speculations, and expose it to the hazards of their own commerce, and be charged five for cent on it; and then they may pocket fifteen or twenty per cent by a successful adventure. Surely the supposed difficulty of ascertaining the real gain made by the misapplication is as nothing compared with the mischiefs likely to arise from admitting this rule, or rather this exception to one of the most general rules of equitable jurisdiction."

There is no rule for apportioning the profits according to the respective amounts of the capital, but the division will be affected by considerations of the source of the profit, the nature of the business, and the other circumstances of the case. It is obvious that it must be so; there are many cases in which the profit of a business has no ascertainable

ing profits.

Indeed, in almost every case where the business consists of buying and selling, the difference between prosperity and ruin mainly depends on the skill, industry, and care of the dealers; no doubt, also greatly on their credit and reputation and the possession of ready-money to take advantage of favourable opportunities and to enable them to bide their time in unfavourable states of the market, and also greatly on the established good-will and connection of the house.<sup>1</sup>

Compound interest.

If a trustee is expressly directed to invest the trust-funds, and to accumulate the income, and neglects the direction to accumulate, he may be charged with compound interest, although the principal fund may not have suffered any loss.

There must have been an express trust in order to charge the trustee with compound interest.<sup>2</sup> “Where there is an express trust to make improvement of the money,” said Lord Eldon,<sup>3</sup> “if the trustee will not honestly endeavour to improve it, there is nothing wrong in considering him, as the principal, to have lent the money to himself upon the same terms upon which he could have lent it to others, and as often as he could have lent it if it be principal, and as often as he ought to have received it, and lent it to others, if the demand be interest, and interest upon interest.”<sup>4</sup>

Trust-funds mixed with trustee's money.

If a trustee mixes trust-funds with his own money, the cestui que trust will be entitled to every portion of the mixed fund which the trustee cannot prove to be his own. The principle is, that if a man who undertakes to keep the property of another distinct, mixes it with his own, the whole must be taken to be the property of the other until the former puts the subject under such circumstances, that it may be distinguished as satisfactorily as it might have been before that unauthorized mixture upon his part.<sup>5</sup> Thus, where a commission agent mixed his goods with those of his principal, and destroyed his books of account, he was disallowed his commission.<sup>6</sup> “I take it,”

The Contract Act<sup>2</sup> has altered the English law as regards the case of a bailee, without the consent of the bailor, mixing his goods with those of the bailor in such a manner that the different goods become undistinguishable. According to English law the bailor takes the whole of the goods.<sup>3</sup> The Contract Act, however, only entitles the bailor to compensation.

If a partner, being a trustee, improperly employs trust-moneys in the business, or on the account of the partnership, no other partner is liable, therefor, to the cestui que trust, unless he either knew of the breach of trust, or with reasonable diligence might have known it. In either of the last-mentioned cases the partners having such knowledge or means of knowledge are jointly and severally liable for the breach of trust.

Partner

trust-funds
in business.

The mere fact that trust-funds have been employed in the business of a partnership is not enough to make the firm liable.<sup>4</sup> To make the firm liable, all the partners must have been implicated in the breach of trust. It would be manifestly unjust to make persons liable for a breach of trust of which they were wholly ignorant. If it can be imputed to the partners that they knew, or ought to have known, that trust-moneys were being employed in the partnership business, they will be held bound to see that the trust to which the money is subject authorizes the use of it, and will be answerable for a breach of trust in case of its misapplication or loss.<sup>5</sup>

Thus, where a trader appointed an executor, who subsequently entered into partnership with some other persons in the same trade, and employed the testator's assets in the partnership business, giving his partners an indemnity against any claim by the residuary legatees, it was held, that the persons who had entered into the partnership with the executor were jointly liable with him not as partners, but because they had knowingly become parties to the breach of trust.<sup>1</sup>

where
trust-
property
to be sold or invested

Occasionally, a testator directs certain property intended to be the subject of trusts to be sold and invested, either in land or in securities for money. When this is done, the trust-property is impressed with the character of the investment directed;—that is to say, money, or securities for money, directed to be laid out in the purchase of land, or land directed to be sold and turned into money, will be considered as that species of property into which it is directed to be converted; the principle applied being that “what ought to have been done shall be taken as done.”<sup>2</sup> And in the case of intestacy, such trust-property will descend as if it had been converted.

But when money has been directed to be converted into land or other security, or land has been directed to be converted into money, but the conversion has not in fact taken place until the whole beneficial interest, whether in land or money, has become vested absolutely in one cestui que trust, he may elect to take the property in its original character;<sup>3</sup> the Court will not direct the conversion to be carried into effect, because the cestui que trust, having the absolute beneficial interest, can, as we have seen, ante, p. 271, claim the property and could immediately re-convert it, and “equity like nature will do nothing in vain.”<sup>4</sup>

The cestui que trust must be a person competent to contract,<sup>5</sup>

one of the cestuis que trustent can elect that his own undivided share shall not be sold. "It would," said Romilly, M. R., "be repugnant to the principles on which the doctrine of conversion and reconversion rests to hold, that one of the legatees of an undivided share in the produce of real estate directed by the testator to be converted into personalty could, without the assent of the others, elect to take his share as unconverted, and in the shape of real estate."<sup>1</sup>

The reason is, that a portion of the property would not sell as beneficially as the entire estate.<sup>2</sup> If, however, money is devised to be laid out in the purchase of lands to be settled on several persons, any one of them may elect to take his own share in money, for a portion of the money can be invested as advantageously as the whole sum.<sup>3</sup>

When a cestui que trust elects to take the trust-property unconverted, he may notify his election either by express declaration, which may be by parol,<sup>4</sup> or by his acts. Very slight circumstances are sufficient to show that the cestui que trust has elected to take the property in its original character.<sup>5</sup> For instance, if the cestui que trust takes money directed to be laid out in land, from the trustee,<sup>6</sup> or enters into possession of land directed to be converted into money,<sup>7</sup> and takes the title-deeds into his own custody, for without them the trustees cannot sell,<sup>8</sup> or mortgages the property,<sup>9</sup> he will be considered to have elected to take the property unconverted. So the presumption will be the same if he keeps the land for a long time unsold.<sup>10</sup>

But the receipt of the income arising from money directed to be laid out in land, is not evidence of an election to take the money unconverted.<sup>11</sup>

It is not necessary that the cestui que trust should intend to elect, it is sufficient if he shows an intention to deal with the trust-property in its natural character. "It was argued," said Kindersley, V. C., "that there must be an intention strictly to convert,—that is to say, that, knowing that the money was impressed with the character of land, the party must say, 'I mean that it shall no longer be land, but it shall be in its actual form of money.' I do not, however, think that is the correct view of the law. It is quite sufficient if the Court sees that the party means it to be taken in the state in which it actually is, whether he did or did not know that but for some election by him it would be turned into land is quite immaterial. If, being money, the party absolutely entitled indicated that he wished to deal with it as money, and that it should be considered as money, whether he knew or did not know that but for that wish it would have gone as land, appears to me wholly immaterial."<sup>1</sup>

Liability of
cestui que
trust joining in breach of
trust.

If one of several cestuis que trustent joins with the trustee in committing a breach of trust, and a loss to the trust-estate is incurred, the other cestuis que trustent are entitled to have the whole of his interest in the trust-estate stopped and accumulated in the hands of the trustees until the loss has been repaired. "Nothing," said Lord Langdale,<sup>2</sup> "can be more clear than the rule which is adopted by the Court in these cases, that if one party having a partial interest in the trust-fund induces the trustee to depart from the direction of the trust for his own benefit, and enjoys that benefit, he shall not be permitted personally to enjoy the benefit of the trust, whilst the trustees are subjected to a serious liability which he has brought upon them. What the Court does in such a case is, to lay hold of the partial interest to which that person is entitled, and apply it, so far as it will extend, in exoneration of the trustees, who, by his request and desire, or acquiescence, or by any other mode of concurrence, have been induced to do the improper act."<sup>3</sup> trustees, then, being liable to replace those trust-funds, the next question is, what is the extent of the liability which attaches upon the cestuis que trustent for life in consequence of their having induced the trustees to commit the breach of trust? Now the cestuis que trustent for life, who instigated the trustees to commit the breach of trust, have derived from that breach of trust the advantage of enjoying the increased income of the fund not duly invested according to the trust, and the consequence of that is, that the cestuis que trustent in remainder have a right to have that income refunded and made good by the cestuis que trustent for life. It is trust-money received by them under a breach of trust to which they were privy, and the effect, I apprehend, must be, that as the loss which ought to fall on those who instigated the breach of trust has been laid by the Court upon the trustees, the trustees are entitled to stand in the place of the cestuis que trustent in remainder, for the purpose of recovering, against the cestuis que trustent for life who instigated the breach of trust, or their estates, the benefit actually received by them in consequence of such breach of trust. It seems to me to be the necessary consequence of the cestuis que trustent for life having received the income of the trust-fund unduly invested, that the trustees have a right to be indemnified as against the cestuis que trustent for life or their estates, to the extent which those estates have been benefited by the improper investment."

The interest of the cestui que trust, who concurs in the breach of trust, will be applied to make good the loss to the trust-fund, as against his assignee in insolvency,<sup>1</sup> judgment-creditors,<sup>2</sup> or general creditors,<sup>3</sup> and as against any persons deriving title through him, except in the case of purchasers for valuable consideration without notice of the breach of trust.<sup>4</sup> And the rule that we are now considering applies to property settled upon a married woman for her separate use, for a married woman acting with respect to her separate property is competent to act in all respects as if she were unmarried.<sup>5</sup> But it does not apply

Rights and liabilities of trans-ferree from cestui que
trust.

We have seen<sup>2</sup> that a cestui que trust may transfer his interest in the trust-fund. The transferee will be bound by all the equities affecting the trust-fund when transferred, whether he had notice of the equities or not.

For instance, a person taking an equitable mortgage, with notice of a prior equitable mortgage, cannot, by assignment to another without notice, give him a better title than he has himself.<sup>3</sup> So, where A obtained a mortgage of real and personal estate from B without consideration, and it was afterwards deposited with C as a security, C having no notice of the circumstances under which it had been obtained,—it was held, that C could stand in no better position than A, and that the deed being void as against A, was equally void as against C.<sup>4</sup>

If a trustee has a beneficial interest in the trust-estate, and owes money to it, and assigns his interest to a stranger, the assignee is bound to discharge the debt owing to the trust-estate by the trustee before he can take anything under the assignment; and this whether the original debt was contracted before, or after the assignment.<sup>5</sup> Thus, where a testatrix bequeathed a leasehold estate to trustees and executors in trust for sale, and gave one of the executors a beneficial interest for his life in one-fourth part of the estate, and the executor being at that time indebted to the estate of the testatrix, made an assignment of his beneficial interest by way of mortgage to secure a private debt which he owed to a creditor, and deposited the title-deeds with the creditor,—it was held, in a suit by the co-executors to recover the title-deeds, that the estate of the testatrix was entitled to a lien on the interest of the defaulting executor in the premises comprised in the deeds, in priority to the lien created by his assignment to the mortgagee; and the Court decreed the title-deeds to be delivered up, with a declaration that they belonged to the three trustees.<sup>6</sup>

AFTER a trustee has accepted the office, he cannot by any act of his own, without communication with his cestui que trust, denude himself of the character of trustee until he has performed his trust.<sup>1</sup> "The only modes," says Mr. Lewin,<sup>2</sup> "by which a trustee can divest himself of the character of trustee are the following:—First, he may have the universal consent of all the parties interested; secondly, he may retire by virtue of a special power contained in the instrument creating the trust; or, thirdly, he may obtain his release by application to the Court."

A trustee can only be effectually discharged by the cestuis que trustent if they are all competent to contract, and therefore if any of the cestuis que trustent are infants, no discharge by those who are of age, will prevent the trustee from being liable to the infants;<sup>1</sup> and the rule will be the same whatever the disability of the cestui que trust may be. All the cestuis que trustent must concur in the discharge; a discharge by the majority will not be effectual.<sup>2</sup>

LECTURE

Discharge
by *cestuis
que trustent*.

If the parties interested in the trust-funds be not all in existence, as where the limitation of the property is to children unborn, it is clear that as the trustee cannot have the sanction of all the parties interested, he cannot with safety be discharged from the trust.<sup>3</sup>

In the second case, as the person who creates the trust may mould it in whatever form he pleases, he may provide that, on the occurrence of certain events, and the fulfilment of certain conditions, the original trustee may retire and a new trustee be appointed. The form of power most commonly in use in instruments drawn according to English precedents is, that, in case the trustees appointed by the instrument of trust, or to be appointed under the power, or any of them shall "die, or be abroad for twelve calendar months, or be desirous of being discharged from, or refuse, decline, or become incapable to act in the trusts," it shall be lawful for the cestui que trust to whom the power may be given, or (as the proviso is frequently worded) for the surviving or continuing trustee, or the executors or administrators of the survivor, by deed or writing, to nominate some other person to be a trustee. The best forms provide that a refusing or retiring trustee shall, if willing to execute the power, be deemed to be a continuing trustee. Sometimes the power is given to the surviving, continuing, or other trustee—an addition which has been found useful in practice.<sup>4</sup> The power then proceeds to declare that the trust-estate shall forthwith be vested jointly in the persons who are in future to compose the body of trustees; and that the new or substituted trustee shall, either before or after the trust-estate shall

The question often arises, whether on the appointment of new trustees it is necessary to adhere to the original number. The result of the authorities seems to be, that it is not, unless such an intention can be gathered from the particular language of the instrument. Thus, appointments of two in the place of three or four, and of three in the place of four or five, have been upheld;<sup>2</sup> but it would not be safe for the survivor of several trustees to retire and appoint one new trustee only;<sup>3</sup> and an increase of the numbers has, in some cases, been allowed.<sup>4</sup>

Trustee dying in lifetime of settlor.

Payment into Court.

A power to a surviving or continuing trustee to appoint a new trustee in the place of a trustee dying, will apply to the case of a person dying in the lifetime of the author of the trust.<sup>5</sup> And it has been held, that the payment into Court of the trust-fund by the trustee is a retiring of such trustee from the trust, and authorizes the appointment of a new trustee in his place under a power for that purpose, to arise in the event of a trustee refusing or declining to act.<sup>6</sup>

Refusing or declining.

There seems no reasonable doubt that the words "refusing or declining" would apply to the case of a trustee once acting and then retiring or declining further to act.<sup>7</sup>

Retiring.

A retiring trustee cannot appoint a new trustee under a power for this purpose given to a surviving or continuing trustee.<sup>8</sup>

Last survivor.

But where there was a power for the surviving or continuing or other trustee or trustees, to appoint new trustees in the place of a trustee or trustees dying or desiring to be discharged, or refusing or declining to act, it was held, that an appointment of four new trustees by the last survivor of four trustees who was desirous of being discharged was good.<sup>1</sup> LECTURE

If, therefore, the power of appointing new trustees in the place of trustees desiring to be discharged, &c., is limited to the surviving or continuing trustees or trustee, and both the trustees for the time being wish to retire, the following course should be adopted:—One of the two trustees should first retire, and a new trustee be appointed in his place by the other as the continuing trustee. The other trustee should then retire, and the newly-appointed trustee under the first appointment should, as the then continuing trustee, appoint a trustee in the place of the last retiring trustee.

If there is only one surviving trustee, and he wishes to retire, he should first appoint a new trustee in the place of the deceased trustee, and then the newly-appointed trustee should appoint a second trustee in the place of the retiring trustee.<sup>2</sup>

A person beneficially interested, and even the tenant-for-life under the trust-deed, may be appointed a new trustee, unless the instrument shows an intention to the contrary.<sup>3</sup> Cestui que trust may be appointed.

The rules which relate to powers generally must be observed in reference to a power for the appointment of new trustees; and such a power can only be exercised by the person to whom it is expressly given by the instrument; so that the assignee or devisee of a surviving or continuing trustee cannot appoint new trustees under a power limited to the surviving or continuing trustee, his executors or administrators only; and if the power is only to be exercised with consent, the power would be extinguished by the death of the consenting party.<sup>4</sup> Assignee or devisee of trustee.

So also if a tenant-for-life, in whom a power to appoint new trustees is vested, aliens or mortgages his life-estate, the power cannot afterwards be exercised without the consent of the alienee or mortgagee, unless the right to do so is expressly reserved.<sup>5</sup>

A power to appoint a new trustee in the place of a person 'becoming unfit' to act, applies to the case of a person becoming insolvent.<sup>6</sup> But insolvency is not a ground for Becoming unfit or incapable.

 — is, however, a sufficient ground for his removal from the office by the Court.<sup>1</sup> A trustee who goes to reside abroad does not 'become incapable' to act.<sup>2</sup>

New trustee should be within jurisdiction.

The new trustees should be persons within the jurisdiction of the Court. Where, however, property in the English funds was settled upon a lady on her marriage with an American, and she went to reside with her husband in America, the subsequent appointment of three American trustees, though not expressly authorized by the settlement, was held to be valid.<sup>3</sup>

But where the Court is applied to, to appoint new trustees, it will not, as a rule, do so, if the proposed new trustees reside without the jurisdiction.<sup>4</sup>

Trustee paid to retire.

Breach of trust.

Appointment must be completed.

Stamp.

Discharge by Court.

An appointment of a new trustee in consideration of a sum of money paid to the appointor is bad;<sup>5</sup> and so is the appointment of a trustee for the purpose of committing a breach of trust. In such a case the retiring trustee will remain liable.<sup>6</sup>

The retiring trustee must be careful not to part with the trust-fund until he is convinced that his successor has been properly appointed, for if the appointment of the new trustee is bad, and any breach of trust has been committed, the retiring trustee will remain liable.<sup>7</sup> And he must see that the circumstances under which he retires are those contemplated by the settlor.<sup>8</sup>

The stamp-duty upon the transfer of trust-property from one trustee to another without consideration is Rs. 5.<sup>9</sup>

We now have to consider the discharge of a trustee by the Court. Upon this Mr. Lewin says:<sup>10</sup> "The trustee may, in every proper case, although the contrary appears to have been at one time supposed,<sup>11</sup> get himself discharged from the office by the substitution of a new trustee in his place on application to the Court. A power of appointment of new trustees is very frequently omitted in settlements (and wills), or the donee of the power either cannot or will not exercise it, and were there no means by which a trustee could ever denude himself of that character, it would operate as a great discouragement to mankind to undertake so arduous a task."

A trustee who has accepted the trust will not be permitted, voluntarily, from mere caprice or other trivial cause, to throw it up at the expense of his cestui que trust. The Court must come to a conclusion in each case, whether the conduct of the trustee in the particular instance falls within the rule.<sup>1</sup>

 discharge.

It is usual for the trustee who seeks to be discharged by the Court to name some person as his successor, subject to the approval of the Court. It is not, however, necessary that he should do so, and in some cases he may be unable to find any person willing to undertake the trust. "It is quite a mistake," said Lord St. Leonards, "to suppose that a trustee, who is entitled to be discharged from his trust, is bound to show to the Court that there is some other person ready to accept the trust. The Court refers it to the Master to appoint a new trustee; but if no person will accept the trust, it may find itself obliged to keep the trustee before the Court, and not discharge him. The Court, will, however, take care that the trustee shall not suffer thereby."<sup>2</sup> It is doubtful whether a trustee who has accepted the trust, and committed no breach of trust, can get discharged by the Court, if no other fit person can be found to act and the cestui que trust will not consent to his discharge.<sup>3</sup> His only course under such circumstances is to apply to have the trusts executed by the Court.<sup>4</sup>

Official
Trustee's
Act, s. 10.

The Official Trustee's Act<sup>1</sup> provides, that "if any property is subject to a trust, whether for a charitable purpose or otherwise, and there shall be no trustee willing to act, or capable of acting, in the trusts thereof, who is within the local limits of the ordinary or extraordinary jurisdiction of the High Court (High Court means the High Courts of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal, Fort St. George, and Bombay respectively in the exercise of their original civil jurisdiction, Act XVII of 1864, s. 1), or if property is subject to a trust, and all the trustees or the surviving or continuing trustee, and all the persons beneficially interested in the said trust, shall be desirous that the Official Trustee shall be appointed in the room of such trustees or trustee, then, and in any such case it shall be lawful for the High Court on petition, and with the consent of the Official Trustee, to appoint the Official Trustee to be the trustee of such property; and, upon such appointment, such property shall vest in the Official Trustee and his successors in office, and shall be held by him and them, upon the same trusts as the same were held previous to such appointment." The Act provides,<sup>2</sup> that no trust for any religious purpose shall ever be held by the Official Trustee.

Appointment where
lost.

In a suit to appoint new trustees of a settlement, where a part of the trust-property had been lost by previous negligence or breach of trust, the Court refused to confine the trust to the remaining property; but appointed the new trustees to be trustees of the whole of the property comprised in the settlement, directing, for the protection of the new trustees, a reference to inquire whether it would be proper to take proceedings for the recovery of the property which had been lost.<sup>3</sup>

Costs.

A trustee has a right to be discharged, but if he retires without good grounds, or from caprice, he will have to bear the costs of the suit.<sup>4</sup> In all other cases he will be entitled to his costs out of the fund.<sup>5</sup>

If the trustee finds the trust-estate involved in intricate and complicated questions, which were not, and could not have been, in contemplation at the time when the trust was undertaken, he has, in consequence of that change of circumstances, a right to come to the Court to be relieved; and the Court will judge whether the circumstances were such as to make it fair for him to decline acting longer on his own responsibility.<sup>1</sup>

XI.

Grounds for discharge.

Where the trustees of a marriage settlement, being desirous of retiring from the trusts in consequence of the responsibility to which they were exposed by the acts of the tenant-for-life, in repeatedly charging the trust-estates and funds with annuities and other incumbrances, instituted a suit to be discharged from the trusts, and for the appointment of new trustees under the direction of the Court, the relief sought was granted, and the costs were ordered to be paid out of the interest of the tenant-for-life.<sup>2</sup>

The trust-estate, upon the death of a sole trustee, or of the sole surviving trustee, descends upon his representatives. If they wish to be discharged, they must also apply to the Court; but there is this difference that they cannot be charged with caprice for declining to act.<sup>3</sup>

of repre-
of trustee.

An executor is regarded in some sense as a trustee, but he cannot, like a trustee, be discharged even by the Court from his executorship. However, when the funeral and testamentary expenses, debts, and legacies have been satisfied, and the surplus has been invested upon the trusts of the will, the executor then drops that character and becomes a trustee in the proper sense, and may then be discharged from the office like any other trustee.<sup>4</sup>

Executor.

Cases to which English law is applicable are governed by Act XXVIII of 1866. Section 34 of that Act provides, that "whenever any trustee, either original or substituted, and whether appointed by any High Court or otherwise, shall die, or be six months absent from British India, or desire to be discharged from, or refuse, or become unfit or incapable to act in the trusts or powers in him

So often as any new trustee or trustees shall be so appointed as aforesaid, all the trust-property (if any) which for the time being shall be vested in the surviving or continuing trustees or trustee, or in the heirs, executors, or administrators of any trustee, shall, with all convenient speed, be conveyed and transferred, so that the same may be legally and effectually vested in such new trustee or trustees, either solely or jointly with the surviving or continuing trustees or trustee as the case may require. Every new trustee to be appointed as aforesaid, as well before as after such conveyance or transfer as aforesaid, and also every trustee appointed by any High Court either before or after the passing of this Act, shall have the same powers, authorities, and discretions, and shall in all respects act as if he had been originally nominated a trustee by the deed, will, or other instrument (if any) creating the trust. The Official Trustee may, with his consent, and by the order of the High Court, be appointed under this section in any case in which only one trustee is to be appointed, and such trustee is to be the sole trustee."

Conveyance to new
trustee.

Upon the appointment of a new trustee, the trust-property must be conveyed to him. If the trustee is appointed by the Court, and there is no person to convey, the Court will order the trust-estate to be vested in the trustee.<sup>1</sup> LECTURE committed to several persons is determined by the death of any one, but if coupled with an interest, it passes to the survivors.<sup>4</sup> And this right by survivorship will not be affected, merely because there is a power of appointing new trustees in place of those ceasing to be trustees,<sup>5</sup> unless the instrument creating the trust specially manifests such intention.<sup>6</sup> Where an Act of Parliament declared that the survivors should, and they were thereby required to

When a man, previously to going through the ceremony of marriage with his deceased wife's sister, executed a settlement reciting the intended marriage, by which certain property was assigned to trustees in trust for the settlor until the solemnization of the marriage; and after the solemnization thereof and after the decease of the settlor, to pay the interest to the intended wife for life, and then for the benefit of his two children by his former wife, and such children as he should have by his intended marriage; but if there should be no such child or children, then for the settlor, his executors, administrators, and assigns, it was held, that as no valid marriage could take place between the settlor and his deceased wife's sister, the trust in favour of himself until the solemnization of such marriage continued, and the subsequent trusts never having arisen, the property remained in him and formed part of his general estate.<sup>1</sup>

And a trust ceases when it is revoked.<sup>2</sup>

Compulsory
payment
into Court.

In certain cases a cestui que trust has the right to have the trust-fund paid into Court. The general rule is, that the plaintiffs must be solely entitled to the fund, or have acquired in the whole of the fund such an interest, together with others, as entitles them, on their own behalf and the behalf of those others, to have the fund secured in Court;<sup>3</sup> and apparently the order is a matter of course.<sup>4</sup> If a plaintiff claims to be entitled in a particular character to a fund in the hands of a trustee, and the trustee, by his answer says, he does not know whether the plaintiff fills that character or not, the plaintiff cannot have the fund brought into Court in the suit.<sup>5</sup> The money may be ordered to be paid in on the application of a party having a mere contingent interest in the fund,<sup>6</sup> even though all the parties having vested interests are satisfied with the conduct and custody of the trustees, and are opposed to the application.<sup>7</sup> All the persons having an interest in the fund ought, as a rule, to be before the Court;<sup>8</sup> but this is

Where the plaintiff in a suit seeking solely the payment into Court of a fund for the relief of poor Armenian orphans had no interest except as a member of the Armenian community, the suit was dismissed, although the trustees consented to the decree sought by the plaintiff.<sup>4</sup>

interest of plaintiff.

If the trustee admits that he holds the fund as trustee for some person or persons, and the Court sees a reasonable probability that the plaintiff will establish his title at the hearing, it will order the trustee to pay the trust-fund into Court.<sup>5</sup> In Richardson v. The Bank of England<sup>6</sup> Lord Cottenham said: "I must, in the first place, observe, that the motion for payment into Court by the defendant of the sum mentioned in the order must be considered as founded upon the supposition of that sum being due from him. It is not the case of a contest as to the title to any particular property, in which the Court will, in some cases, take possession of the subject-matter of the contest for security, until it adjudicates upon the right. Such cases generally arise where the property is in the hands of estate-holders, factors, or trustees, who do not themselves claim any title to it. In ordering money into Court under such circumstances, the Court does not disturb the possession of any party claiming title, or direct a payment before the liability to pay is established."

in of share.

It is not necessary that the whole fund should be paid into Court, but where the defendant is clearly entitled to a definite share, he will only be ordered to pay in the shares which are claimed by other parties;<sup>1</sup> and it is not necessary that the defendant should expressly admit that there is trust-money in his hands, it is sufficient if it is shown that he has been served with notice of the intended motion, and has not disputed the affidavit which it is proposed to read to show that he received the fund.<sup>2</sup>

Payment
after decree.

When a decree has been made, and the Court finds from the evidence that a certain amount will be found due from the defendant, but that, by reason of unavoidable delay in ascertaining how much will be due, no final decision as to the ultimate balance of the account can be arrived at, it has power to order such amount to be paid into Court;<sup>3</sup> and money may be ordered to be paid in at the hearing without a notice of motion for that purpose having been given.<sup>4</sup> The principle is, that the cestui que trust is entitled to have the trust-fund secured by a decree of the Court.<sup>5</sup>

Payment
in of fund not received.

Trustees may be ordered to pay the amount of a trust-fund into Court, although it is not in their hands, if it appears that they might have at any time received it. So, trustees cannot excuse themselves from their liability on the ground that a co-trustee has obtained possession of the fund and misapplied it,<sup>6</sup> or indeed that they have lost the fund by any neglect of their duty.<sup>7</sup>

Admission of receipt of money
by trustee.

Where an executor or trustee admits that he has received a certain sum belonging to the testator's estate, but adds that he has made payments, the amount of which he does not specify, the Court will allow him to verify the amount of his payments by affidavit, and order him, on motion, to pay the balance into Court,<sup>8</sup> and may allow him to retain a reasonable sum for expenses and commission.<sup>9</sup>

The mere fact that the defendant makes admissions which would entitle the plaintiff to a decree, is not sufficient to warrant the Court in ordering money to be paid into Court; <sup>1</sup> there must be an admission that the defendant has a fund, and that the plaintiff is entitled to it. <sup>2</sup> So, if two persons are jointly liable, one of them cannot, before the extent of the joint liability has been ascertained, compel the other to pay the estimated proportion of his supposed liability into Court. <sup>3</sup> And the Court will not order interest on the fund in the trustee's hands to be paid into Court, unless there is an admission that he has made interest, even though it is clear that he will ultimately have to pay interest. <sup>4</sup>

There are cases where the Court has apparently ordered the payment of a debt upon motion, as where an executor or trustee admits himself to owe a debt to the estate he represents. In those cases the person to pay and the person to receive being the same, the Court assumes that what ought to have been done has been done, and orders the payment, not as of a debt by a debtor, but as moneys realized in the hands of the executor or trustee. <sup>5</sup>

The mere existence of a discretionary power in trustees affords no reason why the Court should not order payment of the fund into Court. But the Court will not order such payment to be made when it appears that trustees are about to exercise their discretion in a proper manner. <sup>6</sup>

The Court will give the defendant a reasonable time within which to transfer the fund into Court. If the fund is capable of immediate transfer, it will have to be paid in at once; but if it is outstanding on securities, time will be given to realize. <sup>7</sup>

The Court will, upon the application of all the parties beneficially interested, appoint a receiver of the trust-estate

LECTURE when any of the trustees refuse to act.<sup>1</sup> But a receiver
 XI. will not be appointed without sureties, even if he is not — objected to, when persons not competent to consent are parties.<sup>2</sup>

If all the parties do not consent to the appointment, any one of the cestuis que trustent may apply. A strong case must be made out.<sup>3</sup> The fact that a trustee or executor is poor is not of itself a sufficient ground,<sup>4</sup> unless he is in other respects unfit, as for example, if he is of drunken habits, or misapplication of the trust-funds is likely.<sup>5</sup> But if any misconduct, waste, or improper disposition of the assets is shown, the Court will instantly interfere.<sup>6</sup> If, for instance, an executor and trustee neglects to get in his testator's estate, and thereby deprives infant legatees of the maintenance or means of advancement provided for them by the will,<sup>7</sup> or if he is not impartial,<sup>8</sup> a receiver will be appointed. So a receiver will be appointed if the trustee is insolvent,<sup>9</sup> or bankrupt,<sup>10</sup> or incapacitated from acting,<sup>11</sup> or out of the jurisdiction.<sup>12</sup> A receiver was appointed where one of four trustees was dead, another had but little interfered in the trusts of the will, a third was abroad, and the fourth submitted to the appointment.<sup>13</sup> In another case three trustees had disagreed, and a receiver was appointed, the order was taken by arrangement between the parties, but the Court had previously expressed its opinion that, unless the trustees could agree, a receiver must be appointed.<sup>14</sup> Where three trustees disagreed, and

It is not a sufficient ground for the appointment of a receiver that one of several trustees has disclaimed.<sup>2</sup> But if there are only two trustees, and one disclaims, a receiver may be appointed; and either of the trustees may be at liberty to offer himself.<sup>3</sup> Nor is it the practice to appoint a receiver solely because one of several trustees is inactive, or has gone abroad.<sup>4</sup> And the fact that trustees have let a purchaser into possession before receiving the purchase-money, is not, of necessity, such misconduct as to induce the Court to interfere.<sup>5</sup>

Where a receiver is appointed under the authority of the Court, he is appointed for the benefit of all parties interested; and therefore, he will not be discharged merely on the application of the parties at whose instance he is appointed.<sup>6</sup>

Suits in equity affecting trusts are either (1) between strangers on the one hand and the persons interested in the trust on the other; or (2) between persons interested in the trust inter se.<sup>7</sup>

parties to
a suit.

I. As a general rule, according to English practice, in suits by or against strangers, all the trustees and all the cestuis que trustent, as together constituting but one interest, must be made parties.<sup>8</sup>

Suits by or against strangers.

The Civil Procedure Code<sup>9</sup> provides, that "all persons may be joined as plaintiffs in whom the right to any relief claimed is alleged to exist, whether jointly, severally, or in the alternative, in respect of the same cause of action; and judgment may be given for such one or more of the plaintiffs as may be found to be entitled to relief, for such relief as he or they may be entitled to without any amendment." Section 27 contains provisions for substituting or adding plaintiffs. And s. 28 provides, that "all persons may be joined as defendants against whom the right to any relief

Section 437, as amended by Act XII of 1879, s. 72, however, modifies the general rule as to parties. By that section it is provided, that "in all suits concerning property vested in a trustee, executor, or administrator, when the contention is between the persons beneficially interested in such property and a third person, the trustee, executor, or administrator shall represent the persons so interested; and it shall not, ordinarily, be necessary to make them parties to the suit. But the Court may, if it think fit, order them, or any of them, to be made such parties."

Succession Act, s. 187. The Succession Act<sup>1</sup> provides, that "no right as executor or legatee can be established in any Court of Justice, unless a Court of competent jurisdiction within the province shall have granted probate of the will under which the right is claimed, or shall have granted letters of administration under s. 180."

The provisions of this section extend to Hindus, Jainas, Sikhs, and Buddhists.<sup>2</sup>

Section 190 of the Succession Act<sup>3</sup> provides, that "no right to any part of the property of a person who has died intestate can be established in any Court of Justice unless letters of administration have been first granted by a Court of competent jurisdiction."

This section has not been extended to Hindus, Jainas, Sikhs, or Buddhists.<sup>4</sup>

Suits for specific performance. In suits for the specific performance of a contract, or to have it cancelled upon any ground, the general rule is, that the parties to the contract are the only parties to the suit, and therefore if trustees enter into a contract, not as the agents of their cestuis que trustent, but as principals (though the property of the cestuis que trustent is in fact concerned), they may sustain a suit either as plaintiffs or defendants without the presence of the cestuis que trustent; and not only is it unnecessary, but in many cases it would be highly improper, to make the cestuis que trustent parties. But where persons, sustaining a fiduciary character, enter into a contract, not as principals, but on behalf and as the agents of other parties, those other parties as the principals, and not their agents, are the proper parties to sue.<sup>1</sup>

XI.

Where several persons have united in constituting another their representative in a matter for all purposes, there, it seems, such representative may sue or be sued in the absence of the cestui que trust. But the intention to constitute such a representative must clearly appear; for trustees are not themselves owners of the property: they are, in a sense, agents for the owners in executing the trust; but they are not constituted agents for the purpose of defending the owners against the adverse claims of third parties.<sup>2</sup>

Representative specially constituted.

II. In suits between trustees and cestuis que trustent, it is a general rule that all the trustees and all the cestuis que trustent must be parties, the object being to take the necessary accounts at once, and to avoid multiplicity of suits;<sup>3</sup> and the rule holds good even though the liability of the trustees as between themselves may hereafter have to be ascertained in a suit for contribution.<sup>4</sup> A third person who reaps the benefit of a breach of trust must be made a party, as he is liable to the cestuis que trustent.<sup>5</sup> But a transferee from the trustees without notice of a breach of trust is not a necessary party.<sup>6</sup>

Suits between trustees and cestuis que trustent.

The representatives of a deceased trustee may be made parties, but a plaintiff may waive any relief as against them.<sup>7</sup> And it is not necessary to make the representatives of a deceased trustee, who, when he died, had no interest in the subject-matter of the suit, parties.<sup>8</sup> Nor is it necessary to make them parties, if the deceased trustee was not a party to a breach of trust in respect of which relief is sought,<sup>9</sup> or if the suit is not for the purpose of charging the trustees personally.<sup>10</sup>

LECTURE XI. So a trustee who disclaims,<sup>1</sup> or is beyond the jurisdiction of the Court,<sup>2</sup> or cannot be compelled to appear,<sup>3</sup> need not be made a party. An insolvent trustee must be made a party, for he may subsequently be in a position to meet his liability;<sup>4</sup> but it is not necessary to make his representatives parties, for they can have no assets.<sup>5</sup> And it is not necessary to make a trustee party who has been discharged and has transferred his interest,<sup>6</sup> or a trustee who is a mere agent.<sup>7</sup>

When trustee unnecessary party.

Cestui que trust abroad.

If a cestui que trust is abroad and cannot be found, he should be made a party, and the suit may proceed in his absence; but the Court will protect his interest in the decree, and he may subsequently come in and have the decree amended.<sup>8</sup> If, however, his interest is proposed to be affected, no decree can be made in his absence.<sup>9</sup>

Suit for aliquot share.

In a suit by a cestui que trust for an aliquot share in an ascertained fund, the other cestuis que trustent need not be parties.<sup>10</sup> But if the fund is not ascertained, the other cestuis que trustent must be parties.<sup>11</sup>

Suit between trustees.

In a suit between trustees to recover a fund which has been lost by the breach of trust of the defendant, the cestuis que trustent need not be parties.<sup>12</sup> But in a suit for contribution between trustees, a cestui que trust who has concurred in the breach of trust must be made a party.<sup>13</sup> Persons who claim adversely to the trust cannot be parties to a suit for the execution of the trust.<sup>14</sup>

Executors and administrators.

Where there are several executors or administrators they must all be made parties to a suit against one or more of them. But executors who have not proved their testator's will, and executors and administrators beyond the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court, need not be made parties.<sup>1</sup> And unless the Court directs otherwise, the husband of a married administratrix or executrix need not be a party to a suit against him or her.<sup>2</sup>

If the cestuis que trustent are very numerous, some may sue or defend on behalf of the others. The Civil Procedure Code<sup>3</sup> provides, that, "where there are numerous parties having the same interest in one suit, one or more of such parties may, with the permission of the Court, sue or be sued, or may defend in such suit on behalf of all parties so interested. But the Court shall, in such case, give, at the plaintiff's expense, notice of the institution of the suit to all such parties either by personal service, or (if from the number of parties or any other cause such service is not reasonably practicable), then by public advertisement, as the Court in each case may direct."

LECTURE

Suit by one
cestui que
trust on behalf of others.

The trustees must in such a case be parties.<sup>4</sup>

In order that some cestuis que trustent may sue on behalf of others, the relief sought must be beneficial to those on whose behalf the suit is brought, and their interests must be identical.<sup>5</sup> What number of cestuis que trustent will be considered 'numerous' is not very clear, but apparently any number over twenty-one will be so treated.<sup>6</sup> allowable.

"In a contest between the trust on the one hand and a stranger on the other, the trustees and cestuis que trustent represent but one interest, and costs must not be multiplied unnecessarily by the severance of them in the suit.

Severing defence.

Sir Anthony Hart laid it down, that a cestui que trust about to file his bill, ought to apply to his trustee to allow his name to be used as co-plaintiff. This (he said) the trustee is bound to comply with upon being indemnified against costs. Should the trustee refuse, he would be departing from his duty; and, in such a case would not be entitled to his costs when made defendant in consequence of his refusal. But where no application is made to the trustee to permit his name to be used as co-plaintiff, he is in no default; and the cestui que trust would be bound to pay the costs of the trustee for his own unreasonable negligence in not having required the trustee to be co-plaintiff."<sup>1</sup>

Trustees and cestuis que trustent, if they are made defendants in the same right, should not sever in their defence and put in separate written statements;<sup>2</sup> they cannot be compelled to join,<sup>3</sup> but only one set of costs will be allowed if they do not.<sup>4</sup>

In suits by cestuis que trustent, against trustees, all the cestuis que trustent, whose interests are identical, should join as plaintiffs.<sup>5</sup>

Costs of severing.

Trustees should defend jointly, and will only be allowed one set of costs if they do not, which will be apportioned between them,<sup>6</sup> unless one trustee has expressed his willingness to join, when he alone will get his costs;<sup>7</sup> and an innocent trustee need not join with a co-trustee who has been guilty of a breach of trust, and who is the accountable defendant.<sup>8</sup> The costs in such a case will be awarded to the innocent trustee. So trustees will be justified in severing if their answers would be different, or if they are residing so far apart that a joint written statement is impracticable.<sup>9</sup>

Costs in suits between strangers and parties to trust.

In suits between strangers and trustees, and cestuis que trustent, as in the case of a suit for specific performance of a contract, if the trustees are unsuccessful, they must pay the costs.<sup>10</sup> If a suit by a stranger is dismissed with costs, a trustee who is a defendant will not, as is usual between trustee and cestui que trust, be ordered his costs as between attorney and client, but only as between party and party.<sup>11</sup>

Between trustees and cestuis que trustent.

When the suit is between the trustees and cestuis que trustent, the general rule is, that the trustees shall have

If there is a fund in Court,<sup>2</sup> or if there is no fund in Court, if the trustees have been blameless, they are entitled to their costs as between solicitor and client; in the latter case, as against the trustees personally.<sup>3</sup> Costs out of fund.

When it appears that the trustees have sustained charges and expenses beyond the costs of suit, they will be allowed costs, charges, and expenses properly incurred. But an order made in a suit in this form will not include costs, charges, and expenses incurred in defending other suits, unless they are specially mentioned.<sup>4</sup> As to costs in creditor's and legatee's suits, where the fund is deficient, see Lewin, 6th Edn., p. 829. A trustee who disclaims will be entitled to his costs as between party and party.<sup>5</sup> Disclaimer.

Where a trustee did not appear at the hearing, and a decree nisi was made against him, and the trustee set down the cause again, and prayed to have his costs of the suit upon paying the costs of the day, the order was made. But if the decree has been passed, a trustee who has omitted to ask for his costs at the hearing, cannot have the cause reheard upon the subject of costs only, and cannot obtain an order for payment of his costs upon presenting a petition.<sup>6</sup> Costs after decree.

If a suit has been rendered necessary by the misconduct, negligence, or caprice of the trustee, he must, as we have seen, pay the costs personally; and if such an order is made, he cannot deduct the costs from the trust fund.<sup>7</sup> If, however, the wrongful acts charged have only been partially proved, the trustee will only have to pay costs in respect of the allegations proved.<sup>8</sup> So if he has not been guilty of any wilful breach of trust, but the suit has been rendered necessary by an innocent mistake, the Court will not order him to pay the costs of the other side, and may even allow him his costs.<sup>9</sup> Suit ne-

Accounts. It has been decided, that though, as a general rule, when a trustee commits a breach of trust, he must pay the costs of a suit to repair it, yet he will be entitled to his subsequent costs relating to the ordinary taking of the accounts.<sup>3</sup> If, however, the taking of the accounts has been rendered necessary by the breach of trust, it is difficult to see why the trustee should be exonerated from paying the costs incident to the accounts.

Law doubtful. Trustees will not have to bear the costs of discussing a doubtful point of law.<sup>4</sup> But a trustee will have to pay the costs of a suit instituted for the purpose of determining a question relating to his own private interests.<sup>5</sup> And as a general rule it may be laid down that a trustee, who refuses to account, or claims to be a creditor of the trust fund, or denies assets, or behaves in an obstructive way in the taking of the accounts, will be ordered to pay the costs caused by his misconduct.<sup>6</sup>

XII.

Charities may be established by charter, or may be placed under the management of individual trustees. A charitable gift is a gift to the general public, and extends to the poor as well as to the rich.<sup>1</sup>

According to English law, all trusts, whether of moveable or immoveable property, for superstitious purposes, come under the class of trusts void as being against the policy of the law. Such gifts are not void by the Common Law, but were first made void by the Statute,<sup>2</sup> by which gifts to superstitious uses then existing were expressly prohibited, such as gifts for prayers and masses for the benefit of the soul.<sup>3</sup> But this Statute does not apply to India.

Thus a gift for the performance of masses is valid. In Das Merces v. Cones,<sup>4</sup> Norman, J. said: "By the law of England, gifts to superstitious uses appear to be void, as being contrary to the policy of the law, for two reasons: first, because they tend to produce the same losses and inconveniences to the Crown and subjects of the realm, as in cases where lands are aliened in Mortmain, see the preamble of the Statute 23 Hy. VIII, c. 10; and, secondly, because the superstitions and errors in Christian religion have been brought into the minds and estimation of men, by reason of their ignorance of their every true and perfect salvation through the death of Jesus Christ, and by devising and phantasying vain hopes of purgatory, and masses satisfactory to be done for those which be departed, which doctrine and vain opinion by nothing more is maintained and upholden than by the abuse of trentals (offices for the dead continuing thirty days or consisting of thirty masses), charities, or other provisions made for the continuance of the said blindness and ignorance. See the preamble of Statute I Ed. VI, c. 14. So in Bacon's Abridgment, title 'charitable uses,' and 'Mortmain' (D), it is said, that the king is entitled to such uses 'by force of several Statutes, and as the head of Church and State, and entrusted by the Common Law to see that nothing is done in maintenance or propagation of a false religion.' A law intended for the support and maintenance of the Protestant branch of the Catholic Church, and to discourage the teaching of doctrines at variance with it, cannot have been intended to be introduced here at a time when the Christian religion was not, and never could have been supposed to be likely to be, the established religion of the country." His Lordship then referred to cases showing that the Statute did not extend to Ireland, and continued: "If such a gift be not void in Ireland, a multo fortiori, it is not void here, where the Crown cannot be supposed to have contemplated, either the end which the English legislature had in view in passing the Statute 14 Ed. VI, or the means by which that end was to be attained. It is clear, that the policy of the law intended to be introduced into this country not only by the Charter of Geo. I, but by all subsequent Charters and Acts, was one of toleration; that the English Government never considered it as any part of their duty to impose the Protestant religion on their subjects, or in any way to interfere with their religious opinions or practices connected therewith, however erroneous or false . . . . For the above reasons, I am of opinion that that portion of Common Law which declares gifts to superstitious uses void, does not apply to the gifts of persons born and domiciled in Calcutta."

In England, devises of immoveable property for charitable purposes are void under the Mortmain Act.<sup>1</sup> This Statute does not extend to India, as the object for which it was passed was purely political. "I conceive," said Grant, M. R.,<sup>2</sup> "that the object of the Statute of Mortmain was purely political, that it grew out of local circumstances, and was meant to have merely a local operation. It was passed to prevent what was deemed a public mischief, and not to regulate, as between ancestor and heir, the power of devising, or to prescribe, as between grantor and grantee, the forms of alienation. It is incidentally only, and with reference to a particular object, that the exercise of the owner's dominion over his property is abridged . . . Framed as the Mortmain Act is, I think it is quite inapplicable to Grenada, or to any other colony. In its causes, its objects,

LECTURE XII. its provisions, its qualifications, and its exceptions, it is a law wholly English, calculated for the purposes of local policy, complicated with local establishments, and incapable without great incongruity in the effect, of being transferred as it stands into the code of any other country.”<sup>1</sup>

Persons governed by the English law in this country may, therefore, subject however to the provisions of the Succession Act,<sup>2</sup> create trusts of immoveable property for religious or charitable purposes.

Section 105 of that Act provides that—

Bequests to religious or charitable uses. “No man having a nephew or niece, or any nearer relative, shall have power to bequeath any property to religious or charitable uses, except by a will executed not less than twelve months before his death, and deposited within six months from its execution in some place provided by law for the safe custody of the wills of living persons.”

And the following illustration is given :—

“A having a nephew makes a bequest by a will not executed, nor deposited as required—

For the relief of poor people ;
 For the maintenance of sick soldiers ;
 For the erection or support of a hospital ;
 For the education and preferment of orphans ;
 For the support of scholars ;
 For the erection or support of a school ;
 For the building or repairs of a bridge ;
 For the making of roads ;
 For the erection or support of a church ;
 For the repairs of a church ;
 For the benefit of ministers of religion ;
 For the foundation or support of a public garden ;
 All these bequests are void.”

Subject to the foregoing limitations, bequests of any property for charitable or religious purposes are valid.

What are charitable purposes. Charitable purposes are : the relief of aged and impotent people ; the maintenance of sick and maimed soldiers and poor mariners ; schools of learning ; free schools and scholars in universities ; the repair of bridges, ports, havens, causeways, churches, sea-banks, and highways ; the education

Besides these, gifts of personal property for the purpose of upholding the doctrines of Dissenters of various denominations,<sup>2</sup> Roman Catholics,<sup>3</sup> and Jews,<sup>4</sup> are valid. The gift may be either for the particular religious object or to a minister as such.<sup>5</sup> So, gifts of funds to be employed in the purchase of bibles and other religious books,<sup>6</sup> for keeping the chimes of a church in repair, for payments to be made to singers in the gallery of a church,<sup>7</sup> to build an organ gallery in a church,<sup>8</sup> and to keep in repair and ornament a church,<sup>9</sup> are gifts for charitable purposes, and valid. A gift of land or money for the purpose of building a church, or a house, or otherwise for the maintaining and propagating the worship of God, without more, will be considered as a gift for maintaining and propagating the established religion. But if it is clearly expressed, that the purpose is that of maintaining dissenting doctrines, so long as they are not contrary to law, the Court will execute the trust according to the express intention.<sup>10</sup>

mentioned one will be construed to mean improvements carried on under statutory powers and not by private persons.<sup>3</sup> So, a gift for the benefit and advantage of the country,<sup>4</sup> or a gift in exoneration of the national debt,<sup>5</sup> or for the assistance of literary persons who have not been successful in their career,<sup>6</sup> for the increase and encouragement of good servants,<sup>7</sup> for the release of debtors from prison,<sup>8</sup> and for the redemption of slaves,<sup>9</sup> are valid as gifts for charitable purposes. But a bequest for purchasing the discharge of poachers "committed to prison for nonpayment of fines, fees, or expenses under the game laws," was held to be void, as encouraging offences and opposed to public policy.<sup>10</sup>

Again, gifts for the purpose of founding schools,<sup>11</sup> scholarships,<sup>12</sup> or lectureships,<sup>13</sup> for the benefit of a particular college,<sup>14</sup> for the advancement and propagation of education and learning in every part of the world,<sup>15</sup> are good charitable gifts. In Beaumont v. Olivera<sup>16</sup> gifts to the Royal Society, which has for its object the improvement of natural knowledge, and the Royal Geographical Society, the object of which is the improvement and diffusion of geographical knowledge, were held to be good. So gifts to the British Museum,<sup>17</sup> and for the purpose of establishing a perpetual botanical garden,<sup>18</sup> are gifts for charitable purposes.<sup>19</sup>

The gift must be for public purposes. Thus gifts for private purposes, such as keeping up a tomb,<sup>20</sup> a private

LECTURE

A trust for charitable purposes must not be uncertain and indefinite. Thus, a gift to executors, in trust to dispose of it at their pleasure, either for charitable or public purposes, or to any person or persons, in such shares as they should think fit, is too general and undefined to be executed by the Court.<sup>4</sup>

certain.

In Morice v. The Bishop of Durham,<sup>5</sup> the leading case on the subject, a bequest in trust for such objects of benevolence and liberality as the trustee in his own discretion should approve, was held to be void. "That it is a trust," said Grant, M. R., "unless it be of a charitable nature, too indefinite to be executed by this Court, has not been, and cannot be, denied. There can be no trust over the exercise of which this Court will not assume a control; for an uncontrollable power of disposition would be ownership, and not trust. If there be a clear trust, but for uncertain objects, the property, that is the subject of the trust, is undisposed of; and the benefit of such trust must result to those to whom the law gives the ownership in default of disposition by the former owner. But this doctrine does not hold good with regard to trusts for a charity. Every other trust must have a definite object. There must be somebody in whose favour the Court can decree performance. But it is now settled, upon authority which it is too late to controvert, that, where a charitable purpose is expressed, however general, the bequest shall not fail on account of the uncertainty of the object; but the particular mode of application will be directed by the King in some cases, in others by this Court.

Morice v.
Bishop of Durham.

"Then is this a trust for charity? Do purposes of liberality and benevolence mean the same as objects of charity? That word, in its widest sense, denotes all the good affections men ought to bear towards each other; in its most restricted and common sense, relief of the poor. In neither of these senses is it employed in this Court. Here its signification is derived chiefly from the Statute of Elizabeth (43 Eliz., c. 4). Those purposes are considered charitable which that Statute enumerates, or which by analogies are deemed within its spirit and intendment; and to some such purpose every bequest to charity generally shall be applied. But it is clear, liberality and benevolence can find numberless objects not included in that Statute in the largest construction of it. The use of the word 'charitable' seems to have been purposely avoided in this will, in order to leave the Bishop the most unrestrained discretion. Supposing the uncertainty to be no objection to its validity, could it be contended to be an abuse of the trust to employ this fund upon objects which all mankind would allow to be objects of liberality and benevolence, though not to be said, in the language of this Court, to be objects also of charity? By what rule of construction could it be said, all objects of liberality and benevolence are excluded which do not fall within the Statute of Elizabeth? The question is, not whether he may not apply it upon purposes strictly charitable, but whether he is bound so to apply it? I am not aware of any case in which the bequest has been held charitable, where the testator has not used that word to denote his general purpose, which this Court has determined to be charitable in its nature."<sup>1</sup>

Instances
of uncertainty.

So a gift to a corporation "for a purpose," where no purpose is expressed, is void for uncertainty.<sup>8</sup> Where a testator bequeathed a sum of money to the trustees of a chapel "to be appropriated according to statement appended," and no statement was appended, it was held, that the Court could not presume a charitable object in the bequest: and if not charitable, the object was so indefinite that the gift must fail.<sup>1</sup> But a bequest for such charities and other public purposes as lawfully might be "in a certain parish," is good, it being a gift to trustees to be laid out in charities for the benefit of the parish.<sup>2</sup>

Parol evidence is admissible to explain a latent ambiguity in the description of a charity in a will.<sup>3</sup>

In construing a will containing charitable bequests, the Court must not lean to the side of avoiding the will in order to gain money for the family, nor, on the other hand, strain to support the will to gain money for the charity.<sup>4</sup> But when a charitable bequest is capable of two constructions, one of which would make it void, and the other which would render it effectual, the latter must be adopted.<sup>5</sup>

Principles of construing
will.

In construing a will relating to a charity of great antiquity, contemporaneous usage may be referred to.<sup>6</sup>

If a testator has manifested a general intention to give to charity, the failure of the particular mode in which the charity is to be effectuated will not destroy the charity; but the Court will substitute another mode of devoting the property to charitable purposes, though the formal intention as to the mode cannot be accomplished, or, as it is called, will execute the testator's intention cy près, and for this purpose will direct a scheme to be framed.<sup>7</sup> The doctrine of cy près means, that where there is a general charitable purpose for an object mentioned by a testator of such a kind that the Court can satisfy itself that some other object can be found in a reasonable degree nearly answering such charitable purpose, then there shall be an application in favour of that object.<sup>8</sup> The jurisdiction of the Court to act on the cy près doctrine upon the failure of a specific charitable bequest arises whether the residue be given to

LECTURE XII. charity or not, unless upon the construction of the will a direction can be implied that the bequest, if it fails, should go to the residue.<sup>1</sup>

Altering scheme.

The Court has power to alter from time to time the scheme of a charity which has been settled by a previous decree of the Court, if the circumstances require it.<sup>2</sup> But the Court will not subsequently change the application, even to a purpose identical with its original object, unless satisfied that the proposed application will be as beneficial as the existing one.<sup>3</sup> Apparently, when a scheme has once been settled for the application of a charitable fund, an alteration in it can only be made with the consent of the persons authorized to act under s. 539 of the Civil Procedure Code.<sup>4</sup>

Gift for charitable purposes generally.

A trust for "charitable and pious uses" generally,<sup>5</sup> or "to and amongst the different institutions," to which bequests have been given; "or to any other religious institution as my trustees may think proper,"<sup>6</sup> or for "the poor,"<sup>7</sup> is good. Where a testator directed the residue of his personal estate to be divided for certain charitable purposes mentioned by him, "and other charitable purposes as I do intend to name hereafter," and died without naming any other charitable purposes, it was held, that there was a disposition of the residue in favour of charity, to be carried into effect by the Court, having regard to the objects particularly pointed out by the Court.<sup>8</sup>

Particular purpose failing, where gift is to charity generally.

Where a charitable gift is made for particular purposes which fail, and the gift is to charity generally, the Court will execute the intention of the donor cy près. "When," said Lord Brougham,<sup>9</sup> "a testator gives one charitable fund to three several classes of objects, unless he excludes by most express provisions the application of one portion to the purpose to which the others are destined, it is clear that the Court may thus execute his intention in the event of an impossibility of applying that portion to its original destination. The character of charity is impressed on the whole fund ; there is good sense in presuming that, had the testator known that one object was to fail, he would have given its appropriated fund to the increase of the funds destined to the other objects of his bounty ; and there is convenience in acting as he would himself have done. This is the foundation of the doctrine of cy près.” And, therefore, gifts to charities which have ceased to exist at the time of the testator’s death,<sup>1</sup> or subsequently fail by reason of the objects of the bounty no longer existing, as where a fund was given for ransoming British slaves in Turkey and Barbary,<sup>2</sup> will be administered cy près.<sup>3</sup> So, if a sum is devoted to a charitable purpose, but the particular charity to be benefited is not so described as that it can be ascertained, the Court will direct it to be applied to a charity of a similar nature.<sup>4</sup> Again, where a testator gives a sum of stock to trustees, and shows a clear intention to dispose of the whole of the dividends for the benefit of charitable institutions, and does in fact specify some of them and the yearly sums to be paid to them, but leaves blanks for the names of others and for the sums to be paid to them, the Court will carry out the testator’s intention cy près, and will frame a scheme for the application of the remaining dividends.<sup>5</sup> Where property was given to the Kent County Hospital, and there was no hospital having precisely that name, it was held, that a general hospital must be presumed to have been intended, and the Kent County Ophthalmic Hospital could not take the legacy ; but that it must be divided between two hospitals which together supplied the place of a general county hospital.<sup>6</sup>

In the foregoing cases, the gifts were to charities generally, the fund had the character of charity impressed upon it, and the Court, therefore, carried out the general intention of the testator. But there is another class of cases where the testator has not shown an intention to give to charity generally, but only to benefit some particular charity. And if such object fails, the fund will not be applied cy près, but there will be an intestacy, and it will fall into the residue. "Now," said Kindersley, V. C.,<sup>1</sup> "there is a distinction well settled by the authorities. There is one class of cases, in which there is a gift to charity generally, indicative of a general charitable purpose, and pointing out the mode of carrying it into effect; if that mode fails, the Court says the general purpose of charity shall be carried out. There is another class in which the testator shows an intention not of general charity, but to give to some particular institution; and then if it fails, because there is no such institution, the gift does not go to charity generally."<sup>2</sup>

Again, if the Court has no power to enforce the execution of the proposed trust, nor to settle a scheme for the administration of the charity cy près, there will be an intestacy, and the fund will fall into the residue. Thus, where a testator gave certain funds to the President and Vice-President of the United States, and the Governor of Pennsylvania, upon trust, to build and endow a college for the instruction of youth in the State of Pennsylvania, and directed that moral philosophy should be taught therein, and a professor should be engaged to inculcate and advocate the natural rights of the black people of every clime and country until they be restored to an equality of rights with their white brethren throughout the Union, and the trustees disclaimed the gift, it was held that the trust failed.<sup>3</sup>

A friendly society is not a charitable institution, and therefore the doctrine of cy près will not, on the society being voluntarily dissolved, be applied to a bequest made to it in aid of its funds; but the same will fall into the testator's residuary estate.<sup>4</sup>

fund.

If a fund is given to trustees upon trust to divide between certain charities and legatees, and the trustees do not apportion it as directed, the Court will divide it between the charities and legatees equally, on the principle that 'equality is equity.'<sup>5</sup> In Down v. Worrall,<sup>6</sup> a testator gave a fund to trustees, upon trust. to settle such part at their discretion either for pious and charitable purposes or otherwise for the benefit of the testator's sister and her children; and it was held, that this was a personal trust which a representative of the surviving trustee could not execute, and that a sum which remained at the decease of the surviving trustee, and which had not been applied either to charitable purposes or for the benefit of the testator's sister and her children, was undisposed of, and belonged to the testator's next-of-kin. The case, apparently, conflicts with those referred to above. But in Salisbury v. Denton,<sup>1</sup> Wood, V. C., pointed out that the case was distinguishable, saying, "It is one thing to direct a trustee to give a part of a fund to one set of objects, and the remainder to another, and it is a distinct thing to direct him to give 'either' to one set of objects, 'or' to another. Down v. Worrall was a case of the latter description. There the trustees could give all to either of the objects. This is a case of the former description. Here the trustee was bound to give a part to each."

Where a single fund is given for several charitable objects, and one of them is bad, the principle on which the Court acts is, that if it can be ascertained what are the proper proportions to be attributed to the several objects, it directs an inquiry on the subject; but if from the nature of the gift it appears impracticable to fix the proportions, the Court divides the fund equally between the different objects.<sup>2</sup> So, if a fund is given to be applied to certain charitable objects in certain proportions and the value of the property increases, the accretions will be apportioned among the different objects of the charity pro rata.<sup>3</sup>

If property is given for the benefit of a particular charity, and subsequently the charity is severed, as in the case of a gift for the repairs of a church in a particular parish, which is afterwards divided into two parishes, the gift cannot be apportioned.<sup>4</sup>

Where a fund is given for charitable purposes with a gift over. gift over in case any of the purposes should be void or fail, the gift over is good.<sup>5</sup>

XII.Charity in foreign country.Breach of
trust.

A gift to a charity in a foreign country is good, though the Court cannot see to the administration of the charity.<sup>1</sup> In Mitford v. Reynolds,<sup>2</sup> a testator bequeathed the residue of his estate "to the Government of Bengal, to be applied to charitable, beneficial, and public works, at and in the city of Dacca in Bengal, for the exclusive benefit of the native inhabitants, in such manner as they and the Government might regard as most conclusive to that end," and it was held that the bequest was good.

The Court has, in the case of charities, jurisdiction to redress a breach of trust, where the objects of the founder have been prevented or neglected. It has also authority to direct a scheme in order to enforce the more complete attainment of those objects. It has power and authority, when the objects contemplated by the founder cannot be carried into effect, to direct the application of the revenues of the charity to promote objects in accordance with the spirit of the original foundation the actual compliance with which has become impossible. But it has no authority to vary the original foundation and to apply the charity estates in a manner which it conceives to be more beneficial to the public, or even such as the Court may surmise that the founder would himself have contemplated could he have foreseen the changes which have taken place by the lapse of time.<sup>3</sup> For instance, a fund given for purpose of establishing a hospital in a particular town cannot be applied towards lighting and paving the town.<sup>4</sup> So a gift to the poor of a certain parish cannot be given to the poor of another parish.<sup>5</sup> But a gift "for the relief of the poor" may be applied to building a schoolhouse and educating the poor of the parish,<sup>6</sup> or in aid of the poor rates, and so in relief of the parish.<sup>7</sup> So, a gift to be applied towards finding a schoolmaster, and for the pains of such master, may be applied towards rebuilding and repairing the schoolroom and schoolhouse, because these are necessary.<sup>8</sup>

In England, if the trustees of a charity are guilty of a breach of trust, the mode of obtaining redress is by way of information in the name of the Attorney-General at the instance of some person who is called a 'relator.' The sovereign is parens patriæ, and it is the duty of the Attorney-General to see that justice is administered to every subject. Relators need not be personally interested. They are required merely because the Attorney-General, prosecuting a suit in the name of the Crown, would not be liable to costs, and unless some persons were made responsible, proceedings might be instituted very oppressive to individuals.<sup>1</sup>

Mode of procedure to obtain redress.

In this country the mode of redress is regulated by the Civil Procedure Code,<sup>2</sup> which contains the following provisions:—

Civil Procedure
Code, s. 539.

"In case of any alleged breach of any express or constructive trust created for public charitable purposes, or whenever the direction of the Court is deemed necessary for the administration of any such trust, the Advocate-General acting ex officio, or two or more persons having a direct interest in the trust, and having obtained the consent in writing of the Advocate-General, may institute a suit in the High Court or the District Court within the local limits of whose civil jurisdiction the whole or any part of the subject-matter of the trust is situate, to obtain a decree

- (a) appointing new trustees of the charity ;
- (b) vesting any property in the trustees of the charity ;
- (c) declaring the proportions in which its objects are entitled ;
- (d) authorizing the whole or any part of its property to be let, sold, mortgaged, or exchanged ;
- (e) settling a scheme for its management ; or granting such further or other relief as the nature of the case may require.

The powers conferred by this section on the Advocate-General may, outside the Presidency-towns, be exercised also by the Collector or by such officer as the Local Government may appoint in this behalf."

The Advocate-General is not a necessary party to a suit brought by the managers of the temples and endowments of a particular sect, to have a will bequeathing property for the purposes of the temples and endowments construed, for a declaration of the plaintiffs' rights, and to have

Worshippers or devotees of an idol are entitled to bring a suit, complaining of a breach of trust with reference to the funds or property belonging to the idol or appendant to its temple. But it is doubtful whether this section is applicable to the devasthan of an idol or temple, dedicated merely to the purposes of such idol or temple.<sup>2</sup>

The representatives of a testator who has created trusts for religious or charitable purposes, in which the representatives are not personally interested, may institute proceedings to have abuses in the trust rectified, there being no officer in this country who has such power of enforcing the due administration of religious or charitable trusts by information at the relation of some private individual as is possessed by the Attorney-General in England.<sup>3</sup> Such a suit should not be admitted unless the plaintiff gives security for costs.<sup>4</sup>

The Vatandar Joshi of a village has the right to recover pecuniary damages from a person who has intruded upon his office and received fees properly payable to him. But the Court will not grant any injunction against such intruder, which would have the effect of forcing upon any section of the community the services of a priest whom they are unwilling to recognize, and forbidding them to employ a priest whom they are willing to recognize, and forbidding them to employ a priest whose ministrations they desire.<sup>5</sup>

to account.

Trustees of charities must account in the same manner as ordinary trustees. Limitation will not run against them in the case of an express trust.<sup>6</sup> But the misapplication of the funds may have been going on a great length of time, and then the Court may set a limit to the period over which the account is to be taken. "It does not follow," said Sir T. Plumer, M. R.,<sup>1</sup> "that relief will be given after a great length of time, it being the constant course of Courts of Equity to discourage stale demands. Even in cases of fraud, in which, if recent, there would have been no doubt, lapse of time has induced the Courts to refuse their interference. In case of charities, this principle has often been acted on when there has been a long period during which a party has, under an innocent mistake, misapplied a fund from the laches and neglect of others,—that is, from no one of the public setting him right; and when the accounts have in consequence become entangled, the Court, under its general discretion, considering the enormous expense of the enquiries, the great hardship of calling upon representatives to refund what families have spent, acting upon the notion of its being their property, has been in the habit, while giving relief, of fixing a period to the account."<sup>2</sup>

Contemporaneous usage may be referred to, and the Court will not assume a long series of breaches of trust to have been committed.<sup>3</sup>

If the trustees have been acting under a mistake, the Court will not call back any disbursements made before the commencement of the proceedings, or before the trustees had notice that their dealings were to be examined into.<sup>4</sup>

If the instrument creating a charitable trust does not contain provisions for the appointment of new trustees, the Court will direct an inquiry as to who are proper persons to be appointed, and will make the appointment.<sup>5</sup>

It is the duty of the visitors to regulate and control the management of the charity. And with this duty the Court will not interfere, though it will interfere with the management of the revenues of the charity. "There is nothing better established," said Lord Commissioner Eyre,<sup>4</sup> "than that this Court does not entertain a general jurisdiction or regulate and control charities established by charter. There the establishment is fixed and determined; and the Court has no power to vary it. The result is, this Court must not hastily take upon itself to interfere with those who have by charter, or by Act of Parliament, the whole control over the charity. But where, having also the management of the revenues, they are abusing their trust, the Court has jurisdiction."<sup>1</sup> "As to the revenue it is quite clear," said Lord Eldon,<sup>2</sup> "that where there is a local visitor as to the conduct and management of the school if in the original instrument a trust is expressed as to the application of the revenue, this Court has jurisdiction to compel a due application."<sup>3</sup> "Where there is a clear and distinct trust," said Romilly, M. R.,<sup>4</sup> "this Court administers and enforces it as much where there is a visitor as where there is none. This is clear, both on principle and authority. The visitor has a common law office and common law duties to perform, and does not superintend the performance of the trust which belongs to the various officers which he may take care to see are properly kept up and appointed. It is the duty of the Court to see that the trusts are properly performed, notwithstanding that there may be a special or a general visitor."

Purchaser

notice from purchaser
with notice.

The rule that a purchaser without notice from a purchaser with notice of a breach of trust is not liable, does not apply in the case of a charity, and in such a case the purchaser is bound by the claim of the charity. In other respects the principles of equity as to the doctrine of notice are applicable to charities in the same manner as between private persons.<sup>6</sup>

Trustees of charities in England could not, before the restrictions which have been imposed upon them by Statute, have made an absolute disposition of the trust-estate. But there was no positive rule, that in no instance could an absolute disposition be made, for then the Court itself could not have authorized such an act—a jurisdiction which it is acknowledged has, from time to time, been exercised in special cases. “I do not doubt,” said Wigram, V. C.,<sup>1</sup> “of the existence of this power in the Court: the trustees have the power to sell at law, they can convey the legal estate, but it is only a Court of Equity that can recall the property, and if that Court should sanction a sale, it would be bound to protect the purchaser.” The true principle was, that an absolute disposition was then only to be considered a breach of trust when the proceeding was inconsistent with a provident administration of the estate for the benefit of the charity. And the transaction was strongly assumed to be improvident as against a purchaser until he had established the contrary.<sup>2</sup> The principles above stated apply here, as the Charity Acts are not extended to this country.

Among Hindus, property of every kind may be dedicated to religious and charitable purposes, whether by gift inter vivos, or by will;<sup>3</sup> and such dedications of property do not require the assent of the State.<sup>4</sup> Except in families governed by the Mitakshara law, there is no limit to the amount of property which may be dedicated; in one case all the family property was permitted to be applied to the support and worship of the family idol.<sup>5</sup> According to Hindu law as current in Bengal, the gift of joint and undivided property for religious and charitable purposes to the extent of the donor's share is valid.<sup>6</sup> And under the Mitakshara law, a father may give a small portion of the ancestral estate for pious purposes without the consent of the sons.<sup>7</sup>

XII.Perpetui-ties.Colourable gift to idol.Gift must be certain.

A gift to charitable or religious purposes forms an exception to the general rule against perpetuities. "It being assumed to be a principle of Hindu law that a gift can be made to an idol, which is a caput mortuum and incapable of alienating, that principle cannot be broken in upon by engrafting upon it the English law of perpetuities."<sup>1</sup> But the rule against perpetuities cannot be avoided by means of a colourable gift to an idol. Thus, where a Hindu, by will, devised certain property consisting of a family dwelling-house and land, to trustees for ever, for the residence, maintenance, and performance of the worship of certain family idols, and appointed his sons and their descendants in the strict male line to be sebaits of the idols for ever, making provision for their residence in the family dwellinghouse; and the will also contained a clause restraining any partition, division, or alienation of the property so dedicated to the worship of the idols; and the testator appointed the trustees executors of his will, and by a codicil bequeathed certain legacies to various members of his family,—it was held, that the devise to idols was void and inoperative, as being a settlement in perpetuity on the male descendants of the testator and for their use, and not a real dedication for the worship of the idols.<sup>2</sup>

The principle of English law, that a gift for charitable or religious purposes must be certain,<sup>3</sup> applies in construing the will of a Hindu. Where a testator by his will directed as follows:—"I do hereby direct my trustee to feed the really needy and poor at Gopeenathjee out of a separate expense out of my estate, to be contributed to the worship of Luckheejonardunjee, my ancestral goddess: I do direct my trustee to spend suitable sums for the annual shradhs, or anniversaries, of my father, mother, and grandfather, as well as of myself after my demise; for the performance of the ceremonies and the feeding of the Brahmins and the poor; to spend suitable sums for the annual contribution and gifts to the Brahmins, pundits holding tolls for learning in the country at the time of the Doorga Poojah; to spend suitable sums for the Section 105 of the Indian Succession Act, which imposes certain restrictions on gifts for religious and charitable purposes,<sup>2</sup> does not extend to Hindus. But the "Oudh Estates Act, 1869,"<sup>3</sup> limits, to a certain extent, the powers of taluqdars or grantees in Oudh of disposing of their property for charitable purposes. Section 18 provides, that no taluqdar or grantee, and no heir or legatee of a taluqdar or grantee, shall have power to give his estate, or any portion thereof, or interest therein, to religious or charitable uses except by an instrument of gift executed not less than three months before his death, and subject to the provisions contained in s. 17.

Gifts to religious or charitable uses by Oudh taluqdars.

And s. 20 of the same Act provides, that "no taluqdar or grantee, and no heir or legatee of a taluqdar or grantee, having a child, parent, brother, unmarried sister, or a nephew, being the naturally-born son of a brother of such taluqdar or grantee, heir or legatee, shall have power to bequeath his estate or any part thereof, or any interest therein, exceeding in amount or value the sum of two thousand rupees, to religious or charitable uses, except by a will executed not less than three months before his death, and registered within one month from the date of its execution."

"As an idol cannot itself hold lands, the practice is to vest the lands in a trustee for the religious purpose, or to impose upon the holder of the lands a trust to defray the expense of the worship.<sup>4</sup> Sometimes the donor is himself the trustee. Such a trust is of course valid, if

"The last case arises where the founder applies his own property to the creation of a pagoda, or any other religious or charitable foundation, keeping the property itself, and the control over it, absolutely in his own hands. The community may be greatly benefited by this arrangement so long as it lasts, but its continuance is entirely at his own pleasure. It is like a private chapel in a gentleman's park, and the fact that the public have been permitted to resort to it, will not prevent its being closed, or pulled down, provided there has been no dedication of it to the public."<sup>3</sup> Thus, where two Parsi brothers erected a fire-temple on their estate, and by a document, which they recorded in a solemn meeting of their community, declared that they erected this temple, and placed the sacred fire in it, in commemoration of their deceased father, but that it should always be subject to the authority of themselves and their heirs, and that all the members of the Zoroastrian community were at liberty to have their religious ceremonies performed therein without any obstruction on their part,—it was held, that this document contained no grant of the temple to the Parsi community, but that the entire ownership remained in the brothers, and would pass to their assignees in case of insolvency.<sup>4</sup> So, where the plaintiff sued, as the shebait of a certain idol, to recover possession of a zemindari, by setting aside an alienation of it effected by an ancestor, on the ground that it was debuttur property and inalienable; and it appeared that the property in dispute was purchased by the grandfather of the plaintiff in the name of the idol, which was set up merely for his private worship in his own house, without any priests to perform regularly any religious service for the public benefit of Hindus; and that the property had been dealt with all along as his own private Property may be devised partially subject to a trust in favour of an idol or for some religious or charitable endowment. Thus, where a Hindu, by his will, gave all his moveable and immoveable property to his family idol, and, after stating that he had four sons, he directed that his property should never be divided by them, their sons or grandsons in succession, but that they should enjoy “the surplus proceeds only;” and the will, after appointing one of the sons manager to the estate, to attend to the festivals and ceremonies of the idol and to maintain the family, further directed, that whatever might be the surplus after deducting the whole of the expenditure, the same should be added to the corpus, and in the event of a disagreement between the sons and family, the testator directed that, after the expenses attending the estate, the idols, and maintenance of the family, whatever nett produce and surplus there might be should be divided annually, in certain proportions, between the members of the family,—it was held, that the bequest to the idol was not an absolute gift, but was to be construed as a gift to the testator’s four sons and their offspring in the male line as a joint family, so long as the family remained joint, and that the four sons were entitled to the surplus of the property after providing for the performance of the ceremonies and festivals of the idol and the provisions in the will for maintenance.<sup>2</sup> Again, where a Hindu lady left, by will to her sons, land belonging to her to support the daily worship of an idol, and to defray the expenses of certain other religious ceremonies, with a provision that, in the event of there being a surplus after these uses had been satisfied out of the revenue of the lands, such surplus should be applied to the support of the family,—it was held, that this provision amounted to a bequest of the surplus to the members of the joint family for their own use and benefit, and that each of the sons of the testatrix took a share in the property, which, after satisfying the religious and ceremonial trusts, might be considerable and could not be presumed to be valueless.<sup>3</sup>

property
subject to

trust.Alienation.<sup>1</sup>

Where property is wholly dedicated to religious purposes, it cannot be sold; but where a portion only of its profits is charged for such purposes, the property may be sold subject to the charge with which it is burdened.<sup>1</sup> So, where an endowment is merely nominal, and indications of personal appropriation and exercise of proprietary right are found, a sale of the property is valid under the Hindu law.<sup>2</sup>

In such cases as these we are now considering, the property may be partitioned subject to the trust for the idol.<sup>3</sup>

Although property devoted to religious purposes is, as a rule, inalienable, a shebait may alienate a reasonable portion of the endowed property if the alienation is absolutely required by the necessities of the management, such as the restoration of the idol or the repair of the temple;<sup>4</sup> and he may raise the necessary funds by mortgage.<sup>5</sup> But he may not, except distinctly for the benefit of the endowment, incumber it beyond his own life.<sup>6</sup> His position, so far as alienation is concerned, is analogous to that of the manager of an infant heir, or of a Hindu widow alienating ancestral property; and the question to be considered is, whether, looking to all the circumstances of the case, the alienation was a prudent and wise act in respect of the purposes for which he was shebait; and, in estimating the validity of a sale, it ought to be considered whether the purchasers satisfied themselves, as far as they could, that there was a fair and sufficient ground of necessity for the alienation.<sup>7</sup> The shebait may grant leases of the endowed lands;<sup>8</sup> and he can create derivative tenures and estates conformable to usage.<sup>9</sup> But a mohunt in charge of an endowment, with only a life-interest in the property, cannot create an interest superior to his own, or, except under the most extraordinary pressure, and for the distinct benefit of the endowment, bind his successors in office.<sup>1</sup> In a suit to set aside certain alienations of an ancestral mehal, on the ground that the mehal had been dedicated to the worship of an idol, it was contended for the defence, that the estate had not been so dedicated, and that, if it was, there was legal necessity for the alienation. The deeds of transfer contained recitals that the estate transferred was debuttur, that the temple was out of repair, and that the purchase-money was wanted to restore it. It was held, that the admissions in the deeds must be taken as a whole, and that, according to them, the sales were justifiable, even if the property were debuttur; and that, even if part only of the purchase-money was required for the repairs of the idol, as was represented to have been so required, and this was bond fide believed by the grantees, the deeds would not be wholly void by reason that some of the money was raised for another purpose.<sup>2</sup>

A plaintiff, who seeks to set aside an alienation of lands on the ground that they are dedicated in perpetuity to support the worship of an idol, must give strong and clear evidence of the endowment. The mere fact that the rents of a particular mehal have been applied for a considerable period to the worship of an idol, is not sufficient proof that the mehal is debuttur.<sup>3</sup>

Evidence of endowment to be given.

Even if a purchaser has notice on a sale of property avowedly debuttur, that the whole of the purchase-money is not required for the purposes of the endowment, but that part of it is to be expended on other objects, an action will not lie to set aside the sale altogether, since the purchaser would be entitled to be reimbursed so much of the money as has been legitimately advanced.<sup>4</sup>

How far
sale set aside.

Upon the principle that a trustee may not derive any benefit from the trust,<sup>5</sup> the trustees of endowed property cannot transfer it so as to gain any benefit to themselves, even though the transferee undertakes to continue the ceremonies.<sup>6</sup>

XII.Sale of turn of worship.

The right to the turn of worship of a Hindu idol cannot be sold in execution of a decree for the personal debt of the shebait. It might happen that the purchaser was of a different religion and not capable of performing the services, and the object of the endower in creating the endowment would be defeated.<sup>1</sup>

Succession to trusteeship.

When property is endowed for charitable or religious purposes, it is usual to appoint some person, who may be a female,<sup>2</sup> to manage the estate and to make provision for succession to the office. If no such provision is made, and there is no evidence of succession by any usage or custom, the heirs of the endower are entitled to the management. In the case of The elder widow of Raja Chutter Sein v. The younger widow of Raja Chutter Sein,<sup>3</sup> the Pundits of the Sudder Dewany Adawlut gave the following opinions on the question as to the right to manage debuttur property :—" Debuttur lands are not heritable property ; the management of them, alone, for religious purposes, devolves on the heirs of the person who made the endowment."<sup>4</sup> The principle is, that an estate given to a man simply without express words of inheritance, will, in the absence of a conflicting context, carry by Hindu law (as under the present state of the law it does by will in England) an estate of inheritance.<sup>5</sup>

Where a testator had made a bequest for charitable purposes, and had made no express provision for the management of the trust, except by directing that, in the event of his heirs failing to carry out his wishes in respect of the trust-fund, the Civil Court should take the fund and the management of the trust summarily into its own hands, it was held, that, in the absence of misconduct, the widow, and not the Collector, was the proper person to be appointed trustee.<sup>6</sup>

of endowed
property.

The right to the enjoyment of the endowed property passes with the office, and is not separable from it ; and if some particular member of a family is designated as the incumbent of the office, the other members of the family have no right to a division of the returns derived from the land.<sup>1</sup>

XII.

In some cases the members of the family may be entitled to manage in turns, and any infringement of this right can be redressed by a suit.<sup>2</sup> The Court should define the precise periods for which the parties are entitled.<sup>3</sup> A refusal to give up an idol, in consequence of which the person demanding it is prevented from performing his turn of worship on a specified date, gives the party aggrieved a right to sue for damages.<sup>4</sup>

worship.

The right to the exclusive worship of an idol is not in the nature of an interest in immoveable property, and a suit to establish such a right must be brought under Act XV of 1877, sched. ii, art. 120, within six years from the time when the right to sue accrued. A suit to establish a right to a turn of worship is one "to establish a periodically recurring right," and must be brought under art. 131 of the same Act within three years of the time when the plaintiff is first refused the enjoyment of the right.<sup>5</sup>

Limitation.

If the person creating the endowment has vested the management in several different persons, each of whom is to act in the management, and to be a check on the others, the managers appointed cannot assign over the right of management to any particular person, and so alter the nature of the trust.<sup>6</sup>

Management
vested in different persons.

The succession to muths, or religious endowments, must be regulated in each case by the nature of the endowment, and the rule of succession prescribed by the founder of the institution; and if this rule cannot be discovered from the original deed of gift or other documentary evidence, it must be proved in each case by showing what the usage has been on the occasion of each succession.<sup>7</sup>

XII.

Succession
where manager
celibacy.

Where the person appointed to manage an endowment is bound to celibacy, he is usually succeeded by one of his disciples, whom he may nominate in his own lifetime,<sup>1</sup> or by will.<sup>2</sup> But he cannot alter the succession of an endowment belonging to ascetics, by any act of his own in connection with the status under which he originally acquired the trust.<sup>3</sup> There are instances of muths in which the mohuntship descends to a personal heir of the deceased, and others in which the existing mohunt alone nominates his successor; but the ordinary rule is, that the muths of the same sect in a district are associated together—the mohunts of these acknowledging one of their number (who is for some reason pre-eminent) as a head; and on the occasion of the death of one, the others assemble to elect a successor out of the chelas or disciples of the deceased, if possible; or if there be none of them qualified, then from the chelas of another mohunt. After the election the chosen disciple is installed in the guddi of his predecessor.<sup>4</sup>

On a claim for the superintendence of an endowment no acknowledgment by any party can do away with the necessity of proof of due nomination according to the rules and usages of the endowment.<sup>5</sup>

In some cases one member of an order of ascetics who has been associated with a shebait succeeds to the office. The principle upon which such succession is allowed, is based entirely upon fellowship and personal association with that other, and a stranger, though of the same order, will be excluded.<sup>6</sup>

In the case of a mourosi muth, the investiture by the leading neighbouring mohunts at the Bandhara ceremony of one who cannot prove that he was actually appointed by the last mohunt, is not sufficient, in the absence of proof that he has a right to be so appointed as being senior chela of the last mohunt, to entitle him to succeed to the guddi.<sup>7</sup>

XII.

Among saniasis generally, no chela has a right as such to succeed to the property of his deceased guru. His right of succession depends upon his nomination by the deceased in his lifetime as his successor, which nomination is generally confirmed by the mohunts of the neighbourhood assembled together to perform the funeral obsequies of the deceased. Where a guru does not nominate his successor from among his chelas, such successor is elected and installed by the mohunts and principal persons of the sect in the neighbourhood, upon the occasion of the funeral obsequies of the deceased. Where, therefore, a chela sued for possession of a village belonging to his deceased guru, founding such suit on his right of succession as chela, without alleging that he had been nominated by the deceased as his successor and confirmed, or that he had been elected as successor to the deceased, the suit was held not to be maintainable.<sup>2</sup>

If a shebait dies without having appointed a successor, the managership reverts to the heirs of the person who endowed the property.<sup>3</sup> Reversion.

Unless the founder has reserved to himself some special powers of supervision, removal, or nomination, neither he nor his heirs have any greater power in this respect than any other person who is interested in the trust.<sup>4</sup> Removal of
trustee.

Where, by his will, the mohunt of an akra, or religious endowment, appointed A to be the malik of the properties comprised in the endowment, and to receive the dues and pay the debts, and to do everything necessarily connected therewith; and provided that if any act was done prejudicial to any of those purposes or to any property set apart therefor, or contrary to the Hindu practice and religion or usages, the property should vest in such disciple of his who should be competent and virtuous, and A obtained probate of the will and entered upon the properties mentioned in it,—it was held, that the Court had no power to revoke the probate under s. 234 of the Removal of mohunt.

The chief elements of wuqf are special words declaratory of the appropriation, and a proper motive cause ; and where the declaration is made in a solemnly published document, the wuqf is completed.<sup>1</sup> The primary object for which lands are endowed, and which are the objects which all Mahomedans have in view in endowing lands, are to support a mosque and to defray the expenses of the worship conducted in it.<sup>2</sup> Elements of wuqf.

Wuqf implies the relinquishing the proprietary right in any article of property, such as lands, tenements, and the rest : and consecrating it in such manner to the service of God, that it may be of benefit to men, provided always, that the thing appropriated be, at the time of appropriation, the property of the appropriator,<sup>3</sup> even if it consists of an undefined share in an estate. The endowment will in such a case be valid to the extent of the share of the donor when ascertained.<sup>4</sup> Thus, a general dedication of lands for the purpose of a cemetery establishes a wuqf, and excepts it from descent to the heirs.<sup>5</sup> But a grant to an individual in his own right, and for the purpose of furnishing him with the means of subsistence, do not constitute a wuqf.<sup>6</sup> So, apparently, a wuqf cannot be created for the purpose merely of conferring a perpetual and inalienable estate on a particular family, without any ultimate limitation to the use of the poor, or some inextinguishable class of beneficiaries.<sup>7</sup> Creation of.

In Mahomed Hamidulla Khan v. Lotful Huq,<sup>8</sup> a Mahomedan settled a portion of his property as follows : " I have made wuqf of the four annas in favour of my daughter and her descendants, as also her descendants' descendants how low so ever, and when they no longer exist, then in favour of the poor and needy ;" and it was held, that this did not LECTURE XII. create a valid wuqf. But this case appears to conflict with the other authorities.

Evidence of appropriation.

No property can be considered as wuqf unless it be satisfactorily established that it has been specially so appropriated;<sup>1</sup> for instance, the payment of the expenses of a mosque out of the rents of a particular property is not in itself proof of an endowment.<sup>2</sup> It is not necessary that the grant should be in express terms for the benefit of the endowment, provided that the nature of the tenure be inferrible from the general contents of the grant.<sup>3</sup>

Wuqf to take effect after grantor's death.

The owner of lands may make an endowment settling lands upon himself for life, and after his death, for the support of the poor. In such a case the instrument operates as a will, and is only valid to the extent of one-third of the donor's property.<sup>4</sup> The main object of the Mahomedan law is, that the profits of the land endowed should be endowed for a purpose which always remains in existence. The poor are always with us, and therefore a man making an endowment, and enjoying the profits during his lifetime, to go to the poor after his death, does not make an endowment for uncertain or non-existent objects.<sup>5</sup>

Requisites to valid wuqf.

In Mahomed Hamidulla Khan v. Lotful Huq<sup>6</sup> it was held, that it is necessary among Sunnis, in order to validate a wuqf, that the donor should reduce himself to a state of absolute poverty. This is, however, it is submitted, inconsistent with many other rulings.

To constitute a valid wuqf according to Shiah law, it must be absolute and unconditional, and possession must be given of the thing granted. Thus, where a Mahomedan lady executed a deed conveying her property, on trust, for religious purposes, reserving for herself for life two-thirds of the income derivable from the property, and only making an absolute and unconditional grant of the rest for the purposes of the trust, it was held, that, under the Shiah law, the deed must be considered invalid with respect to the portion of the income reserved by the grantor to herself for life; but as to the rest that the deed operated as a good and valid grant.<sup>7</sup>

According to Mahomedan law, it is not necessary, in order to constitute a valid endowment for religious or charitable purposes, that the word 'wuqf' should be used in the grant, if from the general nature of the grant it can be inferred that the property is to be so appropriated.<sup>1</sup> And conversely, the use of the word 'wuqf' is not of itself sufficient to create an endowment. There must be a dedication of the property solely to the worship of God, or to religious or charitable purposes. A Mahomedan cannot, therefore, by using the term wuqf effect a settlement of property upon himself and his descendants which will keep such property inalienable by himself and his descendants for ever.<sup>2</sup>

If property has been dedicated for religious or charitable purposes, the use of the words 'inam,' or 'altamgha,' in the grant, will not confer an absolute proprietary right in the grantee. By a royal firman granted by Mahomed Firooksir, one lac of dams from a certain parganna were endowed and bestowed for the purpose of defraying the expenses of the khankah (a religious establishment) of Sheikh Rubeer, as an altamgha grant for him to manage and control and to descend to his heirs in succession from remove to remove. On the petition of Sheikh Gholam, the grandson of Sheikh Rubeer, who had succeeded to the office of sifiada-nashin of the khankah, Mahomed Shah granted a perwannah, enjoining that the lac of dams should be considered as an altamgha-inam for the purpose of being appropriated to the charges of the travellers to and from the khankah to descend to the offspring in succession; and a similar perwannah was granted on the petition of Sheikh Kaim-ood-deen, the son of Sheikh Gholam, after the death of his father. By a subsequent grant by Shah Alam, two lacs of dams were granted as an altamgha-inam to Sheikh Kaim-ood-deen for the purpose of the frequenters to and from him, and all ranks were enjoined "always to maintain and uphold the august order, and to relinquish the aforesaid dams to them to descend to the offspring in succession to be enjoyed by them" free from all Government and revenue charges. In 1807 and 1810, Shah Shum-sood-deen, the then sifiada nashin, alienated part of the property comprised in these grants, and died in 1810,

LECTURE XII. leaving the plaintiff, his son, then a minor. In 1829, the plaintiff was appointed by the Government to be mutawalli and sifiada-nashin of the establishment. In a suit instituted by him in 1822 to recover the property alienated by his father, it was held, that, notwithstanding the use of the terms 'inam' and 'altamgha' in the royal grants, and the mention therein of the persons on whose petitions the grants were made, yet these grants having been made for the purpose of maintaining a charitable institution, the persons named were not to be considered the proprietors; the establishment of the khankah was the real donee, and the persons named were only mutawallis of the khankah, who as such would have no right to alienate, and therefore that the alienation by Shumsooddeen was illegal.<sup>1</sup>

It is not necessary that the endowment should be in writing, or that the property should be delivered over. A verbal declaration of the intention to create an endowment is sufficient, if in the presence of witnesses.<sup>2</sup> Although the witnesses to the fact depose vaguely, yet their evidence, if corroborated by circumstances, is legally sufficient.<sup>3</sup>

Undue influence.

A wuqf will not be valid if the donor was subjected to any undue influence, or was not aware of the nature of the transaction. Thus, where an alleged endower was shown to be an illiterate purdanashin lady, and she denied on oath that, in executing the wuqfnama, she had any intention of creating an absolute wuqf, or that she understood the effect of the deed when she executed it, it was held, that the onus was on the persons who sought to remove her from the office, to show that she was fully aware of the character of the document and its legal effect, and that she had proper professional advice at the time of its execution, and, in the absence of such proof, that the deed was not binding on her.<sup>4</sup>

Endowment subject to mortgage.

The fact that a mortgage is in existence over property at the time when it is set apart as an endowment, does not invalidate the endowment, which will be considered as being subject to the mortgage. If, after a mortgage, the mortgagor endows the land, and dies leaving sufficient assets, his heirs are bound to apply those assets to the redemption of the mortgage, so that the endowment may take effect freed from the mortgage, by the application of other assets of the endower. But, if necessary, the mortgagee may enforce the mortgage by sale of the land, and the endowment will be rendered void as against the heirs of the endower; as against whom the surplus sale-proceeds will be subject to the endowment.<sup>1</sup> So, the mere charge upon the profits of the estate of certain items which must in course of time necessarily cease, and which, after they lapse, will leave the whole profits intact for the original purposes for which the endowment was made, does not render the endowment invalid under the Mahomedan law.<sup>2</sup>

If property has been given over for religious and charitable purposes and the trust is complete, the wuqf cannot be affected by revocation, or by the bad conduct of those responsible for the carrying out of the trusts.<sup>3</sup>

According to Shiah law, the donor may recover back the property from the trustee, if at the time of the creation of the trust he has reserved the right to do so in express terms.<sup>4</sup>

As a general rule, it may be stated that the private alienation, temporary or absolute, by mortgage or otherwise, of wuqf lands, even though for the repair or other benefit of the endowment, is illegal according to the Mahomedan law;<sup>5</sup> and if endowed property descends as such to the widow of the endower as mutawalli, it cannot be sold in satisfaction of a claim against the estate of the endower.<sup>6</sup> The authorities disagree as to whether the appropriator's right continues or is extinguished; but they agree that it cannot be disposed of by gift or sale, and also that inheritance does not obtain in respect of it.<sup>7</sup>

LECTURE XII. The fact that the land is endowed must be proved; a mere nominal endowment will not prevent alienation.<sup>1</sup>

endowment.

Alienation subject to
trust.

Where the whole of the profits of land are not devoted to religious purposes, but the land is heritable property burdened with a trust,—for example, the keeping up of a saint's tomb,—it may be alienated subject to the trust.<sup>2</sup>

Mortgage
by local custom.

By local custom in the Broach District, wuqf land may be mortgaged, although the practice is contrary to Mahomedan law; for, by s. 26 of Reg. IV of 1827, the usage of a district in which a suit may arise takes precedence over the law of the defendant in the determination of civil suits.<sup>3</sup>

Lease of
perty.

If an endowment be wholly wuqf, a mutawalli is incapable of granting a lease extending beyond the period of his own life. If, however, the office is hereditary, and the mutawalli has a beneficial interest in the endowment, the property is looked upon as an heritable estate burdened with certain trusts, the proprietary right of which is vested in the mutawalli and his heirs, and he can exercise the right possessed by other proprietors, of granting leases, even in perpetuity.<sup>4</sup>

Where ryots holding land had been in the habit of transferring their holdings with the consent of the mutawallis, it was held, that a mutawalli who considered the practice to be illegal, was not justified in ousting a transferee, but should have taken his legal remedy by action.<sup>5</sup>

trust.

The trustee of an endowment has not, as such, the power of transferring his trust to any other person, and where a trustee is empowered to appoint another trustee to act for him, he cannot transfer the right of exercising that power to another or others.<sup>6</sup> An assignment or bequest of the trust by the superintendent to his sons, on his deathbed, is good, but not an assignment made during health, unless he obtained it himself with such power.<sup>7</sup>

In dealing with the mutawalli of an endowment, it is not necessary for the purchaser to look further than to the power of the mutawalli under his deed of trust. If the deed gives him power and discretion to make a sale, it is not a matter of concern to the purchaser whether that power or discretion is judiciously exercised or not.<sup>1</sup>

XII.Purchaser
from trustee.

Trustees of an endowment may, if they commit a breach of trust in respect of the trust-property, be made to account to the persons interested in the endowment (see Act XX of 1863, post, Appendix). But the fact that trustees have failed to carry out the trusts, will not render the endowment invalid, and cause the property to revert to the heirs of the grantor.<sup>2</sup>

trust.

Where a mutawalli was proved to have been guilty of waste, the High Court ordered him to file in Court every six months a true and complete account of his income, expenditure, and dealings with the property belonging to the endowment.<sup>3</sup>

If the superintendent of an endowment misconducts himself, he may, according to the Mahomedan law, be removed by the ruling power (see Act XX of 1863, post Appendix); and this is sufficient to protect the objects for which the trust was created.<sup>4</sup> But this rule does not apply to the case of a trustee who has an hereditary proprietary right vested in him.<sup>5</sup> In some instances the donor has the power of removing the superintendent. But in order that such power may be exercised, it must have been specially reserved at the time of endowment.<sup>6</sup> Where a plaintiff sued to recover possession of certain property as wuqf property, alleging misconduct on the part of the mutawalli in selling a portion of the property, but the plaintiff did not state or prove, that he was entitled to partake of the benefit of the endowment, nor did he show that he was the heir, or even a near relative, of the person who made the endowment,—it was held, that the utmost that he had a right to do as a descendant of the endower

The appropriator of land for religious or charitable purposes can confer the office of superintendent on another at any time;<sup>2</sup> and a trustee may appoint a manager, but such appointment is not effectual beyond the incumbency of the appointor.<sup>3</sup>

Office of trustee.

When property is appropriated for religious or charitable purposes, it is vested in some person or persons whose duty it is to preserve it and to carry out the trusts created. According to both Sunni and Shiah law, the donor has a right to reserve the superintendence of the wuqf to himself, or to appoint some one else.<sup>4</sup> The right to the income of land endowed for such purposes is inseparable from the office for the support of which the land was granted,<sup>5</sup> and cannot be claimed by the grantor's heirs. The fact that a person is a Shiah does not disqualify him for the supervision of a wuqf made by a Sunni.<sup>6</sup>

Female may be mutawalli;

A female may act as mutawalli. She may manage the temporal affairs of the endowment, but not the spiritual affairs connected with it, the management of the latter requiring peculiar personal qualifications. These duties she may discharge by proxy.<sup>7</sup>

Succession to the office.

When property is devoted to religious or charitable purposes, it is usual for the appropriator to lay down rules for succession to the office of trustee, and upon these rules, whether they are in writing, or have to be inferred from evidence of usage, the question of succession depends.<sup>8</sup> Should no rules be laid down, the power of appointing a trustee is vested in the appropriator during his life, and upon his death, it is vested in his executor; or should he have left no executor, in the magistrate and sovereign power,—that is to say, in the Court.<sup>1</sup> When the donor has specified the class from which the manager is to be selected, he cannot discharge his own trust-deed and name a person not answering the proper description. He is bound by the provisions of the deed, and the appropriator's right of nomination of the person to succeed to the management on his death must be confined to the class mentioned in the deed.<sup>2</sup>

In Agha Mahomed Eusoof Moosadee v. Abdool Hossein Khan<sup>3</sup> it was held, that the power of appointment of a superintendent of a mosque, if not provided for by some special rule in a deed of endowment, must be governed by the ordinary rule of Mahomedan law, under which, in the absence of all provision on the subject in the deed of endowment, a superintendent is authorized on his death-bed to appoint a successor, though the appropriator has not given him a general permission. And in Peet Koonwar v. Chutter Dharee Singh,<sup>4</sup> that when the mutawalli of an endowment dies without nominating a successor, the management must revert to the heirs of the person who endowed the property.

Where, so far as the will of a founder could be ascertained from the usage of former days, it seemed to authorize a mode of succession originating in an appointment by the incumbent of a successor, it was held, that the Court would not be authorized to find in favour of any rule of succession by primogeniture, solely from the circumstance that the persons appointed were usually the elder sons.<sup>5</sup>

A suit to recover property alleged to be wuqf belongs not to the heirs or descendants of the settlor, but to the mutawallis jointly.<sup>6</sup> But a person who has been convicted of having misappropriated wuqf property cannot obtain the assistance of the Court to recover the property in order to enable him to exercise the office of mutawalli.<sup>7</sup> When

ACT XXI OF 1860.

WHEREAS it is expedient that provision should be made for improving the legal condition of Societies established for the promotion of literature, science, or the fine arts, or for the diffusion of useful knowledge, or for charitable purposes ; It is enacted as follows :

I. Any seven or more persons associated for any literary, scientific, or charitable purpose, or for any such purpose as is described in section XX of this Act, may, by subscribing their names to a memorandum of association, and filing the same with the Registrar of Joint Stock Companies under Act XIX of 1857, form themselves into a society under this Act.

II. The memorandum of association shall contain the following things (that is to say) :—

The name of the society.

The objects of the society.

The names, addresses, and occupations of the governors, council, directors, committee, or other governing body to whom, by the rules of the society, the management of its affairs is entrusted. A copy of the rules and regulations of the society, certified to be a correct copy by not less than three of the members of the governing body, shall be filed with the memorandum of association.

III. Upon such memorandum and certified copy being filed, the Registrar shall certify under his hand that the society is registered under this Registration.

APPDX. Act There shall be paid to the Registrar, for every such registration, a fee of fifty rupees, or such smaller fee as the Governor General of India in Council may, from time to time, direct ; and all fees so paid shall be accounted for to the Government.

IV. Once in every year, on or before the 14th day succeeding the day on which, according to the rules of the society, the annual general meeting of the society is held, or if the rules do not provide for an annual general meeting, in the month of January, a list shall be filed with the Registrar of Joint Stock Companies, of the names, addresses, and occupations of the governors, council, directors, committee, or other governing body then entrusted with the management of the affairs of the society.

V. The property, moveable and immoveable, belonging to a society registered under this Act, if not vested in trustees, shall be deemed to be vested, for the time being, in the governing body of such society, and in all proceedings, civil and criminal, may be described as the property of the governing body of such society by their proper title.

VI. Every society registered under this Act may sue or be sued in the name of the president, chairman, or principal secretary, or trustees, as shall be determined by the rules and regulations of the society ; and in default of such determination, in the name of such person as shall be appointed by the governing body for the occasion : provided that it shall be competent for any person having a claim or demand against the society, to sue the president, or chairman, or principal secretary, or the trustees thereof, if on application to the governing body some other officer or person be not nominated to be the defendant.

VII. No suit or proceeding in any Civil Court shall abate or discontinue by reason of the person, by or against whom such suits or proceedings shall have been brought or continued, dying, or ceasing to fill the character in the name whereof he shall have sued, or been sued, but the same suit or proceeding shall be continued in the name of or against the successor of such person.

VIII. If a judgment shall be recovered against the person or officer named on behalf of the society, such judgment shall not be put in force against the property, moveable or immoveable, or against the body of such person or officer, but against the property of the society. The application for execution shall set forth the judgment, the fact of the party against whom it shall have been recovered having sued or having been sued, as the case may be, on behalf of the society only, and shall require to have the judgment enforced against the property of the society.

IX. Whenever by any bye-law duly made in accordance with the rules and regulations of the society, or if the rules do not provide for the making of bye-laws, by any bye-law made at a general meeting of the members of the society convened for the purpose (for the making of which the concurrent votes of three-fifths of the members present at such meeting shall be necessary), any pecuniary penalty is imposed for the breach of any rules or bye-law of the society, such penalty, when accrued, may be recovered in any Court having jurisdiction where the defendant shall reside, or the society shall be situate, as the governing body thereof shall deem expedient.

X. Any member who may be in arrear of a subscription which, according to the rules of the society, he is bound to pay, or who shall possess himself of, or detain, any property of the society, in a manner or for a time contrary to such rules, or shall injure or destroy any property of the society, may be sued for such arrear or for the damage accruing from such detention, injury, or destruction of property in the manner hereinbefore provided. But if the defendant shall be successful in any suit or other proceeding brought against him at the instance of the society, and shall be adjudged to recover his costs, he may elect to proceed to recover the same from the officer in whose name the suit shall be brought, or from the society; and in the latter case shall have process against the property of the said society in the manner above described.

XI. Any member of the society, who shall steal, purloin, or embezzle any money or other property, or wilfully and maliciously destroy or injure any property of such society, or shall forge any deed, bond, security for money, receipt or other instrument, whereby the funds of the society may be exposed to loss, shall be subject to the same prosecution, and, if convicted, shall be liable to be punished in like manner, as any person not a member would be subject and liable to in respect of the like offence.

XII. Whenever it shall appear to the governing body of any society registered under this Act, which has been established for any particular purpose or purposes, that it is advisable to alter, extend, or abridge such purpose to or for other purposes within the meaning of this Act, or to amalgamate such society, either wholly or partially, with any

APPDX. — other society, such governing body may submit the proposition to the members of the society in a written or printed report, and may convene a special meeting for the consideration thereof according to the regulations of the society; but no such proposition shall be carried into effect unless such report shall have been delivered or sent by post to every member of the society ten days previous to the special meeting convened by the governing body for the consideration thereof, nor unless such proposition shall have been agreed to by the votes of three-fifths of the members delivered in person or by proxy, and confirmed by the votes of three-fifths of the members present at a second special meeting convened by the governing body at an interval of one month after the former meeting.

XIII. Any number not less than three-fifths of the members of any society may determine that it shall be dissolved, and thereupon it shall be dissolved forthwith, or at the time then agreed upon, and all necessary steps shall be taken for the disposal and settlement of the property of the society, its claims and liabilities, according to the rules of the said society applicable thereto, if any, and, if not, then as the governing body shall find expedient; provided that, in the event of any dispute arising among the said governing body or the members of the society, the adjustment of its affairs shall be referred to the principal Court of original civil jurisdiction of the district in which the chief building of the society is situate; and the Court shall make such order in the matter as it shall deem requisite. Provided that no society shall be dissolved unless three-fifths of the members shall have expressed a wish for such dissolution by their votes delivered in person, or by proxy, at a general meeting convened for the purpose. Provided that, whenever the Government is a member of, or a contributor to, or otherwise interested in any society registered under this Act, such society shall not be dissolved without the consent of Government.

XIV. If, upon the dissolution of any society registered under this Act, there shall remain, after the satisfaction of all its debts and liabilities, any property whatsoever, the same shall not be paid to or distributed among the members of the said society or any of them, but shall be given to some other society, to be determined by the votes of not less than three-fifths of the members present, personally or by proxy, at the time of the dissolution, or in default thereof by such Court as aforesaid. Provided, however, that this clause shall not apply to any society which shall have been founded or established by the contributions of shareholders in the nature of a joint stock company.

XV. For the purposes of this Act, a member of a society shall be a person, who, having been admitted therein according to the rules and regulations thereof, shall have paid his subscription, or shall have signed the roll or list of members thereof, and shall not have resigned in accordance with such rules and regulations; but in all proceedings under this Act, no person shall be entitled to vote or be counted as a member whose subscription at the time shall have been in arrear for a period exceeding three months.

XVI. The governing body of the society shall be the governors, council, directors, committee, trustees, or other body to whom, by the rules and regulations of the society, the management of its affairs is entrusted.

XVII. Any company or society established for a literary, scientific, or charitable purpose, and registered under Act XLIII of 1850, or any such society established and constituted previously to the passing of this Act, but not registered under the said Act XLIII of 1850, may, at any time hereafter, be registered as a society under this Act, subject to the proviso that no such company or society shall be registered under this Act, unless an assent to its being so registered has been given by three-fifths of the members present personally or by proxy at some general meeting convened for that purpose by the governing body. In the case of a company or society registered under Act XLIII of 1850, the directors shall be deemed to be such governing body. In the case of a society not so registered, if no such body shall have been constituted on the establishment of the society, it shall be competent for the members thereof, upon due notice, to create for itself a governing body to act for the society thenceforth.

XVIII. In order to any such society as is mentioned in the last preceding section obtaining registry under this Act, it shall be sufficient that the governing body file with the Registrar of Joint Stock Companies, under Act XIX of 1857, a memorandum showing the name of the society, the objects of the society, and the names, addresses, and occupations of the governing body, together with a copy of the rules and regulations of the society certified as provided in section II, and a copy of the report of the proceedings of the general meeting at which the registration was resolved on.

XIX. Any person may inspect all documents filed with the Registrar under this Act on payment of a fee of one rupee for each inspection; and any person may require a copy or extract

APPDX. of any document or any part of any document to be certified by ————— the Registrar, on payment of two annas for Certified copies. every hundred words of such copy or extract; and such certified copy shall be prima facie evidence of the matters therein contained in all legal proceedings whatever.

XX. The following societies may be registered under this Act:
 To what societies the charitable societies; the military orphan Act shall apply. funds or societies established at the several presidencies of India; societies established for the promotion of science, literature, or the fine arts; for instruction, the diffusion of useful knowledge, the foundation or maintenance of libraries or reading-rooms for general use among the

RELIGIOUS ENDOWMENTS.

ACT XX OF 1863.

*An Act to enable the Government to divest itself of the manage-

WHEREAS it is expedient to relieve the Boards of Revenue and the Local Agents in the Presidency of Preamble. Fort William in Bengal, and the Presidency of Fort Saint George, from the duties imposed on them by Regulation XIX of 1810 of the Bengal Code (for the due appropriation of the rents and produce of lands granted for the support of mosques, Hindu temples, colleges, and other purposes; for the maintenance and repair of bridges, serays, kuttras, and other public buildings; and for the custody and disposal of nuzzool property or escheats) and Regulation VII of 1817 of the Madras Code (for the due appropriation of the rents and produce of lands granted for the support of mosques, Hindoo temples, and colleges, or other public purposes; for the maintenance and repair of bridges, choultries, or chuttrums, and other public buildings; and for the custody and disposal of escheats), so far as those duties embrace the superintendence of lands granted for the support of mosques or Hindoo temples, and for other religious uses,—the appropriation of endowments made for the maintenance of such religious establishments,—the repair and preservation of buildings connected therewith, and the appointment of trustees or managers thereof, or involve any connexion with the management of such religious establishments; and whereas it is expedient for that purpose to repeal so much of Regulation XIX of 1810 of the Bengal Code, and Regulation VII of 1817 of the Madras Code, as relate to endowments for the support of mosques, Hindoo temples, or other religious purposes; It is enacted as follows:—

I. So much of Regulation XIX of 1810 of the Bengal Code, and so much of Regulation VII of 1817 of the Madras Code, as relate to endowments for the support of mosques, Hindoo temples, or other religious purposes, are repealed.

II. In this Act words importing the singular number shall include the plural, and words importing the plural number shall include the singular.

Gender. Words importing the masculine gender shall include females.

The words 'Civil Court' and 'Court' shall mean the principal Court of original civil jurisdiction in the District in which the mosque, temple, or religious establishment is situate, relating to which, or to the endowment whereof, any suit shall be instituted or application made under the provisions of this Act.

III. In the case of every mosque, temple, or other religious establishment to which the provisions of either of the Regulations specified in section I are applicable, and the nomination of the trustee, manager, or superintendent whereof, at the time of the passing of this Act, is vested in, or may be exercised by, the Government or any public officer, or in which the nomination of such trustee, manager, or superintendent shall be subject to the confirmation of the Government or any public officer, the Local Government shall, as soon as possible after the passing of this Act, make special provision as hereinafter provided.

The words "trustee, manager, or superintendent of a mosque," etc., mentioned in this Act, mean the trustee, manager, or superintendent of a mosque, etc., to which the provisions of the Act are applicable, not the trustee, etc., of any mosque; and such persons are those to whom the provisions of the Regulations mentioned in s. 1 were applicable. The mosques, etc., to which the provisions of those Regulations were applicable, were mosques for the support of which endowments had been granted in land by the Government of the country or by individuals; and the mosques, etc., to which the provisions of this Act apply are, not any mosque, etc., but any mosque for the support of which such endowments have been made—Jan Ali v. Ram Nath Mundul, Reg. App. No. 149 of 1880, I. L. R., 8 Calc., January number.

Where the tomb of a reputed saint became a place of pilgrimage, and an endowment was made for the maintenance of the shrine and for the performance of certain religious ceremonies, and it appeared that there was a practice on the part of the proprietors and the managers of the institution to divide among themselves the residue of the income, and to dispose by way of sale or mortgage of the share enjoyed by them,—it was held, that this was a religious institution within the meaning of the Act.—Fakurudin Sahib v. Akeni Sahib, I. L. R., 2 Mad., 197.

APPDX. A committee appointed under this Act have power to dismiss trustees or superintendents of temples described in this section, without having recourse to a civil suit; but such powers can only be exercised on good and sufficient grounds.—Chinna Rangaiyengar v. Subbraya Mudali, 3 Mad. H. C. R., 334. Where no such grounds appeared, a suit, brought by the person who had been appointed by the committee as superintendent in place of the defendants for the recovery of the temple and the property belonging to it, was dismissed.—Ibid.

IV. In the case of every such mosque, temple, or other religious establishment which, at the time of the passing of this Act, shall be under the management of any trustee, manager, or superintendent, whose nomination shall not vest in, nor be exercised by, nor be subject to the confirmation of the Government or any public officer, the Local Government shall, as soon as possible after the passing of this Act, transfer to such trustee, manager, or superintendent all the landed or other property which, at the time of the passing of this Act, shall be under the superintendence or in the possession of the Board of Revenue or any local agent, and belonging to such mosque, temple, or other religious establishment, except such property as is hereinafter provided; and the powers and responsibilities of the Board of Revenue and the local agents, in respect to such mosque, temple, or other religious establishment, and to all land and other property so transferred, except as regards acts done and liabilities incurred by the said Board of Revenue, or any local agent, previous to such transfer, shall cease and determine.

Where the manager of endowed property had been ejected by the Collector under Regulation VII of 1817, it was held, that, on the passing of this Act, the manager became entitled by virtue of this section to the restoration of the endowment.—Jusagheri Gosamiar v. The Collector of Tanjore, 5 Mad. H. C. R., 334.

In 1849 the Board of Revenue interfered in the affairs of a temple. It did not appear whether any transfer of property had been made under this section; but, in 1865, the Judge of Patna appointed a manager of the temple. It was held, that the right of Government officers to control the affairs of the temple had been sufficiently proved.—Dharm Singh v. Kissen Singh, I. L. R., 7 Calc. 767.

V. Whenever from any cause a vacancy shall occur in the office of any trustee, manager, or superintendent, to whom any property shall have been transferred under the last preceding section, and any dispute shall arise respecting the right of succession to such office, it shall be lawful for any person interested in the mosque, temple, or religious establishment to which such property shall belong, or in the performance of the worship or of the service thereof, or the trusts relating thereto, to apply to the Civil Court to appoint a manager of such mosque, temple, or other religious establishment, and thereupon such Court may appoint such manager, to act until some other person shall by suit have established his right of succession to such office. The manager so appointed by the Civil Court shall have, and shall exercise, all the powers which, under this or any other Act, the former trustee, manager, or superintendent, in whose place such manager is appointed by the Court, had or could exercise, in relation to such mosque, temple, or religious establishment, or the property belonging thereto.

APPDX.

Where an application by a petitioner under this section to be appointed manager of a religious endowment was rejected by the Judge after hearing both sides, on the ground that there had been no transfer of the property by the Local Government under s. 4, the Court refused to interfere under cl. 15 of the Charter, holding, that the Judge had not declined to accept jurisdiction in the case, and that he was right in refusing to accept the jurisdiction vested in him by this section.—Khajah Ashruf Hossain v. M. S. Hazara Begum, 18 W. R., 396.

VI. The rights, powers, and responsibilities of every trustee, manager, or superintendent, to whom the land and other property of any mosque, temple, or other religious establishment is transferred in the manner prescribed in section IV of this Act, as well as the conditions of their appointment, election, and removal, shall be the same as if this Act had not been passed, except in respect of the liability to be sued under this Act, and except in respect of the authority of the Board of Revenue and local agents, given by the Regulations hereby repealed, over such mosque, temple, or religious establishment, and over such trustee, manager, or superintendent, which authority is hereby determined and repealed. All the powers which might be exercised by any Board, or local agent, for the recovery of the rent of land or other property transferred under the said section IV of this Act, may, from the date of such transfer, be exercised by any trustee, manager, or superintendent to whom such transfer is made.

VII. In all cases described in section III of this Act, the Local Government shall once for all appoint one or more committees in every Division or District, to take the place, and to exercise the powers, of the Board of Revenue and the local agents under the Regulations hereby repealed. Such committee shall consist of three or more persons, and shall perform all the duties imposed on such Board and local agents, except in respect of any property which is specially provided for under section XXI of this Act.

A district committee has no right to call for accounts from the trustees of temples which are within s. 4.—Venkatabalakrishna Chettiyar v. Kaliya Naramaiyengar, 5 Mad. H. C. R., 48; Ramiengar v. Gnanaambanda Pandarasannada, ib., 53.

APPDX.

VIII. The members of the said committee shall be appointed from among persons professing the religion for the purposes of which the mosque, temple, or other religious establishment was founded, or is now maintained, and in accordance, so far as can be ascertained, with the general wishes of those who are interested in the maintenance of such mosque, temple, or other religious establishment. The appointment of the committee shall be notified in the official Gazette. In order to ascertain the general wishes of such persons in respect of such appointment, the Local Government may cause an election to be held, under such rules (not consistent with the provisions of this Act) as shall be framed by such Local Government.

IX. Every member of a committee appointed as above shall hold his office for life, unless removed for misconduct or unfitness, and no such member shall be removed except by an order of the Civil Court as hereinafter provided.

X. Whenever any vacancy shall occur among the members of a committee appointed as above, a new member shall be elected to fill the vacancy by the persons interested as above provided. The remaining members of the committee shall, as soon as possible, give public notice of such vacancy, and shall fix a day, which shall not be later than three months from the date of such vacancy, for an election of a new member by the persons interested as above provided, under rules for elections which shall be framed by the Local Government, and whoever shall be then elected, under the said rules, shall be a member of the committee to fill such vacancy. If any vacancy as aforesaid shall not be filled up by such election as aforesaid within three months after it has occurred, the Civil Court, on the application of any person whatever, may appoint a person to fill the vacancy, or may order that the vacancy be forthwith filled up by the remaining members of the committee, with which order it shall then be the duty of such remaining members to comply; and if this order be not complied with, the Civil Court may appoint a member to fill the said vacancy.

XI. No member of a committee appointed under this Act shall be capable of being, or shall act, also as a trustee, manager, or superintendent of the mosque, temple, or other religious establishment, for the management of which such committee shall have been appointed.

Provision as to qualifications for member of such committee.

Every member to be appointed for life, unless removed for misconduct, &c.

Provision for filling up vacancies.

No member of a committee to be trustee, &c., of the mosque, &c., under charge of such committee.

APPDX.

XII. Immediately on the appointment of a committee, as above provided, for the superintendence of

On appointment of committee, Board and local agents to transfer property.

any such mosque, temple, or religious establishment, and for the management of its affairs, the Board of Revenue, or the local agents acting under the authority of the said Board, shall transfer to such committee all landed or other property which at the time of appointment shall be under the superintendence or in the possession of the said Board or local agents and belonging to the said religious establishment, except as is hereinafter provided for, and thereupon the powers and responsibilities of the Board and the local agents in respect to such mosque, temple, or religious establishment, and to all land and other property so transferred, except as above, and except as regards acts done and liabilities incurred by the said Board or agents previous to such transfer, shall cease and determine. All the powers which might be exercised by any Board or local agent for the recovery of the rent of land or other property transferred under this section, may, from the date of such transfer, be exercised by such committee to whom such transfer is made.

XIII. It shall be the duty of every trustee, manager, and superintendent of a mosque, temple, or religious establishment, to which the provisions of this Act shall apply, to keep regular accounts of his receipts and disbursements in respect of the endowments and expenses of such mosque, temple, or other religious establishment; and it shall be the duty of every committee of management, appointed or acting under the authority of this Act, to require from every trustee, manager, and superintendent of such mosque, temple, or other religious establishment the production of such regular accounts of such receipts and disbursements at least once in every year, and every such committee of management shall themselves keep such accounts thereof.

XIV. Any person or persons interested in any mosque, temple, or religious establishment, or in the performance of the worship, or of the service thereof, or the trusts relating thereto, may, without joining as plaintiff any of the other persons interested therein, sue before the Civil Court the trustee, manager, or superintendent of such mosque, temple, or religious establishment, or the member of any committee appointed under this Act, for any misfeasance, breach of trust, or neglect of duty, committed by such trustee, manager, superintendent, or member of such committee, in respect of the trusts vested in or confided to them, respectively, and the Civil Court may direct the specific performance of any act by such trustee, manager, superintendent, or member of

APPDX. a committee, and may decree damages and costs against such trustee, manager, superintendent, or member of a committee, and may also direct the removal of such trustee, manager, superintendent, or member of a committee.

This section is generally applicable to all religious endowments, and while it in one sense restrains the ordinary Courts from dealing with cases against trustees of religious endowments, it gives special facilities for suits in the principal Civil Court of the district by any of the persons mentioned in these endowments.—Dhurm Singh v. Kissen Singh, I. L. R., 7 Calc., 767.

Under s. 15 of Reg. XIX of 1810, it was decided that a curator, removed by the Board of Revenue on the ground of misconduct, might bring an action to try the sufficiency of that ground.—Wasik Ali Khan v. The Government, 5 Sel., 370; 6 Ibid, 130.

In a suit by two of the worshippers at a certain mosque, instituted, after having obtained the sanction of the Advocate-General under s. 539 of the Civil Procedure Code, against the mutawalli of the mosque, and two other persons to whom the mutawalli had mortgaged part of the endowed property to secure the repayment of a loan, it appeared that one of the mortgagees had sold some of the wuqf property in execution of a decree which he had obtained upon his mortgage, and the property had been purchased by the other mortgagees. The plaintiffs prayed that the property purchased might be declared to be wuqf; that the sale in execution might be declared to be invalid; that a mutawalli might be appointed by the Court; and that the costs of doing the acts of the wuqf might be defrayed from the profits of the property belonging to the endowment. It was held, that so far as regarded that portion of the prayer as fell within the provisions of s. 539 of the Code, the plaintiffs were not entitled to sue, as they were not "persons having a direct interest in the trust" within the meaning of that section, and that the suit should have been instituted under this section after sanction obtained under s. 18; and that although the plaintiffs might possibly have obtained leave to sue under s. 30 of the Code on behalf of themselves and the other persons attending the mosque, they not having obtained such leave were not entitled to institute the suit for the purpose of obtaining the relief asked for in the other prayers of the plaint.—Jan Ali v. Ram Nath Mundul, Reg. App., No. 149 of 1880, I. L. R., 8 Calc., January number.

Where a sacred book was kept at a temple and was an object of veneration to the members of the sect entitled to worship there, it was held, that a suit would lie under this section, by some of the persons interested in the temple, to restrain the superintendent from removing the book to another place, and that he should be directed to retain the book as a portion of the furniture of the temple.—Dhurm Singh v. Kissen Singh, I. L. R., 7 Calc., 767.

An order under this section should be mandatory and not prohibitory.—Ibid.

This section empowers the Court to remove trustees, whether hereditary or selected.—Fakrudin Sahib v. Acheni Sahib, I. L. R., 2 Mad., 197.

XV. The interest required in order to entitle a person to sue under the last preceding section need not be a pecuniary, or a direct or immediate, interest, or such an interest as would entitle the person suing to take any part in the management or superintendence of the trusts. Any person having a right of attendance, or having been in the habit of attending at the performance of the worship or service of any mosque, temple, or religious establishment, or of partaking in the benefit of any distribution of alms, shall be deemed to be a person interested within the meaning of the last preceding section.

APPDX.

The suits to which this Act applies are such as come within the provisions of s. 14, which only refer to suits against trustees, managers, or superintendents, or the members of a district committee while in office.—Jeyangarulacaru v. Sri Hati Durma Dossji, 4 Mad. H. C. R., 2.

Nature of suits contemplated by Act.

It applies, in fact, to such religious trusts and endowments which had been, or might come to be, under the management of the Government.—Kalee Churn Giree v. Golabi, 2 C. L. R., 128. It does not apply to a suit brought by the dharmakarta of a temple and one of its worshippers to compel the heir of the late manager to make good, out of the property inherited by him, the deficiency in the devasthanum funds caused by the breach of trust and misapplication of the late manager.—Jeyangarulacaru v. Sri Hati Durma Dossji, 4 Mad. H. C. R., 2.

A suit for the removal of a mohunt and the appointment of another in his place is not within the Act.—Kishore Bon Mohunt v. Kalee Churn Giree, 22 W. R., 364. And a suit by an officer of a mosque, temple, or other religious endowment, for dismissal from his office, is not a suit for misfeasance, within the meaning of s. 14.—Syed Amin Sahib v. Ibram Sahib, 4 Mad. H. C. R., 112.

Where the plaintiffs described themselves as the Calcutta Tairo Punttee Anungo Punch Brethren, and alleged that the management and control of the temples, endowments, and worship of the Degumbery sect of Jains was vested in them, and that they formed the committee for the management of all the Jain charities as well in Calcutta as in all the other towns and places in India, and sued for the construction of a will and a declaration of their rights thereunder as members of the Punch, and to have property dedicated by the will to religious purposes ascertained and secured, it was held, that such a suit did not fall under Act XX of 1863, but came under the ordinary jurisdiction of the Court, which is similar in its general features to that of the Lord Chancellor in England.—Panch Cowrie Mull v. Chumroololl, I. L. R., 3 Calc., 563; S. C., 2 C. L. R., 121.

Any person interested in the endowment, and the interest need not be a pecuniary one, may, after leave obtained, sue the trustee, manager, or superintendent, or the members of a committee appointed under the Act, for misfeasance.—Bibee Kuneez Fatima v. Bibee Sahoba Jan, 8 W. R., 313.

The plaintiff should sue on behalf of himself and the other persons interested in the due performance of the trust, stating what breaches of trust have been committed, and praying that the trustee may be removed; that some proper person may be appointed in his place; that a scheme may be framed for the purpose of having the breach of trust rectified and properly carried out in future; and for an account.—Kalee Churn Giri v. Golabi, 2 C. L. R., 131; Rup Narain Singh v. Junko Bye, 3 C. L. R., 115.

It is not necessary to show that the endowment was one which was formerly under the control of the Board of Revenue.—Ganes Singh v. Ramgopal Singh, 5 B. L. R., Appx., 55.

These sections as to suits deal only with the trustees, managers, superintendents, and committees of temples for acts done by them while filling the office of trustee, manager, superintendent, or committee, and do not apply to persons who, without any authority, by election, wrong-doers.

APPDX. appointment, or otherwise, have intruded themselves into the management of a temple and possession of its properties.—Sabapathi v. Subraya, I. L. R., 2 Mad., 58.

The jurisdiction given to Courts by this Act cannot be excluded by any clause in a deed of endowment.—Syud Imdad Hossein v. Mahomed Ali Khan, 23 W. R., 150.

An appeal does not lie from an order passed under this Act, but the party dissatisfied with the order may seek to set it aside by a regular suit.—Kudeeram Singh v. Sham Singh Poojoory, W. R., Sp. (Mis.), 25; Delrus Banoo Begum v. Hadjee Aboor Ruhman, 21 W. R., 368.

XVI. In any suit or proceeding instituted under this Act, it shall be lawful for the Court before which such suit or proceeding is pending, to order any matter in difference in such suit to be referred for decision to one or more arbitrators. Whenever any such order shall be made, the provisions of chapter vi of the Code of Civil Procedure shall, in all respects, apply to such order and arbitration, in the same manner as if such order had been made on the application of the parties under s. 312 of the said Code.

See now Act X of 1877, chap. xxxvii, and s. 506.

XVII. Nothing in the last preceding section shall prevent the parties from applying to the Court, or the Court from making the order of reference under the said s. 312 of the said Code of Civil Procedure.

See now Act X of 1877, s. 506.

XVIII. No suit shall be entertained under this Act without a preliminary application being first made to the Court for leave to institute such suit. The application may be made upon unstamped paper. The Court, on the perusal of the application, shall determine whether there are sufficient prima facie grounds for the institution of a suit, and if in the judgment of the Court there are such grounds, leave shall be given for its institution. In calculating the costs at the termination of the suit, the stamp-duty on the preliminary application shall be estimated, and shall be added to the costs of the suit. If the Court shall be of opinion that the suit has been for the benefit of the trust, and that no party to the suit is in fault, the Court may order costs, or such portion as it may consider just, to be paid out of the estate.

Section 18 of Act XX of 1863 applies only to such religious establishments as were under the control or superintendence of the Board of Revenue or of local agents under Reg. XIX of 1810, and were transferred to trustees or managers under s. 4 of the Act.—Delroos Banoo Begum v. Nawab Syud Ashgur Ally Khan, 15 B. L. R., 167; S. C., 23 W. R., 453.

A, a Mahomedan lady, executed a wuqfnama, purporting to dedicate the whole of her property to an imambara in her house, for the purpose of perpetuating various Shiah ceremonies. By the wuqfnama she constituted herself joint-mutawali with one B, and caused the name of herself and B as mutawalis to be substituted in the Collector's register for her own name as owner. On the death of B, A acted as the sole mutawali. The wuqfnama was publicly registered. But though the property was styled 'wuqf' and A the mutawali in all documents connected with the estate, A continued to deal with it as absolute owner, and the dedication, though made in 1852, was never under the control of the Board of Revenue or of local agents. In a suit, which the plaintiffs obtained leave to institute, under s. 18 of Act XX of 1863, to remove A from the mutawaliship, on the ground of misfeasance, it was held, that the wuqfnama did not constitute a public religious establishment within the meaning of Act XX of 1863, and that therefore the Judge below had no authority to give the plaintiffs leave to sue under s. 18, and that his decision was consequently ultra vires.—Delroos Bano Begum v. Nawab Syud Ashgur Ally Khan, 15 B. L. R., 167; S. C., 23 W. R., 453.

APPDX.

The suits mentioned in the Act as needing the authority of the Court for their institution, are solely suits charging trustees, managers, or committees with misfeasance, malversation of the temple property, or neglect of duty. There is nothing in the Act to oust the jurisdiction of the ordinary Courts over suits to establish a right to share in the management.—Agri Sharma Embrandri v. Vistnu Embrandri, 3 Mad. H. C. R., 198.

The Act, while it empowers persons to sue whose right to sue, independently of the Act, may be doubtful, does not deprive persons, claiming to be beneficiaries under a deed of endowment, of the right to sue which they have independently of the Act: nor does it impose on them the necessity of obtaining the sanction to institute the suit required by s. 18 of the Act.—Hajee Kalub Hossein v. M. S. Mehru Beebe, 4 N. W. P., 155; Jeyangarulavaru Sri Hati Durma Dossji, 4 Mad. H. C. R., 2.

An appropriator, who sues on the ground that the trust created, so far as it relates to the appointment of mutawalis, has never been acted upon, and that the original rights of the appropriator remain, is at liberty to bring such a suit without the leave of the Court under s. 18 of Act XX of 1863.—Hidait-oon-nissa v. Syud Afzul Hossein, 2 N. W. P., 420.

The committee of a district duly appointed under Act XX of 1863 are entitled to maintain a suit in the Civil Court without having obtained the leave of the Court to bring the suit, as well when the object of the suit is to establish their right of control under s. 3 of the Act, as when it is sought to enforce such control against the officers of the temple subordinate to them.—Venkatasa Naidu v. Sadagopasamy Iyer, 4 Mad. H. C. R., 404.

An order of the Civil Court under this section refusing leave to institute a suit, and deciding that an endowment is governed in a particular manner, is not apparently conclusive upon the question of title between the parties.—Venkatasa Naiker v. Srinivassa Chariyar, 4 Mad. H. C. R., 410.

It is the duty of the Court acting under s. 18 of Act XX of 1863 to see that there are some sufficient grounds for giving a person permission to institute a suit under the provisions of the Act, for such permission does not only contemplate that the Court may remove such trustee, manager, superintendent, or member of a committee entrusted with the management of the endowed property, but it also contemplates that the Court shall call upon such trustee, manager, superintendent, or member of a committee to file in Court an account of his trust.—Kishore Ben Mohunt v. Kaleo Churn Giree, 22 W. R., 364.

No order for costs out of the estate can be made where a party to the suit is in fault.—Sookram Doss Mohunt v. Nund Kishore Doss Mohunt, 22 W. R., 21.

XIX. Before giving leave for the institution of a suit, or after leave has been given, before any proceeding is taken, or at any time when the suit is pending, the Court may order the trustee, manager, or superintendent, or any member of a committee, as the case may be, to file in Court the accounts of the trust, or such part thereof as to the Court may seem necessary.

XX. No suit or proceeding before any Civil Court, under the preceding sections, shall in any way affect or interfere with any proceeding in a Criminal Court for criminal breach of trust.

See Anon., I. L. R., 1 Mad., 55.

XXI. In any case in which any land or other property has been granted for the support of an establishment partly of a religious and partly of a secular character, or in which the endowment made for the support of an establishment is appropriated partly to religious and partly to secular uses, the Board of Revenue, before transferring to any trustee, manager, or superintendent, or to any committee of management appointed under this Act, shall determine what portion, if any, of the said land or other property shall remain under the superintendence of the said Board for application to secular uses, and what portion shall be transferred to the superintendence of the trustee, manager, or superintendent, or of the committee, and also what annual amount, if any, shall be charged on the land or other property which may be so transferred to the superintendence of the said trustee, manager, or superintendent, or of the committee, and made payable to the said Board or to the local agents for secular uses as aforesaid. In every such case the provisions of this Act shall take effect only in respect to such land and other property as may be so transferred.

XXII. Except as provided in this Act, it shall not be lawful, after the passing of this Act, for any Government in India, or for any officer of any Government in his official character, to undertake or resume the superintendence of any land or other property granted for the support of, or otherwise belonging to, any mosque, temple, or other religious establishment, or to take any part in the management or appropriation of any endowment made for the maintenance of any such mosque, temple, or other establishment, or to nominate or appoint any trustee, manager, or superintendent thereof, or to be in any way concerned therewith.

XXIII. Nothing in this Act shall be held to affect the provisions of the Regulations mentioned in this Act, except in so far as they relate to mosques, Hindoo temples, and other religious establishments; or to prevent the Government from taking such steps as it may deem necessary under the provisions of the said Regulations, to prevent injury to and preserve buildings remarkable for their antiquity, or for their historical or architectural value, or required for the convenience of the public.

Effect of Act in respect of Regulations therein mentioned and of buildings of antiquity, &c.

APPDX.

XXIV. The word 'India' in this Act shall denote the territories which are or may become vested in Her Majesty by the Statute 21 and 22 Vic., c. 106, entitled "an Act for the better government of India."

XXIII. The Chief Justice shall, from time to time, appoint an auditor or auditors to examine the accounts of the Official Trustee at the time of the delivery of the said schedule, and also at any other time when the Chief Justice shall think fit.

XXIV. The auditor or auditors shall examine the schedules and accounts, and report to the Chief Justice whether they contain a full and true account of everything which ought to be inserted therein, and whether the books which by this Act are, or which by any such general rules and orders as aforesaid shall be, directed to be kept by the Official Trustee, have been duly and regularly kept; and whether the trust-funds and securities have been duly kept and invested and deposited in the manner prescribed by this Act or which shall be prescribed by any such rules and orders to be made as aforesaid.

APPDX. — the said trust-estates, shall be ascertained and settled by the auditor or auditors, subject to the approval of the Chief Justice, and shall be paid out of the said estates accordingly by the Official Trustee.

XXVII. If upon any such reference and examination the auditor or auditors shall see reason to believe that the said schedules do not contain a true and correct account of the matters therein contained, or which ought to be therein contained, or that the trust-funds and securities have not been duly kept and invested or deposited in the manner directed by this Act, or which shall be directed by any such rules and orders as aforesaid, or that the Official Trustee has failed to comply with the provisions and directions of this Act, or of any such rules and orders, he or they shall report accordingly to the Chief Justice.

XXVIII. The Chief Justice may refer every such report as last aforesaid to the consideration of the Advocate-General for the Presidency, who shall thereupon, if he shall think fit, proceed summarily against the defaulter or his personal representative in the High Court by petition for an account, or to compel obedience to this Act or to such rules and orders as aforesaid, or otherwise as he may think fit, in respect of all or any of the trust-estates then or formerly under the charge of such defaulter; and the Court shall have power, upon any such petition, to compel the attendance in Court of the defendant or defendants and any witnesses who may be thought necessary, and to examine them orally or otherwise as the said Court shall think fit, and to make and enforce such order or orders as the Court shall think just.

XXIX. The costs, including those of the Advocate-General, and of the reference to him, if the same shall be directed by the Court to be paid, shall be defrayed either by the defendant or defendants, or out of the trust-estates ratably as the said Court shall direct; and whenever any costs shall be recovered from the defendant or defendants, the same shall be repaid to the estates by which the same shall have been in the first instance contributed, and the Court shall have power to order the Official Trustee or other person or persons, defendants, to receive his or her costs out of the said estates, if it shall think fit.

XXX. Any orders which shall be made by any of the said High Courts shall have the same effect and be executed in the same manner as decrees.

Orders of the High Court to have same effect, and to be executed in the same manner as decrees.

XXXI. Any order under this Act may be made on the application of any person beneficially interested in any trust-property, or of any trustee thereof, whether under disability or not.

Who may apply for order under this Act.

XXXII. If any infant or lunatic shall be entitled to any gift or legacy or residue or share thereof, it shall be lawful for the executor or administrator by whom such legacy, residue, or share may be payable or transferable, or the party by whom such gift may be made, or any trustee of such gift, legacy, residue, or share, to pay or transfer the same to the Official Trustee appointed under this Act; provided that the leave of the High Court to make such payment or transfer shall be first obtained by motion made on petition. Any money or property paid or transferred to the Official Trustee or vested in him under this section shall be subject to the same provisions as are contained in this Act as to other property vested in such Official Trustee under the provisions thereof.

THE INDIAN TRUSTEE ACT, 1866.

Act No. XXVII OF 1866.

An Act to consolidate and amend the law relating to the conveyance and transfer of property in British India vested in mortgagees and trustees in cases to which English law is applicable.

WHEREAS it is expedient to consolidate and amend the laws relating to the conveyance and transfer of moveable and immoveable property in British India vested in mortgagees and trustees, in cases to which English law is applicable; It is hereby enacted as follows (a):—

(a) As to the meaning of these words, see ante, p. 15. The Court has no jurisdiction under this Act to decide on a disputed question of title.—In re Draper's Settlement, 9 W. R. (Eng.), 805.

The Act applies only to the Lower Provinces, the North-Western Provinces, the Presidencies of Madras and Bombay, and the Punjab. It is mainly founded on the English Statutes, 13 and 14 Vict., c. 60 (The Trustee Act), and 15 and 16 Vict., c. 55 (The Trustee Extension Act).

I. [Repealed by Act XIV of 1870.]

Interpretation. II. In this Act, unless there be something repugnant in the subject or context—

‘Immoveable property’ shall extend to and include messuages, tenements, and hereditaments, corporeal and incorporeal, of every tenure or description, whatever may be the estate or interest therein :

‘Immoveable property.’

APPDX.

'Stock' shall mean any fund, annuity, or security transferable in books kept by any company or society established or to be established, or transferable by deed alone, or by deed accompanied by other formalities, and any share (a) or interest therein. It shall also include shares in ships registered under the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854, or at any port in British India (b):

'Hold' and 'holding' shall be applicable to any vested estate, whether for life or of a greater or less description, in possession, futurity, or expectancy in any immoveable property:

'Contingent right,' as applied to immoveable property, shall mean a contingent or executory interest, or possibility coupled with an interest, whether the object of the gift or limitation of such interest or possibility be or be not ascertained; also a right of entry, whether immediate or future, and whether vested or contingent:

'Convey' and 'conveyance' applied to any person shall mean the execution by such person of every necessary or suitable assurance for conveying or disposing to another immoveable property which such person holds, or in which he is entitled to a contingent right, either for the whole estate of the person conveying or disposing, or for any less estate, together with the performance of all formalities required by law to the validity of such conveyance, including the acts to be performed by married women and tenants-in-tail in accordance with the provisions of Act XXXI of 1854 (to abolish real actions and also fines and recoveries, and to simplify the modes of conveying land in cases to which English law is applicable):

'Transfer' shall mean the execution and performance of every deed and act by which a person entitled to stock, or Government securities, can transfer such stock or Government securities from himself to another:

'High Court' shall mean every Court now or hereafter to be established under the Statute 24 and 25 Vict., cap. 104, and also the Chief Court of the Punjab, or such one or more Judges of the said Courts respectively as shall be appointed by the Chief Justice or the senior Judge (c), as the case may be, to entertain applications and make orders under this Act:

'Trust' shall not mean the duties incident to an estate conveyed by way of mortgage; but with this exception, the words 'trust' and 'trustee' shall extend to and include implied and constructive trusts, and shall extend to and include cases where the trustee has some beneficial estate or interest in the subject of the trust, and shall extend to and include the duties incident to the office of executor or administrator of a deceased person (d):

APPDX.

‘Lunatic’ shall mean any person who shall have been found by due course of law to be of unsound mind and incapable of managing his affairs:

‘Lunatic.’

‘Person of unsound mind’ shall mean any person not a minor who, not having been found to be a lunatic, shall be incapable from infirmity of mind (e) to manage his own affairs:

‘Person of unsound mind.’

In the case of a will made, or an intestacy occurring before the first day of January, 1866 (the day on which the Indian Succession Act came into force) ‘heir’ shall mean the person claiming an interest in the immoveable property of a deceased person under the laws concerning descent applicable to such property; and ‘devisee’ shall, in addition to its ordinary signification, mean the heir of a devisee and the devisee of an heir, and generally any person claiming an interest in the immoveable property of a deceased person, not as heir of such deceased person, but by a title dependent solely upon the operation of the laws concerning devise and descent.

In the case of a will made, or an intestacy occurring on or after the first day of January, 1866, ‘heir’ shall mean any person claiming an interest in the immoveable property of a deceased person under the rules for the distribution of an intestate’s estate; and ‘devisee’ shall mean any person taking immoveable property under a bequest, and any person, other than an executor or administrator, claiming an interest in immoveable property, not as entitled thereto under the said rules, but by a title dependent solely upon the operation of the laws concerning intestate and testamentary succession:

(b) 18 and 19 Vict., c. 91, s. 10.

(c) See Act IV of 1866, s. 3.

(d) A vendor, after a contract, has been held to be a trustee of shares in a joint-stock bank for the purchaser. But in cases of immoveable property, if not universally, at least where the alleged trustee can possibly dispute the trust, the constructive trust must first have been declared by the decree of the Court, and the infant heir of the vendor, who died intestate after having contracted to sell real estate, is not a constructive trustee for the purchaser unless so declared by decree.—Lewin, 7th Edn., 867. See Re Lowry's Will, L. R., 15 Eq., 78. A vendor who refused to convey after tender of a deed settled by the Judge, or to receive the purchase-money, was declared a trustee; and on the purchaser paying his purchase-money into Court, his solicitor was to execute the conveyance for the vendor.—Warrender v. Foster, 1 Set. on Decrees, 4th Ed., 538.

The Court has jurisdiction to recognize a constructive trusteeship of stock within the meaning of that term as used in the Act.—Re Davis's Trust, L. R., 12 Eq., 214.

The definition of 'trustee' includes the case of stock which has been transferred into the name of an infant, who is the sole beneficial owner, subject to a direction in regard to maintenance or otherwise, vested in some one else.—Gardner v. Cowles, L. R., 3 Ch. D., 304.

An heir who elects to hold on the trusts of an inoperative will is a trustee.—Dewar v. Maitland, L. R., 2 Eq., 834. After a bankruptcy and the appointment of assignees, one of them went abroad; it was held, that he was a trustee, and the estate was vested in the remaining assignees.—In re Joyce's Estate, L. R., 2 Eq., 576.

what cases.

(a) Up to a very recent period, the words "cases to which English law is applicable" have been considered to apply only to cases in which the parties have been European British subjects. In Re Kahandas Narandas, I. L. R., 5 Bomb., 154, however, it was held, that the High Courts may exercise the summary powers conferred upon them by this section in the case of Hindu trusts; ante, p. 15.

as if the trustee or mortgagee had been sane, and had duly executed a conveyance of the property in the same manner for the same estate. APPDX.

Trustee Act, 1850, s. 3.

(a) Where the unsoundness of mind is contested, the case is not within the Act.—Re Walker, Cr. and Ph., 147; Re Campbell, 18 L. T., 202.

(b) The vesting order being a conveyance, should be so worded as to make it clear by the description what property passes.—Re Ord's Trust, 3 W. R. (Eng.), 863. Where the circumstances require a severance of the property, the Court will make two vesting orders instead of one general.—Brader v. Kerby, W. N., 1872, p. 174; see Lewin, 7th Ed., 869.

V. When any lunatic or person of unsound mind shall be entitled to any contingent right in any High Court may convey contingent rights. immoveable property upon any trust or by way of mortgage, it shall be lawful for the High Court to make an order wholly releasing such property from such contingent right, or disposing of the same to such person or persons as the said High Court shall direct, and the order shall have the same effect as if the trustee or mortgagee had been sane, and had duly executed a deed so releasing or disposing of the contingent right.

The Trustee Act, 1850, s. 4.

VI. When any lunatic or person of unsound mind shall be solely entitled to any stock or Government securities, or to any thing in action upon any trust or by way of mortgage, it shall be lawful for the High Court to make an order vesting in any person or persons the right to transfer such stock or Government securities, or to receive the dividends, interest, or income thereof, or to sue for and recover such thing in action, or any interest in respect thereof (a): and when any person or persons shall be entitled jointly with any lunatic or person of unsound mind to any stock or Government securities, or thing in action upon any trust or by way of mortgage, it shall be lawful for the said Court to make an order vesting the right to transfer such stock or Government securities, or to receive the dividends, interest, or income thereof, or to sue for and recover such thing in action or any interest in respect thereof, either in such person or persons so jointly entitled as aforesaid (b), or in such last-mentioned person or persons, together with any other person or persons the said High Court may appoint (c).

Trustee Act, 1850, s. 5.

(a) Where a person of unsound mind was entitled to a sum of stock as trustee, and also entitled to another sum of the same stock beneficially, as the bank would not apportion the past dividend between the trust-estate and the beneficial estate, the Court, in appointing new trustees, vested the right to receive the whole dividend in the new trustees upon their undertaking that they would invest in the name of

XVIII. In every case when any person holds, or shall hold jointly or solely, any immoveable property, or is or shall be entitled to a contingent right therein upon any trust, and a demand shall have been made upon such trustee by a person entitled to require a conveyance of such property, or a duly authorized agent of such last-mentioned person requiring such trustee to convey the same, or to release such contingent right, it shall be lawful for the High Court, if the said Court shall be satisfied that such trustee has wilfully refused (a) or neglected to convey the said property for the space of twenty-eight days after such demand (b), to make an order vesting such property in such person or persons in such manner and for such estate as the Court shall direct, or releasing such contingent right in such manner as the Court shall direct; and the said order shall have the same effect as if the trustee had duly executed a conveyance of the property, or a release of such right in the same manner and for the same estate (c).

Trustee Extension Act, 1852, s. 2. See further as to vesting, ante, pp. 334-5.

(a) It has been decided that a married woman is capable of refusing—Rowley v. Adams, 14 Beav., 130.

(b) In Knight v. Knight, W. N., 1866, p. 114. a divorced woman obtained a vesting order against her late husband.—Lewin, 7th Ed., 894.

Where a mortgagor had covenanted to surrender copyholds to his mortgagee, and neglected to make such surrender within twenty-eight days after demand and tender of engrossment by the mortgagee, the Court, on the petition of the mortgagee, made a vesting order without requiring service of the petition on the mortgagor.—In re Crane's Mortgage, L. R., 13 Eq., 26.

XIX. When any person to whom any immoveable property has been conveyed by way of mortgage, shall have died without having entered into the possession or into the receipt of the rents and profits thereof, and the money due in respect of such mortgage shall have been paid to a person entitled to receive the same, or such last-mentioned person shall consent to an order for the reconveyance or vesting of such property, then in any of the following cases it shall be lawful for the High Court to make an order vesting such property in such person or persons in such manner and for such estate as the said Court shall direct,—that is to say—when an heir or devisee of such mortgagee shall be out of the jurisdiction of the High Court or cannot be found;

when an heir or devisee of such mortgagee shall, upon a demand by a person entitled to require a conveyance of such property, or a duly authorized agent of such last-mentioned person, have stated in writing that he will not convey the same, or shall not convey the same for the space of twenty-eight days next after a proper deed for conveying such property shall have been tendered to him by a person entitled as aforesaid, or a duly authorized agent of such last-mentioned person ;

when it shall be uncertain as to the survivor of several devisees of such mortgagee, or as to the heir of such mortgagee whether he be living or dead ;

when such mortgagee shall have died intestate as to such property and without an heir, or shall have died, and it shall not be known who is his heir or devisee ;

And the order of the said High Court made in any one of the foregoing cases shall have the same effect as if the heir or devisee, or surviving devisee, as the case may be, had duly executed a conveyance of the property in the same manner and for the same estate.

or disposition of the contingent right of any person or persons born or unborn, it shall also be lawful for the High Court, should it be deemed more convenient, to make an order appointing a person to convey such property, or release or dispose of such contingent right ; and the conveyance or release or disposition of the person so appointed (a) shall, when in conformity with the terms of the order by which he is appointed, have the same effect, in conveying the property, or releasing or disposing of the contingent right, as an order of the High Court would in the particular case have had under the provisions of this Act. In every case where the High Court shall, under the provisions of this Act, be enabled to make an order vesting in any person or persons the right to transfer any stock transferable in the books of any company or society established or to be established, it shall be lawful for the High Court, if it be deemed more convenient, to make an order directing the secretary or any officer of such company or society at once to transfer or join in transferring the stock to the person or persons to be named in the order (b) ; and this Act shall be a full and complete indemnity and discharge to all companies or societies and their officers and servants for all acts done or permitted to be done pursuant thereto (c).

Trustee Act, 1850, s. 20.

APPDX.

(a) The conveyance should contain a recital showing that it is made in obedience to the order of the Court, and should be executed by the person appointed to convey in his own name.—Lewin, 7th Ed., 875.

(b) The person here meant is not a beneficiary; but where a person has become absolutely entitled, the Court can appoint him a trustee, and direct a transfer to him.—Lewin, 7th Ed., 876.

(c) The Court under this section can only direct the Bank officer to transfer in the place of the person creating the difficulty; and therefore where the stock was standing in the names of two persons, one of whom was out of the jurisdiction, it was necessary to order the person within the jurisdiction to join in the transfer.—Wade v. Hopkinson; Hodgson v. Hodgson, 1 Set. on Dec., 4th Ed., 521.

XXI. When any person or persons shall be jointly entitled

When trustee of stock or Government securities out of the jurisdiction.

with any person out of the jurisdiction of the High Court (a), or who cannot be found, or concerning whom it shall be uncertain whether he be living or dead, to any stock or Government securities or thing in action upon any trust (b), it shall be lawful for the said Court (c) to make an order vesting the right to transfer such stock or Government securities, or to receive the dividends, interest, or income thereof, or to sue for or receive the dividends, interest, or income thereof (d), or to sue for or recover such thing in action or any interest in respect thereof, either in such person or persons so jointly entitled as aforesaid; or in such last-mentioned person or persons, together with any person or persons the said Court may appoint (e). When any sole trustee (f) of any stock, Government securities, or thing in action shall be out of the jurisdiction of the said Court, or cannot be found, or it shall be uncertain whether he be living or dead, it shall be lawful for the said Court to make an order vesting the right to transfer such stock or Government securities, or to receive the dividends (g), interest, or income thereof, or to sue for and recover such thing in action, or any interest in respect thereof, in any person or persons as the said Court may appoint.

Trustee Act, 1850, s. 22.

(a) Where the trustee out of the jurisdiction is incapacitated from lunacy or infancy, the power of the Court must be sought for in the sections applicable to cases of lunatics and infants, and not in this section.—Lewin, 7th Ed., 876; Cramer v. Cramer, 5 DeG. and Sm., 312. The fact that the trustee is out of the jurisdiction should be recited in the order.—Re Mainwaring, 26 Beav., 172.

(b) The husband of an executrix is a trustee within the Act.—Ex parte Bradshaw, 2 D. M. G., 900; Re Wood, 3 D. F. J., 125.

(c) A petition for a vesting order to vest property in a new trustee appointed under a power in the place of a trustee out of the jurisdiction, must be served on all the persons interested in the fund, and it must be proved by affidavit that the power has been properly exercised, and that the proposed trustee is a fit and proper person.—Re Maynard's Settlement Trust, 16 Jur., 1084.

(d) One of four trustees of a sum of stock being out of the jurisdiction, an order was made vesting the right to receive the dividends in the other three. but was, on appeal by the bank, varied by restricting it to the dividends to accrue due during the joint lives of the three.—Re Peyton's Settlement, 2 De.G. and J., 290.

APPDX.

(e) Where the stock is vested in two trustees one of whom is out of the jurisdiction, the Court has no authority, under the first branch of the section, to vest the right in the person who asks for it as being absolute owner.—Re Brass's Trust, 4 W. R. (Eng.), 764 : see Lewin, 7th Ed., 877.

(f) A and B being trustees, the Master found that it was uncertain whether A was living or dead, but B was living; afterwards B died. It was held, that A was not a 'sole trustee.' The expression means a person originally a sole trustee, or one who has become sole trustee by surviving.—Re Randall's Will, 1 Drew, 401.

(g) This section authorizes an order vesting the right to receive future dividends.—Re Peyton's Settlement, 1 DeG. and J., 290.

XXII. Where any sole trustee (a) of any stock, Government securities, or thing in action shall neglect or refuse to transfer such stock or Government securities, or to receive the dividends, interest, or income thereof, or to sue for or recover such thing in action, or any interest in respect thereof, according to the direction of the person absolutely entitled thereto (b), for the space of twenty-eight days next after a request in writing (c) for that purpose shall have been made to him by the person absolutely entitled thereto, it shall be lawful for the High Court to make an order (d) vesting the sole right to transfer such stock or Government securities, or to receive the dividends, interest, or income thereof (e), or to sue for and recover such thing in action, or any interest in respect thereof in such person or persons as the Court may appoint.

Trustee Act, 1850, s. 23.

(a) The words 'sole trustee' may mean all the trustees when there are more than one.—Re Hartnall, 5 DeG. and Sm., 111; Re Spanforth's Settlement, 12 W. R. (Eng.), 978.

(b) One of several trustees of a sum of stock is not a person absolutely entitled within the meaning of this and the next section, nor is a cestui que trust who has only a life-interest in the dividends, at least where the application is to transfer the stock. It is doubtful whether a person having a life-interest in the dividends may be considered absolutely entitled, for the purpose of an application to receive the dividends only.—Mackenzie v. Mackenzie, 16 Jur., 723.

Duly appointed new trustees are persons 'absolutely entitled.'—Ex parte Russell, 1 Sim., N. S., 404; Re Baxter's Will, 2 Sm. and Giff., Appx. v; Re Ellis's Settlement, 24 Beav., 426.

(c) As to trustee refusing, see s. 27, post.

(d) As to the person to be served, see s. 40, post.

(e) Section 27 provides for subsequently accrued dividends.

XXIII. Where any one of the trustees of any stock, Government securities, or thing in action shall neglect or refuse to transfer such stock or Government securities, or to receive the dividends, interest, or income thereof, or to sue for or recover such thing in action, When one of several trustees of stock, &c., refuses to transfer or receive and pay over dividends.

APPDX. — according to the direction of the person absolutely entitled thereto, for the space of twenty-eight days next after a request in writing for that purpose shall have been made to him by such person, it shall be lawful for the High Court to make an order vesting the right to transfer such stock or Government securities, or to receive the dividends, interest, or income thereof, or to sue for and recover such thing in action, in the other trustee or trustees of the said stock, Government securities, or thing in action, or in any person or persons whom the said Court may appoint jointly with such other trustee or trustees (a).

(a) Where one of the three executors of a surviving trustee of canal shares was of unsound mind, and the other two, when applied to by the persons absolutely entitled to the shares, declined to do anything, it was held, that an order could be made vesting the right to transfer the shares in the persons beneficially interested.—In re White, L. R., 5 Chan., 698.

XXIV. When any stock or Government securities shall be standing in the sole name of a deceased person, and his executor or administrator shall be out of the jurisdiction of the High Court, or cannot be found, or it shall be uncertain whether such executor or administrator (a) be living or dead, or such executor or administrator shall neglect or refuse to transfer such stock or Government securities, or receive the dividends, interest, or income thereof, according to the direction of the person absolutely entitled thereto, for the space of twenty-eight days next after a request in writing for that purpose shall have been made to him by the person entitled as aforesaid, it shall be lawful for the said Court to make an order vesting the right to transfer such stock or Government securities, or to receive the dividends, interest, or income thereof, in any person or persons whom the said Court may appoint.

Trustee Act, 1850, s. 25.

(a) This section applies to a case in which the executor of a surviving trustee has not proved the will and has neglected to transfer on the requisition of new trustees appointed out of Court—Re Ellis's Settlement, 24 Beav., 426; and the Court seems to have made a similar order when the next-of-kin who was entitled to take out administration, had refused to make the transfer.—In re Stroud's Trusts, W. N., 1874, p. 180; Lewin, 7th Ed., 878.

XXV. Where any order shall have been made under this Act vesting the right (a) to any stock or Government securities in any person or persons appointed by the High Court, such legal right shall vest accordingly, and thereupon the person or persons so appointed are hereby authorized and empowered to execute all deeds and powers-of-attorney, and to perform all acts relating to the transfer of such stock and Government securities into his or their own name or names, or otherwise, or relating to the receipt of the dividends, interest, or income thereof, to the extent and in conformity with the terms of such order. All companies and associations whatever, and all persons, shall be equally bound and compellable to comply with the requisitions of such person or persons so appointed as afore-said to the extent and in conformity with the terms of such order, as such companies, associations, or persons would have been bound and compellable to comply with the requisitions of the person in whose place such appointment shall have been made, and shall be equally indemnified in complying with the requisition of such person or persons so appointed as they would have been indemnified in complying with the requisition of the person in whose place such appointment shall have been made. After notice in writing of any such order of the High Court concerning any stock or Government securities shall have been given, it shall not be lawful for any company or association, or any person having received such notice, to act upon the requisition of the person in whose place an appointment shall have been made, in any matter relating to the transfer of such stock or Government securities or the payment of the dividends, interest, or income thereof.

Trustee Act, 1850, s. 26.

(a) See s. 29, post, and Re Peacock, L. R., 14 Ch. D., 212.

XXVI. When any order shall have been made under this Act by the High Court vesting the legal right to sue for or recover any thing in action, or any interest in respect thereof, in any person or persons, such legal right shall vest accordingly; and thereupon it shall be lawful for the person or persons so appointed to carry on, commence, and prosecute, in his or their own name or names, any suit or other proceeding for the recovery of such thing in action in the same manner in all respects as the person in whose place an appointment shall have been made could have sued for or recovered such thing in action.

Trustee Act, 1850, s. 27.

XXVII. Where any person shall neglect or refuse to transfer any stock or Government securities, or to receive the dividends, interest, or income thereof, or to sue for or recover any thing in action, or any interest in respect thereof, for the space of twenty-eight days next after an order of the High Court for that purpose shall have been served upon him, it shall be lawful for the said Court to make an order (a) vesting all the right of such person to transfer such stock or Government securities, or to receive the dividends,

On neglect to transfer stock, &c., for twenty-eight days, order may be made vesting right to transfer in such person as the Court shall appoint.

Trustee Extension Act, 1852, s. 4.

(a) The order may be made on motion; a petition is not necessary.—Re Holbrook's Will, 5 Jur., N. S., 1333.

XXVIII. When any stock or Government securities shall be standing in the sole name of a deceased person, and his executor or administrator shall refuse or neglect to transfer such stock or Government securities, or receive the dividends, interest, or income thereof for the space of twenty-eight days next after an order of the High Court for that purpose shall have been served upon him, it shall be lawful for the said Court to make an order vesting the right to transfer such stock or Government securities, or to receive the dividends, interest, or income thereof, in any person or persons whom the said Court may appoint (a).

Trustee Extension Act, 1852, s. 5.

(a) It is the practice of the Bank of England not to allow the dividend to be split into fractional parts.—Skynner v. Pelichet, 9 W. R. (Eng.), 191; Lewin, 7th Ed., 895.

XXIX. When any order being, or purporting to be, under this Act shall be made by the High Court, vesting the right to any stock or Government securities, or vesting the right to transfer any stock or Government securities, or vesting the right to call for the transfer of any stock or Government securities in any person or persons, in every such case the legal right to transfer such stock or Government securities shall vest accordingly (a); and the person or persons so appointed shall be authorized and empowered to execute all deeds and powers-of-attorney, and to perform all acts relating to the transfer of such stock or Government securities into his or their own name or names, or otherwise to the extent and in conformity with the terms of the order. All companies and associations and all persons shall be equally bound and compellable to comply with the requisitions of such person or persons so appointed as aforesaid, to the extent and in conformity with the terms of such order, as such companies, associations, or persons would have been bound and compellable to comply with the requisitions of the person in whose place such appointment shall have been made.

Trustee Extension Act, 1852, s. 6.

(a) For form of order on appointment of new trustees, where the funds are invested on unauthorized securities, and it is desired not to transfer them into the names of the new trustees, but to sell them and re-invest the funds in accordance with the trusts of the settlement, see Re Peacock, L. R., 14 Ch. D., 212.

Where the trustees appointed by a testator died and new trustees were appointed in their place, and all the trust-property was vested in the new trustees, the bank declined to act unless the order directed the new trustees to transfer the stock into their own names.—Re Glanville's Trusts, W. XXX. When any minor shall be solely entitled to any stock the dividends, interest, or income thereof (a). When any minor shall be entitled jointly with any other person or persons to any stock or Government securities upon any trust, it shall be lawful for the said Court to make an order vesting the right to transfer such stock or Government securities, or to receive the dividends, interest, or income thereof, either in the person or persons jointly entitled with the minor, or with him or them together, with any other person or persons the said Court may appoint (b).

(a) Agents of executors invested a sum of stock in the names of infants, who had an interest under the will, instead of in the names of the executors, and the Court made a vesting order for the transfer into the names of the executor.—Rives v. Rives, W. N., 1866, p. 144 ; Lewin, 7th Ed., 894 So, where the executors had invested stock in the names of themselves and an infant, and the infant was the survivor.—Gardner v. Coxles, L. (b) An order in a cause may apparently be made without a petition.—Wood v. Beetlestone, 1 K. and J., 213. In Gough v. Buge, W. N., 1871, p. 437, however, a petition was presented.

High Court may make an order for vesting the estate in lieu of conveyance by a party to the suit after a decree or order for sale. by the High Court, whether before or after the passing of this Act, directing the sale of any immoveable property for any purpose whatever (b), every person holding such property, or entitled to a contingent

APPDX. right therein, being a party to the suit or proceeding in which such decree or order shall have been made and bound thereby, or being otherwise bound by such decree or order, shall be deemed so to hold or be entitled (as the case may be) upon a trust within the meaning of this Act. In every such case it shall be lawful for the High Court (c), if the said Court shall think it expedient for the purpose of carrying such sale into effect, to make an order vesting such property or any part thereof for such estate as the Court shall think fit, either in any purchaser or in such other person as the Court shall direct (d). Every such order shall have the same effect as if the person so holding or entitled had been free from disability and had duly executed all proper conveyances and assignments of such property for such estate.

Trustee Extension Act, 1852, s. 1.

(a) Where a testatrix devised real estate on trust for sale, but there had never been a trustee of the will, in consequence of the death, during the testatrix's lifetime, of the sole trustee named in the will, and it was not known who was the heir of the testatrix, it was held, that the Court had no jurisdiction under the Trustee Act, 1850, in the absence of the heir, to appoint a trustee and to make an order vesting in him the real estate descended.—Gunson v. Simpson, L. R., 5 Eq., 332 : see Gough v. Bage, W. N., 1871, p. 437.

(b) Quære.—Whether the section applies to the case where the person to convey is not under disability?—Lewin, 7th Ed., 893.

(c) Where the estate in land sold under the order of the Court is vested in a person of unsound mind, but not found lunatic, an order may be made appointing a person to convey the estate.—Herring v. Clark, L. R., 4 Chan., 167.

(d) Where property has been, by an order of the Court, directed to be sold, and where some of the parties interested in such property are either out of the jurisdiction, married women, or minors, and the place of abode of others of them is unknown, the Court will, on petition under this Act, appoint a person to convey the interest of such persons to any purchaser, notwithstanding that, at the time the order is applied for, no contract for the sale of the property has been entered into. But the Court cannot make such an order with respect to the interest of a party who has not been served, and who has not entered appearance.—Lackersteen v. Rostan, L. L. R., 7 Cal., 32.

XXXIII. Where any decree or order shall be made by the High Court for the specific performance of a contract concerning any immoveable property (a), or for the partition (b), or exchange of any immoveable property (c), or generally when a decree shall be made for the conveyance of any immoveable property, either in cases arising out of the doctrine of election or otherwise, it shall be lawful for the said Court to declare that any of the parties to the said suit wherein such decree is made are trustees of such property, or any part thereof, within the meaning of this Act, or to declare concerning the interests of unborn persons (d) who might claim under any party to the said suit, or under the will or voluntary settlement of any person deceased who was during his lifetime a party to the contract or transactions concerning which such decree is made, that such interests of unborn persons are the interests of persons who, upon coming into existence, would be trustees within the meaning of this Act. Thereupon it shall be lawful for the High Court to make such order or orders as to the estates, rights, and interests of such persons, born or unborn, as the said Court might, under the provisions of this Act, make concerning the estates, rights, and interests of trustees, born or unborn.

Trustee Act, 1850, s. 30.

(a) Where a donee of a power of jointuring under a settlement was ordered, in a specific performance suit instituted by his wife, to execute the power by a deed to be approved of by the Master, whereby a certain sum was to be appointed as the plaintiff's jointure, and the defendant refused to obey the decree, it was held, that he might be declared a trustee of all the rights, interests, and property acquired by him under the settlement, and the Court appointed a person to execute the requisite deed in his absence.—Ex parte Mornington, 4 D. M. G., 537. In a suit for the specific performance of a lease, the Court has no power either to appoint a person to convey in the place of a party refusing to execute the lease or to make a vesting order.—Grace v. Baynton, W. N., 1877, p. 79.

(b) In a partition-suit, instead of giving an infant defendant a day to show cause, the Court may declare him a trustee of such parts of the property as are allotted to the other parties.—Bowra v. Wright, 4 D. G. and Sm., 265.

Where a decree in a partition-suit had declared a lunatic a trustee of an allotted portion of the land for the plaintiff, it was held, that a vesting order could be made under the Act.—In re Molyneux, 4 D. F. J., 365.

(c) In a foreclosure decree on an equitable mortgage, the mortgagor was declared a trustee, and an order was made vesting the estate in the mortgagee (Leckmere v. Clamp, 30 Beav., 218): and in such a suit where the estate of the mortgagor was devised in trust for sale, and had become vested in an infant, who was also one of the persons beneficially interested, it was held, that the decree should contain a direction that, in case the mortgages were not redeemed within six months, the infant should be a trustee for them within the meaning of the Act, and the executrix of the mortgagor be ordered to convey the estate to the mortgagees on his behalf.—*Foster v. (d) This includes heirs of a person now living.—Bassett v. Moxon, L. R., 20 Eq., 182.

XXXIV. It shall be lawful for the High Court to make Power to give directions how the right to transfer stock shall be exercised.

declarations and give directions concerning the manner in which the right to any stock, Government securities, or thing in action, vested under the provisions of this Act, shall be exercised, and thereupon the person or persons in whom such right shall be vested shall be compellable to obey such directions and declarations by the same process as that by which other orders under this Act are enforced (a).

Trustee Act, 1850, s. 31.

APPDX.

(a) Under this section the Court has no jurisdiction to order the fund into Court (Re Parley, 29 L. J., 72 : see Lewin, 7th Ed., 882); nor has it jurisdiction to give any direction as to the property of a person not found lunatic by inquisition except in cases where it is being administered by the Court.—Re Tayler, 2 D. F. J., 125.

XXXV. In all cases in which it shall be expedient (a) to appoint (b) a new trustee or new trustees, and it shall be found inexpedient, difficult, or impracticable so to do without the assistance of the High Court, it shall be lawful for the said Court to make an order appointing a new trustee or new trustees, whether there be any existing trustee or trustees or not at the time of making such order (c), and if there be such trustee or trustees, either in substitution for or in addition to him or them. The person or persons who, upon the making of such order, shall be trustee or trustees, shall have the same rights and powers as he or they would have had if appointed by decree in a suit duly instituted (d).

Power to Court to make order appointing new trustees.

New trustees to have powers of trustees appointed by decree in suit.

Trustee Act, 1850, ss. 32 and 33, and Trustee Extension Act, 1852, s. 9.

(a) It is 'expedient' to appoint a new trustee where the trustee appointed is an infant.—Re Porter's Trust, 2 Jur., N. S., 349; Re Gartside's Estate, 1 W. R. (Eng.), 196. In such a case the appointment should be without prejudice to any application by the infant to be restored to the trusteeship on coming of age.—Re Shelmerdine, 33 L. J., Chan., 474. So it is 'expedient' to appoint a new trustee when there is no representative of a surviving trustee (Re Matthews, 26 Beav., 463; Re Davis's Trusts, L. R., 12 Eq., 214), or there would be difficulties in obtaining a representative.—Davis v. Chanter, 4 Jur., N. S., 272. Where two trustees were desirous of retiring, and it was doubtful whether the power of appointing new trustees in the settlement applied to the case, it was deemed 'expedient' to appoint new trustees.—Lewin, 7th Ed., 882, citing Re Woodgate's Settlement, 5 W. R., Re Armstrong's Settlement, ibid. So a new trustee has been appointed in the place of a trustee who had become bankrupt, had never surrendered, and had not been heard of for several years.—Re Renshaw's Trusts, L. R., 4 Chan., 783; and see Coombes v. Brookes, L. R., 12 Eq., 61. The Court may appoint trustees where there never have been any trustees, or where they have all died in the testator's lifetime.—Re Smirthwaite's Trusts, L. R., 11 Eq., 251.

(b) The Court has no jurisdiction under this Act to appoint new trustees where there are trustees de facto acting as such (Ex parte Hadley, 5 DeG. and Sm., 67); nor has it jurisdiction to take away the power of appointing new trustees from the donee of the power, where the donee is capable of exercising and willing to exercise it, although such donee may have disclosed an intention or desire to exercise his power corruptly.—Re Hodson's Settlement, 9 Hare, 118.

Where one of two trustees was residing out of the jurisdiction, but it did not appear whether such residence was likely to be permanent, the Court refused to appoint a new trustee in his room.—Lewin, 7th Ed., 882, citing Re Mair, 19 Jur., 608. See Re The Lincoln Primitive Methodist's Chapel, 1 Jur., N. S., 1011.

The Act was not intended to extend to the displacing of trustees desirous to continue in the trust, and to the appointing of others in their place; and especially not to the displacing of trustees and the appointing of others, on the ground of alleged misconduct in the trustees to be displaced. The section was meant to apply to cases in which there might be a question about the expediency of what was sought to be done. It was not intended to alter the right of every trustee to have his account taken in Court in the presence of all the parties interested under the trust, so that all might be bound, and to have any balance which might be found due to him on the result of the account paid, or secured to him before he was denuded of the trust-estate.—Re Blanchard, 7 Jur., N. S., 505 : 3 D. F. and J., 131.

Where a trustee had gone abroad and his whereabouts was not known, a new trustee was appointed.—Re Harrison's Trust, 22 L. J., N. S., Chan., 69. See Re Joyce's Estate, L. R., 2 Eq., 576 ; Re Bignold's Trusts, L. R., 7 Chan., 223.

So, new trustees were appointed where the trustees had disclaimed, and the parties in whom the power of appointment was vested were in India.—Re Humphry's Estate, 1 Jur., N. S., 921.

When the person having power to appoint a new trustee is a lunatic, the Court has power to appoint a new trustee under the Act.—Re Sparrow, L. R., 5 Chan., 662.

Where new trustees have been appointed by the donees of a power, the Court will formally re-appoint them for the purpose of making a vesting order.—Re Pearson, L. R., 5 Ch. Div., 982. An affidavit of fitness will be required.—Re Maynard's Settlement Trusts, 16 Jur., 1084.

Where all the cestui que trustent are resident out of the jurisdiction, the Court will appoint new trustees resident out of the jurisdiction.—Re Liddiard, L. R., 14 Ch. Div., 310.

As to appointing new trustees in the place of a lunatic trustee, see Lewin, 7th Ed., 883.

(c) These words are taken from the Trustee Extension Act, 1852, s. 9.

(d) The Court will appoint two trustees in the place of one, as trust-property should be prevented from coming into the hands of a sole trustee Re Tunstall's Will, 4 DeG. and Sm., 421, and it has added two new trustees to two original trustees.—Lewin, 7th Ed., 884, citing Re Baycott, 5 W. R., (Eng.) 15. But it will not appoint one trustee in the place of two or more Re Dickinson's Trusts, 1 Jur., N. S., 724 ; Re Ellison's Trust, 2 Jur., N. S., 62 ; Re Porter's Trust, ibid, 348, unless the trust is to be shortly wound up.—Re Reynault, 16 Jur., 233. Two trustees may be appointed in the place of three Bulkeley v. Earl of Eglinton, 1 Jur., N. S., 994 ; or three in the place of four.—Emmet v. Clarke, 7 Jur., N. S., 404.

Where a legacy had been bequeathed to a sole trustee upon trust for a tenant-for-life, and then for reversioners absolutely, the Court appointed an additional trustee, and ordered the costs of a petition, presented for that purpose by the reversioners, to be paid by them, and not out of the corpus.—Re Brackenbury's Trusts, L. R., 10 Eq., 45.

When a trustee wishes to retire and a successor cannot be found, the Court can appoint the continuing trustees to be sole trustees in the place of the continuing and retiring trustee.—Re Stokes's Trusts, L. R., 13 Eq., 333 ; Re Harford's Trusts, L. R., 13 Ch. Div., 135.

In the case of a charity, the Court appointed ten new trustees and vested the estate in the whole body, and directed that when reduced to three, the trustees should apply at Chambers for the appointment of new trustees.—Lewin, 7th Ed., 884, citing Re Bergholt, 2 Eq. Rep., 90.

The Court will not, if it can be avoided, appoint a cestui que trust to be a trustee.—Ex parte Clutton, 17 Jur., 988. As to appointing the husband of a cestui que trust, see Lewin, 7th Ed., 884. Nor will the Court appoint an alien resident out of the jurisdiction a trustee, unless it is necessary from the circumstances of the case to do so.—Re Hill's Trust, W. N., 1874, p. 228.

APPDX.

If a cestui que trust institutes a suit for the appointment of a new trustee, when a petition would have been sufficient, he will have to bear the additional costs.—Legg v. Mackrell, 1 Giff., 165; Thomas v. Walker, 18 Beav., 521.

Where there are two distinct trust-estates under the same will, but only one set of trustees, the Court, with the consent of the representative of the surviving trustee, will appoint new trustees of one estate without dealing with the other estate Re Dennis, 12 W. R., (Eng.) 575; and generally the Court assumes the power of appointing separate trustees of separate shares.—Re Cotterill's Trusts, W. N., 1869, p. 183. See Lewin, 7th Ed., 884.

The petition for appointment of new trustees must be supported by affidavits of the facts stated, and of the fitness of the proposed trustees, who must give their written consent to the appointment.—In Re Battersby's Trust, 16 Jur., 900. Sometimes a reference as to the fitness of the trustees is directed; but it is not necessary if the evidence adduced is sufficient.—Re Tunstall, 15 Jur., 645. An affidavit of fitness by the solicitor in a suit is not sufficient.—Greendy v. Buckridge, 22 L. J., Chan., 1007.

The new trustee need not appear upon the petition to consent Re Draper's Settlement, 2 W. R. (Eng.), 440; though they may appear to consent.—Re Parke's Trust, 21 L. J., 218. If they do not appear, an affidavit that the proposed new trustees will consent is insufficient Re Parke's Trust, 21 L. J., 218, and their written consent must be proved.—Lewin, 7th Ed., 885.

XXXVI. It shall be lawful (a) for the High Court, upon making any order (b) for appointing a new trustee or new trustees, either by the same or any subsequent order (c), to direct that any immovable property, subject to the trust (d), shall vest in the person or persons who, upon the appointment, shall be the trustee or trustees for such estate as the Court shall direct. Such order shall have the same effect as if the person or persons who, before such order, was or were the trustee or trustees (if any) had duly executed all proper conveyances of such property for such estate (e).

Trustee Act, 1850, s. 34.

(a) The Court has authority to make a vesting order, although there may be a person capable of executing a conveyance.—Re Manning's Trusts, Kay, xxviii.

(b) Where an order is made under the Act, subject to the production of evidence to the Registrar, the order will bear date on or after the day of the production of the evidence. Where a party directed to transfer died between the making and the date of the order, the Court made a supplemental order to meet the difficulty, without requiring a further petition.—Re Havlock's Trust, 11 Jur., N. S., 906.

(c) The Court has jurisdiction to make a vesting order of the legal estate in mortgaged lands when a transfer of the mortgage has been ordered by the Court, and it is doubtful whether the trustees of the debt have power to convey the legal estate.—Re Hughes's Settlement Trusts, 2 H. and M., 695. A vesting order may be made after the appointment of trustees in a suit.—Ibid.

(d) Where a sole trustee of leaseholds had died intestate, and had no legal personal representative, and new trustees had been duly appointed under the settlement, the Court re-appointed the same two persons trustees and made an order vesting the leaseholds in them.—Re Dalglish's Settlement, L. R., 4 Ch. D., 143; see further Lewin, 7th Ed., 385.

(e) In a suit to appoint new trustees, it appeared that of two remaining trustees one had gone out of the jurisdiction, and the other was willing to act,—it was held, that a vesting order could be made to vest the estate in the new trustees to be appointed for such estate as was vested in the continuing and absent trustee.—Smith v. Smith, 3 Drew, 72.

XXXVII. It shall be lawful for the High Court, upon

Power to Court to making any order for appointing a new trustee or new trustees, either by the vest right to call for same or by any subsequent order, to vest transfer of stock, or to sue, in new trustee.

the right to call for a transfer of any stock (a) or Government securities subject to the trust, or to receive the dividends, interest, or income thereof, or to sue for or recover any thing in action subject to the trust, or any interest in respect thereof, in the person or persons who upon the appointment shall be the trustee or trustees (b).

Trustee Act, 1850, s. 35.

(a) Under this section the Court cannot vest the right to the stock in the new trustees.—Re Smyth's Settlement, 4 DeG. and Sm., 499; see s. 29, ante, p. 430. The Court has power under this section to vest the right as to stock standing in the name of a deceased person who has no personal representative.—Re Herbert's Will, 8 W. R. (Eng.), 272, cited Lewin, 7th Ed., 886.

(a) Where a breach of trust has been committed, the Court, though it sanctions the appointment of a new trustee, will make no order respecting the property, lest by so doing it should sanction the breach of trust.—Re Harrison's Trust, 22 L. J., Chan., 69.

(b) The effect of a vesting order is to vest the estate at once from its date in the new trustees without any further formality.—Woodfall v. Arbutnot, L. R., 3 P. and D., 109.

XXXVIII. Any such appointment by the High Court of Old trustees not to be discharged from liability. new trustees, and any such conveyance or transfer as aforesaid, shall operate no further or otherwise than as a discharge to any former or continuing trustee, than an appointment of new trustees under any power for that purpose contained in any instrument would have done.

Trustee Act, 1850, s. 36.

XXXIX. An order under any of the hereinbefore contained

Who may apply under Act. provisions, for the appointment of a new trustee or new trustees, or concerning any immoveable property, stock, or Government securities, or thing in action subject to a trust, may be made upon the application of any person beneficially interested in such immoveable property, stock, Government securities, or thing in action, whether under disability or not (a), or upon the application of any person duly appointed as a trustee thereof; and an order under any of the provisions hereinbefore contained concerning any immoveable property, stock, Government securities, or thing in action subject to a mortgage, may be made on the application of any person beneficially interested in the equity of redemption, whether under disability or not, or of any person interested in the moneys secured by such mortgage.

Trustee Act, 1850, s. 37.

(a) A person who has a contingent interest in a trust-fund has a locus standi to present a petition for the appointment of new trustees.—Re Sheppard's Will, 4 D. F. and J., 423.

The purchaser of property sold under an order of Court is 'beneficially interested,' and is the proper person to apply for a vesting order.—Ayles v. Cox, 17 Beav., 584. He may join with the plaintiffs in presenting the petition.—Rowley v. Adams, 14 Beav., 130. Creditors who have obtained a decree for the administration of the estate of their deceased debtor, under which a contract for the sale of his real estate has been entered into and the purchase-money paid into Court, are 'beneficially interested' in the lands comprised in the contract, and are entitled to apply for a vesting order (Re Wragg, 1 DeG. J. and S., 356); but the committee of the lunatic is not.—Re Bourke, 2 DeG. J. and S., 426.

XL. When any person shall deem himself entitled to an order

Application may be under any of the provisions hereinbefore by petition. contained, it shall be lawful for him to present a petition (a) to the High Court for such order as he may deem himself entitled to, and he may give evidence by affidavit, or otherwise (b), in support of such petition before the said Court, and may serve such person or persons with notice of such petition as he may deem entitled to service thereof (c).

Trustee Act, 1850, s. 40.

(a) When a petition has been presented, it may be amended by an order of the Court by adding co-petitioners without being re-answered.—Re Cartwright's Trust, 8 W. R., (Eng.), 492, cited Lewin, 7th Ed., 887.

(b) In practice, the evidence adduced is universally by affidavit; but under the words 'or otherwise' the applicant is not confined to evidence by affidavit.—Lewin, 7th Ed., 887.

(c) All the cestuis que trustent ought, as a general rule, to be served. See the cases cited, Lewin, 7th Ed., 887; but the Act does not in terms so require, and it is not unusual to dispense with service on all parties.—Re Blanchard, 3 D. F. and J., 137; and see Battersby's Trusts, L. R., 10 Ch. D., 228.

The persons constituting different classes of cestuis que trustent may be proved by affidavit without strict evidence of certificates and affidavits of identity.—Re Hoskins, 4 DeG. and J., 436.

On a petition to appoint new trustees in the place of trustees desirous of retiring, the cestuis que trustent and the old trustees must appear (Re Sloper, 18 Beav., 596), and they will have their costs.—Futroys v. Kennard, 3 L. T., N. S., 687.

It is not, however, necessary to serve the petition on recusant trustees.—Re Baxter, 2 Sm. and G., Appx. v.

A petition for an order vesting in a new trustee property, of which a trustee has become lunatic, ought to be served on his committee as the trustee may have claims.—Re Saumarez, 8 D. M. G., 320; but see Re Green, L. R., 10 Chan., 272. APPDX.

Service of a petition vesting in newly-appointed trustees lands which had descended to the infant heir of the former sole trustee upon the guardian of the infant heir is not necessary (Re Little, L. R., 7 Eq., 323); but the adult heir of a surviving trustee must be served, for he may have some claim to costs.—Lewin, 7th Ed., 1887.

The Court has jurisdiction to order service of the petition upon a person out of jurisdiction.—Ibid.

XLI. Upon the hearing of any such petition, it shall be lawful for the said High Court, should it be deemed necessary, to direct a reference to one of the Judges of the Court to inquire into any facts which require such an investigation, or it shall be lawful for the said Court to direct such petition to stand over, to enable the petitioner to adduce evidence or further evidence before the Court, or to enable notice, or any further notice of such petition to be served upon any person or persons.

Trustee Act, 1850, s. 41.

XLII. Upon the hearing of any such petition, it shall be lawful for the High Court to dismiss such petition with or without costs, or to make an order thereupon in conformity with the provisions of this Act.

Trustee Act, 1850, s. 42.

XLIII. Whensoever in any cause or matter, either by the evidence adduced therein, or by the admission of the parties, or by report of one of the Judges of the Court, the facts necessary for an order under this Act shall appear to the High Court to be sufficiently proved, it shall be lawful for the said Court, either upon the hearing of the said cause or of any petition or application in the said cause or matter, to make such order under this Act (a).

Trustee Act, 1850, s. 43.

(a) An order may be made in a suit without a petition. See the cases collected, Lewin, 7th Ed., 888.

As to whether the order should not be made in Court and not in Chambers, see Frodsham v. Frodsham, L. R., 15 Ch. D., 317.

The Court has no jurisdiction to make a vesting order respecting property which is vested in a lunatic, but there must be a petition in lunacy.—Lewin, 7th Ed., 888, citing Jeffreys v. Drysdale, 9 W. R., 428.

XLIV. Whenever any order shall be made under this Act by the High Court for the purpose of conveying any immoveable property, or for the purpose of releasing or disposing of any contingent right, and such order shall be founded on an allegation of the personal incapacity of a trustee or mortgagee, or an Order made by the High Court founded on certain allegations to be conclusive evidence of the matter contained in such allegations.

APPDX.

allegation that a trustee or the heir or devisee of a mortgagee is out of the jurisdiction of the High Court or cannot be found, or that it is uncertain which of several trustees, or which of several devisees of a mortgagee, was the survivor, or whether the last trustee, or the heir, or last surviving devisee of a mortgagee be living or dead, or on an allegation that any trustee or mortgagee has died intestate without an heir, or has died and it is not known who is his heir or devisee, then, in any of such cases, the fact that the High Court has made an order upon such an allegation shall be conclusive evidence of the matter so alleged in any Court of civil judicature upon any question as to the legal validity of the order: Provided always, that nothing herein contained shall prevent the High Court directing a reconveyance of any immoveable property conveyed or assigned by any order under this Act, or a re-disposition of any contingent right conveyed or disposed of by such order; and it shall be lawful for the said Court to direct any of the parties to any suit concerning such property or contingent right to pay any costs occasioned by the order under this Act when the same shall appear to have been improperly obtained.

Trustee Act, 1850, s. 44.

XLV. It shall be lawful for the High Court to exercise the powers herein conferred for the purpose of Trustee of charity. vesting any immoveable property, stock, Government securities, or thing in action in the trustee or trustees of any charity or society over which charity or society the High Court would have jurisdiction upon suit duly instituted (a), whether such trustee or trustees shall have been duly appointed by any power contained in any deed or instrument, or by the decree of the said Court, or by order made upon a petition to the said Court.

Trustee Act, 1850, s. 45. See further, ante, pp. 366-367.

XLVI. Where any minor or person of unsound mind shall be entitled to any money payable in Money of minors and persons of unsound mind to be paid into Court. discharge of any immoveable property, stock, Government securities, or thing in action conveyed or transferred under this Act, it shall be lawful for the person by whom such money is payable to pay the same into the High Court, in trust in any cause then depending concerning such money, or if there shall be no such cause, to the credit of such minor or person of unsound mind, subject to the order or disposition of the said Court; and it shall be lawful for the said Court upon petition in a summary way to order any money so paid to be invested in Government securities and to order payment or distribution thereof, or payment of the dividends or interest thereof as to the said Court shall seem reasonable. APPDX. —

Trustee Act, 1850, s. 48.

XLVII. When in any suit commenced, or to be commenced, in the High Court, it shall be made to appear to the Court that diligent search and enquiry have been made after any person made a defendant, who is only a trustee, to serve him with the process of the Court, and that he cannot be found, it shall be lawful for the said Court to hear and determine such cause, and to make such absolute decree therein against every person who shall appear to it to be only a trustee, and not otherwise concerned in interest in the matter in question, in such and the same manner as if such trustee had been duly served with the process of the Court and had appeared at the hearing of such cause: Provided always, that no such decree shall bind, affect, or in anywise prejudice any person against whom the same shall be made, without service of process upon him as aforesaid, his heirs, executors, or administrators for or in respect of any estate, right, or interest which such person shall have at the time of making such decree for his own use or benefit, or otherwise than as a trustee as aforesaid (a).

Trustee Act, 1850, s. 49.

(a) In Westhead v. Sale, 6 W. R. (Eng.), 52, cited Lewin, 7th Ed., 890, the Court directed the record and writ clerk to certify that the cause was ready for hearing in the absence of a trustee who could not be found.

XLVIII. Every order to be made under this Act which shall have the effect of a conveyance of any immovable property or a transfer of any such stock, Government securities, or thing in action as can only be transferred by stamped deed, or for the transfer of which a stamp is necessary, shall be chargeable with the like amount of stamp-duty as it would have been chargeable with if it had been a deed executed, or a transfer made (a), by the person or persons holding such property or entitled to such stock, Government securities, or thing in action. Every such order shall be duly stamped for denoting the payment of the said duty.

Trustee Extension Act, 1852, s. 13.

(a) See Act I of 1879 (The General Stamp Act), sched. i, arts., 21, 60.

XLIX. The High Court may order the costs and expenses of, and relating to, the petitions, orders, directions, conveyances, and transfers to be made in pursuance of this Act, or any of them, to be paid and raised out of or from the immovable or APPDX. — moveable property, or the rents or produce thereof, in respect of which the same respectively shall be made, or in such manner as the said Court shall think proper (a).

Trustee Act, 1850, s. 51.

(a) The petition should not pray for costs " incidental to, or subsequent on," the application, as they give rise to uncertainty.—Re Fellow's Settlement, 2 Jur., N. S., 62.

The costs of appointing new trustees are paid out of the trust-fund.—Re Fulham, 15 Jur., 69 ; Ex parte Davies, 16 Jur., 882 ; Re Fellow's Settlement, 2 Jur., N. S., 62.

On an application for appointment of new trustees of two funds, the costs will be paid out of the funds ratably.—Re Grant's Trusts, 2 J. and H., 764.

In Ex parte Davies, 16 Jur., 882, a new trustee was appointed in the place of a sole trustee, deceased. The heir of the deceased trustee could not be found, and, on petition, an order was made to vest the estate in the new trustee, or that upon consent he might pay the costs of the proceedings, and that such costs, with interest at 4 per cent., might form a charge on the inheritance. The Court, on appointing new trustees of real estate, has power under the section to direct the costs to be raised by a mortgage to be settled by the Court.—Re Crabtree, V. C. WOOD, 11th Jan., 1866 ; see Lewin, 7th Ed., 891. Where an order is made for vesting estate in property sold in lots under the order of the Court, the costs will be paid by the vendors out of the purchase-money of each lot and not out of the fund in Court generally.—Ayles v. Cox, 17 Beav., 584.

The Court has no jurisdiction to award costs adversely against third parties cited to appear as respondents upon a petition to appoint new trustees.—Re Primrose, 23 Beav., 590.

L. Upon any petition being presented under this Act to the High Court concerning a person of unsound mind, it shall be lawful for the said Court to make an order directing an enquiry whether such person is or is not of unsound mind, and incapable of managing himself and his affairs. Such order shall have the same effect as the like order made under section 1 of Act XXXIV of 1858 (to regulate proceedings in Lunacy in the Courts of Judicature established by Royal Charter), and the enquiry directed to be made shall be made in all respects in the manner declared and prescribed for making an enquiry under the last-mentioned Act. The High Court may postpone making any order upon the petition presented as aforesaid, until any enquiry so directed to be made shall have been finally concluded.

Trustee Act, 1850, s. 52.

LI. Upon any petition under this Act being presented to the High Court, it shall be lawful for the said Court to postpone making any order upon such petition, until the right of the petitioner shall have been declared in a suit duly instituted for that purpose (a).

Trustee Act, 1850, s. 53.

(a) See Re Collinson, 3 D. M. G., 409 ; Re Burt, 9 Hare, 282.

LII. Every order made, or purporting to be made, under this Act by the High Court shall be a complete indemnity to all persons obeying orders passed under this Act. APPDX.
indemnity to all persons whatsoever for any act done pursuant thereto; and it shall not be necessary for such persons to enquire concerning the propriety of such order, or whether the High Court has jurisdiction to make the same.

Trustee Extension Act, 1852, s. 7.

Orders under the Act to be executed as, and have the effect of, decrees. LIII. Any order made by the High Court under this Act shall have the same effect, and be executed in the same manner, as a decree.

LIV. 'This Act may be cited as "The Indian Trustee Act, 1866."

THE TRUSTEES' AND MORTGAGEES' POWERS ACT, 1866.

ACT XXVIII OF 1866.

(Received the assent of the Governor-General in Council on the 24th October, 1866.)

An Act to give Trustees, Mortgagees, and others, in cases to which English law is applicable, certain powers now commonly inserted in settlements, mortgages, and wills, and to amend the law of Property and relieve Trustees (a).

(a) This Act applies to the whole of British India, except the Scheduled Districts—Act XV of 1874. Sections 2, 3, 4, 5, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, and 37 have been repealed in Madras, the North-West Provinces, and the Panjab, and in the territories administered by the Chief Commissioners of Oudh, the Central Provinces, Coorg, and Assam, by Act II of 1882. The Act is founded on the English Statutes 22 & 23 Vict., c. 35 (The Trustees Relief Amendment Act) and 23 & 24 Vict., c. 145 (The Trustees' and Mortgagees' Act).

WHEREAS it is expedient that, in cases to which English law is applicable (a), certain powers and provisions usually inserted in settlements, mortgages, wills, and other instruments should be made incident to the estates of the persons interested, so as to dispense with the necessity of inserting the same in terms in every such instrument, and that in such cases trustees should be relieved; It is enacted as follows:—

Interpretation of terms.

I. In the construction of this Act, unless there be something repugnant in the subject or context—

Receipt for purchase-money sufficient discharges.

23 & 24 Vict., c. 145, s. 12.

VIII. No such sale as last aforesaid shall be made, until after six months' notice in writing given to the person, or one of the persons, entitled to the property subject to the charge, or affixed on some conspicuous part of such property, but when a sale has been effected in professed exercise of the powers hereby conferred, the title of the purchaser shall not be liable to be impeached on the ground that no case had arisen to authorize the exercise of such power, or that no such notice as aforesaid had been given; but any person damnified by any such unauthorized exercise of such power, shall have his remedy in damages against the person or persons selling.

Notice is to be given before sale; but purchaser relieved from inquiry as to circumstances of sale.

IX. The money arising by any sale effected as aforesaid shall be applied by the person receiving the same as follows:—First, in payment of all the expenses incident to the sale or incurred in any attempted sale; secondly, in discharge of all interest and costs then due in respect of the charge in consequence whereof the sale was made; and thirdly, in discharge of all the principal moneys then due in respect of such charge; and the residue of such money shall be paid to the person entitled to the property subject to the charge, his executors, administrators or assigns, as the case may be.

Application of purchase-money.

23 & 24 Vict., c. 145, s. 14.

APPDX:

X. The person exercising the power of sale hereby conferred shall have power by deed to convey or assign to, and vest in the purchaser, the property sold, for all the estate and interest therein which the person who created the charge had power to dispose of: Provided that nothing herein contained shall be construed to authorize the mortgagee of a term of years to sell and convey the fee-simple of the property comprised therein in cases where the mortgagor could have disposed of such fee-simple at the date of the mortgage.

23 & 24 Vict., c. 145, s. 15.

Where leaseholds are mortgaged by demise, the mortgagee can, under this section, convey the reversion left in the mortgagor to a purchaser. —Hiatt v. Hillman, 19 W. R. (Eng.), 694; Shelf. R. P. Stat., 8th Ed., 736.

XI. At any time after the power of sale hereby conferred shall have become exercisable, the person entitled to exercise the same shall be entitled to demand and recover from the person entitled to the property, subject to the charge, all the deeds and documents in his possession or power relating to the same property, or to the title thereto, which he would have been entitled to demand and recover if the same property had been conveyed, appointed or surrendered to and then were vested in him for all the estate and interest which the person creating the charge had power to dispose of; and where the legal estate shall be outstanding in a trustee, the person entitled to a charge created by a person equitably entitled, or any purchaser from such person, shall be entitled to call for a conveyance of the legal estate to the same extent as the person creating the charge could have called for such a conveyance if the charge had not been made.

23 & 24 Vict., c. 145, s. 16.

XII. Any person entitled to appoint, or obtain the appointment of, a receiver as aforesaid, may, from time to time, if any person or persons has or have been named in the deed of charge for that purpose, appoint such person, or any one of such persons, to be receiver, or if no person be so named, then may, by writing delivered to the person or any one of the persons entitled to the property subject to the charge, or affixed on some conspicuous part of the property, require such last-mentioned person or persons to appoint a fit and proper person as receiver, and if no such appointment be made within ten days after such requisition, then may in writing appoint any person he may think fit. No person shall be ineligible for the office of receiver merely because he is an officer of the High Court.

23 & 24 Vict., c. 145, s. 17.

A receiver who has been appointed under the ordinary power for that purpose in a deed of mortgage drawn according to the English forms (Jeffreys v. Dickson, L. R., 1 Chan., 190), or under this Act, is in possession as the agent of the mortgagor. See s. 13, post.

XIII. Every receiver appointed as aforesaid shall be deemed to be the agent of the person entitled to the property subject to the charge, who shall be solely responsible for his acts or defaults, unless otherwise provided for in the charge.

Receiver deemed to be the agent of the mortgagor.

23 & 24 Vict., c. 145, s. 18.

XIV. Every receiver appointed as aforesaid shall have power to demand and recover and give effectual receipts for all the rents, issues, and profits of the property of which he is appointed receiver, by suit, distress or otherwise, in the name either of the person entitled to the property subject to the charge, or of the person entitled to the money secured by the charge, to the full extent of the estate or interest which the person who created the charge had power to dispose of.

Powers of receiver.

23 & 24 Vict., c. 145, s. 19.

XV. Every receiver appointed as aforesaid may be removed by the like authority, or on the like requisition as before provided with respect to the original appointment of a receiver, and new receivers may be appointed from time to time.

Receiver may be removed.

23 & 24 Vict., c. 145, s. 20.

XVI. Every receiver appointed as aforesaid shall be entitled to retain out of any money received by him, in lieu of all costs, charges, and expenses whatsoever, such a commission not exceeding five per centum on the gross amount of all money received as shall be specified in his appointment, and if no amount shall be so specified, then five per centum on such gross amount.

Receiver to receive commission not exceeding five per cent.

23 & 24 Vict., c. 145, s. 21.

XVII. Every receiver appointed as aforesaid shall, if so directed in writing by the person entitled to the money secured by the charge, insure and keep insured from loss or damage by fire, out of the money received by him, the whole or any part of the property included in the charge which is in its nature insurable.

Receiver to insure if required.

23 & 24 Vict., c. 145, s. 22.

XVIII. Every receiver appointed as aforesaid shall pay and apply all the money received by him in the first place in discharge of Government revenue and of all taxes, rates, and assessments whatsoever, and in payment of his commission as aforesaid, and of the premiums on the insurances if any; and in the next place in payment of all the interest accruing due in respect of any principal money then charged on the property over which he is receiver, or on any part thereof; and subject as aforesaid shall pay all the residue of such money to the person for the time being entitled to the property subject to the charge, his executors, administrators, or assigns.

23 & 24 Vict., c. 145, s. 23.

XIX. The powers and provisions contained in ss. 6 to 18 of this Act, both inclusive, relate only to mortgages or charges made to secure money advanced or to be advanced by way of loan, or to secure an existing or future debt.

23 & 24 Vict., c. 145, s. 24.

XX. Where any license to do any act, which without such license would create a forfeiture, or give a right to re-enter, under a condition or power reserved in any lease heretofore granted, or to be hereinafter granted, shall, at any time after this Act comes into operation, be given to any lessee or his assigns, every such license shall, unless otherwise expressed, extend only to the permission actually given, or to any specific breach of any proviso or covenant made or to be made, or to the actual assignment, underlease, or other matter thereby specifically authorized to be done, but not so as to prevent any proceeding for any subsequent breach (unless otherwise specified in such license); and all rights under covenants and powers of forfeiture and re-entry in the lease contained shall remain in full force and shall be available as against any subsequent breach of covenant or condition, assignment, underlease, or other matter not specifically authorized or made punishable by such license, in the same manner as if no such license had been given; and the condition or right of re-entry shall be and remain in all respects as if such license had not been given, except in respect of the particular matter authorized to be done.

22 & 23 Vict., c. 35, s. 1.

A covenant not to assign or underlet without the license of the lessor is a fair and usual covenant (Morgan v. Slaughter, 1 Esp., 8; Folkingham v. Croft, 3 Anst., 700); but it is not a "common and usual" one.—Henderson v. Hay, 3 Bro. C. C., 632; Church v. Brown, 15 Ves., 258; Browne v. Raban, ibid, 528; Buckland v. Papillon, L. R., 2 Ch., 67. Such a covenant runs with the land (Williams v. Earle, L. R., 3 Q. B., 739; West v.

APPDX. Dobb, L. R., 4 Q. B., 634 ; 5 Q. B., 460) ; but not with the equitable title of a cestui que trust.—West v. Dobb, L. R., 4 Q. B., 634 ; 5 Q. B., 460.

As a general rule, a Court of Equity will not relieve against a forfeiture for alienation without license.—Hill v. Barclay, 18 Ves., 56. If, however, when a written license is necessary the lessor gives a parol license in order to ensnare his lessee, the Court will relieve on the ground of fraud.—Richardson v. Evans, 3 Mad., 218. See further, Woodf., L. & T. 10th Edn., 548.

XXI. Where in any lease heretofore granted, or to be hereafter granted, there is or shall be a power or condition of re-entry on assigning or underletting, or doing any other specified act without license, and a license, at any time after the passing of this Act, shall be given to one of several lessees or co-owners to assign or underlet his share or interest, or to do any other act prohibited to be done without license ; or shall be given to any lessee or owner, or any one of several lessees or owners, to assign or underlet part only of the property, or to do any other such act as aforesaid in respect of part only of such property, such license shall not operate to destroy or extinguish the right of re-entry in case of any breach of the covenant or condition by the co-lessee or co-lessees, or owner or owners, of the other shares or interests in the property, or by the lessee or owner of the rest of the property, as the case may be, over or in respect of such shares or interests or remaining property ; but such right of re-entry shall remain in full force over or in respect of the shares or interests or property not the subject of such license.

XXII. Where the reversion upon a lease is severed, and the rent or other reservation is legally apportioned, the assignee of each part of the reversion shall, in respect of the apportioned rent or other reservation allotted or belonging to him, have and be entitled to the benefit of all conditions or powers of re-entry for nonpayment of the original rent or other reservation, in like manner as if such conditions or powers had been reserved to him as incident to his part of the reversion in respect of the apportioned rent or other reservation allotted or belonging to him.

22 & 23 Vict., c. 35, s. 3,

See Woodf., L. and T., 10th Ed., 550 ; Shelf., R. P., 8th Ed., 710.

Rent-Charges.

XXIII. The release from a rent-charge of part of the immoveable property charged therewith shall not extinguish the whole rent-charge, but shall operate only to bar the right to recover any part of the rent-charge out of the property released, without prejudice, nevertheless, to the rights of all persons interested in the property remaining unreleased, and not concurring in or confirming the release. APPDX.

Release of part of land charged, not to be an extinguishment.

22 & 23 Vict., c. 35, s. 10.

"A person having a rent-charge by releasing all his right in part of the land extinguishes the whole rent, because it issues out of every part, and cannot be apportioned. But a person having a rent-charge may release part of it to the tenant of the land, and reserve part, for the grantee deals only with that which is his own,—namely, the rent, and not with the land. So, if the lessee surrender part of the land to the lessor, the rent services will be apportioned.

"If a man having a rent-charge issuing out of lands, purchases any part of them, the rent-charge is extinct in the whole, because the rent is entire and against common right and issuing out of every part of the land, although it is otherwise where part of the lands out of which the rent issues descends on the grantee. If the grantee of a rent-charge purchases part of the land, and the grantor by his deed reciting such purchase, grants that he may distrain for such rent-charge in the residue of the land, this amounts to a new grant. A rent-charge is extinguished by a devise to the grantee of part of the land out of which the rent-charge issues notwithstanding the devise is expressly made over and above the rent-charge."—Shelf. R. P., 8th Ed., 714. See as to apportionment of rent-charges, Mills v. Cobb, L. R., 2 C. P., 95; Ley v. Ley, L. R., 6 Eq., 174.

Powers.

XXIV. A deed hereafter executed in the presence of, and attested by, two or more witnesses in the manner in which deeds are ordinarily executed and attested, shall, so far as respects the execution and attestation thereof, be a valid execution of a power of appointment by deed or by any instrument in writing not testamentary, notwithstanding it shall have been expressly required that a deed or instrument in writing made in exercise of such power should be executed or attested with some additional or other form of execution or attestation or solemnity: Provided always, that this provision shall not operate to defeat any direction in the instrument creating the power, that the consent of any particular person shall be necessary to a valid execution, or that any act shall be performed in order to give validity to any appointment, having no relation to the mode of executing and attesting the instrument: and nothing herein contained shall prevent the donee of a power from executing it conformably to the power by writing or otherwise than by an instrument executed and attested as an ordinary deed, and to any such execution of a power this provision shall not extend.

22 & 23 Vict., c. 35, s. 12.

XXV. Where by any will, which shall come into operation after the passing of this Act, the testator shall have charged his immoveable property or any specific portion thereof with the payment of his debts, or with the payment of any legacy or other specific sum of Legatee in trust may raise money by sale notwithstanding want of express power in the will.

APPDX. money, and shall have bequeathed the property so charged to any trustee or trustees for the whole of his estate or interest therein, and shall not have made any express provision for the raising of such debt, legacy, or sum of money out of such property, it shall be lawful for the said legatee or legatees in trust, notwithstanding any trusts actually declared by the testator, to raise such debts, legacy, or money as aforesaid by sale and absolute disposition, by public auction or private contract, of the said property or any part thereof, or by a mortgage of the same, or partly in one mode and partly in the other; and any deed or deeds of mortgage so executed may reserve such rate of interest and fix such period or periods of repayment as the person or persons executing the same shall think proper.

22 & 23 Vict., c. 35, s. 14. See Shelf. R. P., 8th Ed., 484.

XXVI. The powers conferred by the last preceding section shall extend to all and every person or persons in whom the property bequeathed in trust shall for the time being be vested by survivorship, or under the laws relating to intestate or testamentary succession, or to any person or persons who may be appointed under any power in the will, or by the High Court, to succeed to the trusteeship vested in such legatee or legatees in trust as aforesaid.

Powers given by last section extended to survivors, legatees, &c.

22 & 23 Vict., c. 35, s. 15.

XXVII. If any testator who shall have created such a charge as is described in section 25 of this Act shall not have bequeathed the property charged as aforesaid in such terms as that his whole estate and interest therein shall become vested in any trustee or trustees, the executor or executors (if any) for the time being named in such will shall have the same or the like power of raising the said moneys as is hereinbefore vested in the legatee or legatees in trust of the said property, and such power shall from time to time devolve in, and become vested in, the person or persons (if any) in whom the executorship shall for the time being be vested.

Executors to have power of raising money, &c., where there is no sufficient bequest.

22 & 23 Vict., c. 35, s. 16.

XXVIII. Purchasers or mortgagees shall not be bound to enquire whether the powers conferred by sections 25, 26, and 27 of this Act, or any of them, shall have been duly and correctly exercised by the person or persons acting in virtue thereof.

Purchasers, &c., not bound to enquire as to powers.

22 & 23 Vict., c. 35, s. 17.

Inheritance.

APPDX.

XXIX. In cases of intestacies occurring before the first day of January, 1866, where there shall be a total failure of heirs of the purchaser, or where any immoveable property shall be descendible as if an ancestor had been the purchaser thereof, and there shall be a total failure of the heirs of such ancestor, then and in every such case the property shall descend, and the descent shall thenceforth be traced from the person last entitled to the property as if he had been the purchaser thereof. This section shall be read as part of Act No. XXX of 1839 (for the amendment of the Law of Inheritance).

22 & 23 Vict., c. 35, s. 19.

Assignment of Moveables and Terms for Years.

XXX. Any person shall have power to assign moveable property now by law assignable, terms for years of immoveable property, and estates by elegit, directly to himself and another person or other persons or corporation, by the like means as he might assign the same to another.

22 & 23 Vict., c. 235, s. 21.

At common law, a man could not assign personalty to himself and another, a rule which occasioned inconvenience in the transfer of trust-property. By this section the continuing and retiring trustees can assign directly to the continuing and new trustees. See ante, p. 327, as to appointment of new trustees.

Purchasers.

XXXI. The bond fide payment to, and the receipt of, any person to whom any purchase or mortgage-money shall be payable upon any express or implied trust shall effectually discharge the person paying the same from seeing to the application thereof, or being answerable for the misapplication thereof.

22 & 23 Vict., c. 35, s. 23.

See Lewin, 7th Ed., pp. 269, 270, 409, 420, & 425; Shelf. R. P., 8th Ed., 488; and ante, pp. 171, 228.

Investment of Trust-Funds.

XXXII. Trustees having trust-money in their hands, which it is their duty to invest at interest, shall be at liberty, at their discretion, to invest the same in any Government securities, and such trustees shall also be at liberty,

On what securities trust-funds may be invested.

APPDX.

at their discretion, to call in any trust-funds invested in any other securities than as aforesaid, and to invest the same on any such securities as aforesaid, and also from time to time, at their discretion, to vary any such investments as aforesaid for others of the same nature: Provided always, that no such original investment as aforesaid, and no such change of investment as aforesaid, shall be made where there is a person under no disability entitled in possession to receive the income of the trust-fund for his life, or for a term of years determinable with his life, or for any greater estate, without the consent in writing of such person.

23 & 24 Vict., c. 145, s. 25. See ante, pp. 164, 226. Partially repealed, ante, p. 443.

XXXIII. In all cases where any property is held by Trustees may apply income of property of minors, &c., for their maintenance.

trustees in trust for a minor, either absolutely or contingently on his attaining majority, or on the occurrence of any event previously to his attaining majority, it shall be lawful for such trustees, at their sole discretion, to pay to the guardians (if any) of such minor, or otherwise to apply for or towards the maintenance or education of such minor, the whole or any part of the income to which such minor may be entitled in respect of such property, whether there be any other fund applicable to the same purpose, or any other person bound by law to provide such maintenance or education or not; and such trustees shall accumulate all the residue of such income by way of compound interest, by investing the same and the resulting income thereof from time to time in proper securities, for the benefit of the person who shall ultimately become entitled to the property from which such accumulations shall have arisen: Provided always, that it shall be lawful for such trustees at any time, if it shall appear to them expedient, to apply the whole or any part of such accumulations as if the same were part of the income arising in the then current year.

XXXIV. Whenever any trustee, either original or substituted, and whether appointed by any Provisions for appointment of new trustees, on death, &c.

High Court or otherwise, shall die, or be six months absent from British India, or desire to be discharged from, or refuse, or become unfit or incapable to act in the trusts or powers in him reposed, before the same shall have been fully discharged and performed, it shall be lawful for the person or persons nominated for that purpose by the deed, will, or other instrument creating the trust (if any), or if there be no such person, or no such person able and willing to act, then for the surviving or continuing trustees or trustee for the time being, or the acting executors or executor, or administrators or administrator of the last surviving and continuing trustee, or for the retiring trustees if they shall all retire simultaneously, or for the last retiring trustee, or where there are two or more classes of trustees of the instrument creating the trust, then for the surviving or continuing trustees or trustee of the class in which any such vacancy or disqualification shall occur (and for this purpose any refusing or retiring trustee shall, if willing to act in the execution of the power, be considered a continuing trustee) by writing to appoint any other person or persons to be a trustee or trustees in the place of the trustee or trustees so dying, or being absent from British India, or desiring to be discharged, or refusing or becoming unfit or incapable to act as aforesaid. So often as any new trustee or trustees shall be so appointed as aforesaid, all the trust-property (if any) which for the time being shall be vested in the surviving or continuing trustees or trustee, or in the heirs, executors, or administrators of any trustee, shall with all convenient speed be conveyed and transferred, so that the same may be legally and effectually vested in such new trustee or trustees, either solely or jointly with the surviving or continuing trustees or trustee, as the case may require. Every new trustee to be appointed as aforesaid, as well before as after such conveyance or transfer as aforesaid, and also every trustee appointed by any High Court either before or after the passing of this Act, shall have the same powers, authorities, and discretions, and shall in all respects act as if he had been originally nominated a trustee by the deed, will, or other instrument (if any) creating the trust. The Official Trustee may, with his consent and by the order of the High Court, be appointed under this section in any case in which only one trustee is to be appointed, and such trustee is to be the sole trustee.

This section does not take away the jurisdiction of the Court to increase the original number of trustees.—Viscountess D'Adhemar v. Bertrand, 35 Beav., 19.

"Where an instrument contains an express power to appoint new trustees in more restricted terms than the statutory powers, it seems doubtful whether the latter is excluded.—Re Jackson, 16 W. R. (Eng.), 572. Where a will contained an express power exercisable by the surviving or continuing trustees, and, all the trustees having died, an application was made to the Court to appoint new trustees, MALINS, V. C., made the order, although it was opposed, on the ground that, under this section, the executor of the surviving trustee was competent to make the appointment.—Ibid. But where a deed of separation contained an express power, and, one of the trustees having died, the husband applied that a trustee, whom he had himself selected, should be appointed by the Court, Lord ROMILLY dismissed the petition with costs, on the ground that, by this section, the power was conferred on the surviving trustee.—Re Souby, 21 W. R. (Eng.), 256. See Shelf. R. P., 8th Ed., 740.

XXXV. The power of appointing new trustees hereinbefore contained may be exercised in cases where a trustee nominated in a trustee predeceasing will has died in the lifetime of the testator.

23 & 24 Vict., c. 145, s. 28. Partially repealed, ante, p. 443.

XXXVI. The receipts of any trustees or trustee for any money payable to them or him by Trustees' receipts to be discharged. reason, or in the exercise, of any trusts or powers reposed or vested in them or him, shall be sufficient discharges for the money therein expressed to be received, and shall effectually exonerate the persons paying such money from seeing to the application thereof, or from being answerable for any loss or misapplication thereof.

23 & 24 Vict., c. 145, s. 29. See ante, p. 229. Partially repealed, ante, p. 443.

XXXVII. Every deed, will, or other instrument creating a trust, either expressly or by implication, shall, without prejudice to the clauses actually contained therein, be deemed to contain a clause in the words or to the effect following,—that is to say, “that the trustees or trustee for the time being of the said deed, will, or other instrument, shall be respectively chargeable only for such moneys, stocks, funds, and securities as they shall respectively actually receive, notwithstanding their respectively signing any receipt for the sake of conformity, and shall be answerable and accountable only for their own acts, receipts, neglects, or defaults, and not for those of each other, nor for any banker, broker, or other person with whom any trust-moneys or securities may be deposited, nor for the insufficiency or deficiency of any stocks, funds, or securities, nor for any other loss, unless the same shall happen through their own wilful default respectively; and also that it shall be lawful for the trustees or trustee for the time being of the said deed, will, or other instrument, to reimburse themselves or himself, or pay or discharge out of the trust-premises all expenses incurred in or about the execution of the trusts or powers of the said deed, will, or other instrument. APPDX. —

22 & 23 Vict., c. 35, s. 31. See ante, p. 210. Partially repealed, ante, p. 443.

XXXVIII. It shall be lawful for any executors to pay any debts or claims upon any evidence that they may think sufficient, and to accept any composition, or any security for any debts due to the deceased, and to allow any time for payment of any such debts as they shall think fit, and also to compromise, compound, or submit to arbitration all debts, accounts, claims, and things whatsoever relating to the estate of the deceased, and for any of the purposes aforesaid to enter into, give, and execute such agreements, instrument of composition, releases, and other things as they shall think expedient, without being responsible for any loss to be occasioned thereby.

23 & 24 Vict., c. 145, s. 30. See ante, p. 222.

XXXIX. No trustee, executor, or administrator making any payment, or doing any act bonâ fide under or in pursuance of any power-of-attorney, shall be liable for the moneys so paid, or the act so done, by reason that the person who gave the power-of-attorney was dead at the time of such payment or act, or had done some act to avoid the power: Provided that the fact of the death, or of the doing of such act as last aforesaid, at the time of such payment or act bonâ fide done as aforesaid by such trustee, executor, or administrator, was not known to him: Provided always, that nothing herein contained shall in any manner affect or prejudice the right of any person entitled to the money against the person to whom such payment shall have been made, but that such person so entitled shall have the same remedy against such person to whom such payment shall be made, as he would have had against the trustee, executor, or administrator, if the money had not been paid away under such power-of-attorney.

22 & 23 Vict., c. 35, s. 26.

At common law, an act done under a power-of-attorney after the death of the grantor is void, as the power is revoked by the death.—Watson v. King, 4 Camp., 272. But in equity, such act is valid if done bonâ fide, and without notice of the death.—Bailey v. Collett, 18 Beav., 179. See ante, p. 208.

7. If upon the dissolution of any such body there remains, after the satisfaction of all its debts and liabilities, any property whatsoever, the same shall not be paid to or distributed among the members of such body or any of them, but shall be given to some other body of persons associated for the purpose of maintaining religious worship or some other religious or charitable purpose to be determined by the votes of not less than three-fifths of the members present at a meeting convened in this behalf, or in default thereof by such Court as last aforesaid.

8. Nothing in sections 6 and 7 shall be deemed to affect any provision contained in any instrument for the dissolution of such body, or for the payment or distribution of such property.

 (b) See p. 276.

CHAPTER II.

OF THE CREATION OF TRUSTS.

4. A trust may be created for any lawful purpose. The purpose of a trust is lawful unless it is (a) Lawful purpose. forbidden by law, or (b) is of such a nature that, if permitted, it would defeat the provisions of any law, or (c) is fraudulent, or (d) involves or implies injury to the person or property of another, or (e) the Court regards it as immoral or opposed to public policy.

Every trust of which the purpose is unlawful is void. And where a trust is created for two purposes, of which one is lawful and the other unlawful, and the two purposes cannot be separated, the whole trust is void.

APPDX. — Explanation.—In this section, the expression 'law' includes, where the trust-property is immoveable and situate in a foreign country, the law of such country.

Illustrations.

(a.) A conveys property to B in trust to apply the profits to the nurture of female foundlings to be trained up as prostitutes. The trust is void.

(b.) A bequeaths property to B in trust to employ it in carrying on a smuggling business, and out of the profits thereof to support A's children. The trust is void.

(c.) A, while in insolvent circumstances, transfers property to B in trust for A during his life, and after his death for B. A is declared an insolvent. The trust for A is invalid as against his creditors.

See Lect. I, pp. 19—50.

5. No trust in relation to immoveable property is valid unless declared by a non-testamentary instrument in writing signed by the author of the trust or the trustee and registered, or by the will of the author of the trust or of the trustee.

No trust in relation to moveable property is valid unless declared as aforesaid, or unless the ownership of the property is transferred to the trustee.

These rules do not apply where they would operate so as to effectuate a fraud.

See Lect. II, p. 51.

6. Subject to the provisions of section five, a trust is created when the author of the trust indicates with reasonable certainty by any words or acts (a) an intention on his part to create thereby a trust, (b) the purpose of the trust, (c) the beneficiary, and (d) the trust-property, and (unless the trust is declared by will or the author of the trust is himself to be the trustee) transfers the trust-property to the trustee.

Illustrations.

(a.) A bequeaths certain property to B, "having the fullest confidence that he will dispose of it for the benefit of" C. This creates a trust so far as regards A and C.

(b.) A bequeaths certain property to B, "hoping he will continue it in the family." This does not create a trust, as the beneficiary is not indicated with reasonable certainty.

(c.) A bequeaths certain property to B, requesting him to distribute it amongst such members of C's family as B should think most deserving. This does not create a trust, for the beneficiaries are not indicated with reasonable certainty.

(d.) A bequeaths certain property to B, desiring him to divide the bulk of it among C's children. This does not create a trust, for the trust-property is not indicated with sufficient certainty.

(e.) A bequeaths a shop and stock-in-trade to B, on condition that he pays A's debts and a legacy to C. This is a condition, not a trust for A's creditors and C. APPDX. —

As to implied trusts, see Lect. III, and as to benami transactions and constructive trusts, Lect. IV.

Who may create trusts.

7. A trust may be created—

- (a) by every person competent to contract, and,
  - (b) with the permission of a principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction, by or on behalf of a minor ;
- but subject in each case to the law for the time being in force as to the circumstances and extent in and to which the author of the trust may dispose of the trust-property.

See p. 124.

Subject of trust. 8. The subject-matter of a trust must be property transferable to the beneficiary.

It must not be a merely beneficial interest under a subsisting trust.

See p. 25.

Who may be beneficiary.

9. Every person capable of holding property may be a beneficiary.

A proposed beneficiary may renounce his interest under the trust by disclaimer addressed to the trustee, or by setting up, with notice of the trust, a claim inconsistent therewith.

Disclaimer by beneficiary.

See p. 127.

10. Every person capable of holding property may be a trustee : but where the trust involves the exercise of discretion, he cannot execute it unless he is competent to contract (a).

Who may be trustee.

No one bound to accept trust.

No one is bound to accept a trust (b).

A trust is accepted by any words or acts of the trustee indicating with reasonable certainty such acceptance (c).

Acceptance of trust.

Instead of accepting a trust, the intended trustee may, within a reasonable period, disclaim it, and such disclaimer shall prevent the trust-property from vesting in him.

Disclaimer of trust.

A disclaimer by one of two or more co-trustees vests the trust-property in the other or others, and makes him or them sole trustee or trustees from the date of the creation of the trust (d).

APPDX.

(a.) A bequeaths certain property to B and C, his executors, as trustees for D. B and C prove A's will. This is in itself an acceptance of the trust, and B and C hold the property in trust for D.

(b.) A transfers certain property to B in trust to sell it and to pay out of the proceeds A's debts. B accepts the trust and sells the property. So far as regards B, a trust of the proceeds is created for A's creditors.

(c.) A bequeaths a lakh of rupees to B upon certain trusts, and appoints him his executor. B severs the lakh from the general assets and appropriates it to the specific purpose. This is an acceptance of the trust.

(a) See p. 127.

(b) See p. 132.

(c) See p. 120.

(d) See p. 132.

CHAPTER III.

OF THE DUTIES AND LIABILITIES OF TRUSTEES.

11. The trustee is bound to fulfil the purpose of the trust, and to obey the directions of the author of the trust given at the time of its creation, except as modified by the consent of all the beneficiaries being competent to contract.

Where the beneficiary is incompetent to contract, his consent may, for the purposes of this section, be given by a principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction.

Nothing in this section shall be deemed to require a trustee to obey any direction when to do so would be impracticable, illegal or manifestly injurious to the beneficiaries.

Explanation.—Unless a contrary intention be expressed, the purpose of a trust for the payment of debts shall be deemed to be (a) to pay only the debts of the author of the trust existing and recoverable at the date of the instrument of trust, or, when such instrument is a will, at the date of his death; and (b) in the case of debts not bearing interest, to make such payment without interest.

(a.) A, a trustee, is simply authorized to sell certain land by public auction. He cannot sell the land by private contract.

(b.) A, a trustee of certain land for X, Y and Z, is authorized to sell the land to B for a specified sum. X, Y and Z, being competent to contract, consent that A may sell the land to C for a less sum. A may sell the land accordingly.

(c.) A, a trustee for B and her children, is directed by the author of the trust to lend, on B's request, trust-property to B's husband, C, on the security of his bond. C becomes insolvent, and B requests A to make the loan. A may refuse to make it.

See p. 135.

12. A trustee is bound to acquaint himself, as soon as possible, with the nature and circumstances of the trust-property; to obtain, where necessary, a transfer of the trust-property to himself; and (subject to the provisions of the instrument of trust) to get in trust-moneys invested on insufficient or hazardous security. APPDX. — instrument of trust) to get in trust-moneys invested on insufficient or hazardous security.

Trustee to inform himself of state of trust-property.

Illustrations.

(a.) The trust-property is a debt outstanding on personal security. The instrument of trust gives the trustee no discretionary power to leave the debt so outstanding. The trustee's duty is to recover the debt without unnecessary delay.

(b.) The trust-property is money in the hands of one of two co-trustees. No discretionary power is given by the instrument of trust. The other co-trustee must not allow the former to retain the money for a longer period than the circumstances of the case require.

See p. 136.

13. A trustee is bound to maintain and defend all such suits, and (subject to the provisions of the instrument of trust) to take such other steps as, regard being had to the nature and amount or value of the trust-property, may be reasonably requisite for the preservation of the trust-property and the assertion or protection of the title thereto.

Trustee to protect title to trust-property.

as, regard being had to the nature and amount or value of the trust-property, may be reasonably requisite for the preservation of the trust-property and the assertion or protection of the title thereto.

Illustration.

The trust-property is immoveable property which has been given to the author of the trust by an unregistered instrument. Subject to the provisions of the Indian Registration Act, 1877, the trustee's duty is to cause the instrument to be registered.

See p. 137.

14. The trustee must not for himself or another set up or aid any title to the trust-property adverse to the interest of the beneficiary.

Trustee not to set up title adverse to beneficiary.

See p. 155.

15. A trustee is bound to deal with the trust-property as carefully as a man of ordinary prudence would deal with such property if it were his own; and, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, a trustee so dealing is not responsible for the loss, destruction or deterioration of the trust-property.

Care required from trustee.

own; and, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, a trustee so dealing is not responsible for the loss, destruction or deterioration of the trust-property.

Illustrations.

(a.) A, living in Calcutta, is a trustee for B, living in Bombay. A remits trust-funds to B by bills drawn by a person of undoubted credit in favor of the trustee as such, and payable at Bombay. The bills are dishonoured. A is not bound to make good the loss.

APPDX.

(b.) A, a trustee of leasehold property, directs the tenant to pay the rents on account of the trust to a banker, B, then in credit. The rents are accordingly paid to B, and A leaves the money with B only till wanted. Before the money is drawn out, B becomes insolvent. A, having had no reason to believe that B was in insolvent circumstances, is not bound to make good the loss.

(c.) A, a trustee of two debts for B, releases one and compounds the other, in good faith, and reasonably believing that it is for B's interest to do so. A is not bound to make good any loss caused thereby to B.

(d.) A, a trustee directed to sell the trust-property by auction, sells the same, but does not advertise the sale and otherwise fails in reasonable diligence in inviting competition. A is bound to make good the loss caused thereby to the beneficiary.

(e.) A, a trustee for B, in execution of his trust, sells the trust-property, but from want of due diligence on his part fails to receive part of the purchase-money. A is bound to make good the loss thereby caused to B.

(f.) A, a trustee for B of a policy of insurance, has funds in hand for payment of the premiums. A neglects to pay the premiums, and the policy is consequently forfeited. A is bound to make good the loss to B.

(g.) A bequeaths certain moneys to B and C as trustees, and authorizes them to continue trust-moneys upon the personal security of a certain firm in which A had himself invested them. A dies, and a change takes place in the firm. B and C must not permit the moneys to remain upon the personal security of the new firm.

(h.) A, a trustee for B, allows the trust to be executed solely by his co-trustee, C. C misapplies the trust-property. A is personally answerable for the loss resulting to B.

See p. 140.

16. Where the trust is created for the benefit of several persons in succession, and the trust-property is of a wasting nature or a future or reversionary interest, the trustee is bound, unless an intention to the contrary may be inferred from the instrument of trust, to convert the property into property of a permanent and immediately profitable character.

Illustrations.

(a.) A bequeaths to B all his property in trust for C during his life, and on his death for D, and on D's death for E. A's property consists of three leasehold houses, and there is nothing in A's will to show that he intended the houses to be enjoyed in specie. B should sell the houses, and invest the proceeds in accordance with section twenty.

(b.) A bequeaths to B his three leasehold houses in Calcutta and all the furniture therein in trust for C during his life, and on his death for D, and on D's death for E. Here an intention that the houses and furniture should be enjoyed in specie appears clearly, and B should not sell them.

See p. 148.

17. Where there are more beneficiaries than one, the trustee

Trustee to be impartial.

is bound to be impartial, and must not execute the trust for the advantage of one at the expense of another.

Where the trustee has a discretionary power, nothing in this section shall be deemed to authorize the Court to control the exercise reasonably and in good faith of such discretion. APPDX. —

Illustration.

A, a trustee for B, C and D, is empowered to choose between several specified modes of investing the trust-property. A in good faith chooses one of these modes. The Court will not interfere, although the result of the choice may be to vary the relative rights of B, C and D.

See p. 152.

18. Where the trust is created for the benefit of several persons in succession, and one of them is in possession of the trust-property, if he commits, or threatens to commit, any act which is destructive or permanently injurious thereto, the trustee is bound to take measures to prevent such act.

See p. 142.

19. A trustee is bound (a) to keep clear and accurate accounts of the trust-property, and (b) at all reasonable times, at the request of the beneficiary, to furnish him with full and accurate information as to the amount and state of the trust-property.

See p. 157.

20. Where the trust-property consists of money and cannot be applied immediately or at an early date to the purposes of the trust, the trustee is bound (subject to any direction contained in the instrument of trust) to invest the money on the following securities, and on no others :—

(a) in promissory notes, debentures, stock or other securities of the Government of India, or of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland ;

(b) in bonds, debentures and annuities charged by the Imperial Parliament on the revenues of India ;

(c) in stock or debentures of, or shares in, Railway or other companies, the interest whereon shall have been guaranteed by the Secretary of State for India in Council ;

(d) in debentures or other securities for money issued by, or on behalf of, any municipal body under the authority of any Act of a Legislature established in British India ;

(e) on a first mortgage of immoveable property situate in British India : Provided that the property is not a leasehold for a term of years and that the value of the property exceeds by one-

APPDX. third, or, if consisting of buildings, exceeds by one-half, the mortgage-money ; or ( f ) on any other security expressly authorized by the instrument of trust, or by any rule which the High Court may from time to time prescribe in this behalf.

Provided that, where there is a person competent to contract and entitled in possession to receive the income of the trust-property for his life, or for any greater estate, no investment on any security mentioned or referred to in clauses (d), (e) and (f) shall be made without his consent in writing.

See p. 160, and compare ss. 5 and 32 of Act XVIII of 1866, ante, pp. 445, 453.

21. Nothing in section twenty shall apply to investments made before this Act comes into force, or shall be deemed to preclude an investment on a mortgage of immoveable property already pledged as security for an advance under the Land Improvement Act, 1871, or, in case the trust-money does not exceed three thousand rupees, a deposit thereof in a Government Savings Bank.

22. Where a trustee directed to sell within a specified time extends such time, the burden of proving, as between himself and the beneficiary, that the latter is not prejudiced by the extension lies upon the trustee, unless the extension has been authorized by a principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction.

Illustration.

A bequeaths property to B, directing him, with all convenient speed and within five years, to sell it, and apply the proceeds for the benefit of C. In the exercise of reasonable discretion, B postpones the sale for six years. The sale is not thereby rendered invalid, but C, alleging that he has been injured by the postponement, institutes a suit against B to obtain compensation. In such suit the burden of proving that C has not been injured lies on B.

See p. 172.

23. Where the trustee commits a breach of trust, he is liable to make good the loss which the trust-property or the beneficiary has thereby sustained, unless the beneficiary has by fraud induced the trustee to commit the breach, or the beneficiary, being competent to contract, has himself, without coercion or undue influence having been brought to bear on him, concurred in the breach, or subsequently acquiesced therein, with full knowledge of the facts of the case and of his rights as against the trustee. APPDX.

A trustee committing a breach of trust is not liable to pay interest except in the following cases :—

(a) where he has actually received interest :

(b) where the breach consists in unreasonable delay in paying trust-money to the beneficiary :

(c) where the trustee ought to have received interest, but has not done so :

(d) where he may be fairly presumed to have received interest.

He is liable, in case (a), to account for the interest actually received, and in cases (b), (c) and (d), to account for simple interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum, unless the Court otherwise directs.

(e) where the breach consists in failure to invest trust-money and to accumulate the interest or dividends thereon, he is liable to account for compound interest (with half-yearly rests) at the same rate :

(f) where the breach consists in the employment of trust-property or the proceeds thereof in trade or business, he is liable to account, at the option of the beneficiary, either for compound interest (with half-yearly rests) at the same rate, or for the nett profits made by such employment.

Illustrations..

(a.) A trustee improperly leaves trust-property outstanding, and it is consequently lost : he is liable to make good the property lost, but he is not liable to pay interest thereon.

(b) A bequeaths a house to B in trust to sell it and pay the proceeds to C. B neglects to sell the house for a great length of time, whereby the house is deteriorated and its market price falls. B is answerable to C for the loss.

(c.) A trustee is guilty of unreasonable delay in investing trust-money in accordance with section twenty, or in paying it to the beneficiary. The trustee is liable to pay interest thereon for the period of the delay.

(d.) The duty of the trustee is to invest trust-money in any of the securities mentioned in section twenty, clause (a), (b), (c) or (d). Instead of so doing, he retains the money in his hands. He is liable, at the option of the beneficiary, to be charged either with the amount of the principal money and interest, or with the amount of such securities as he might have purchased with the trust-money when the investment should have been made, and the intermediate dividends and interest thereon.

(e.) The instrument of trust directs the trustee to invest trust-money either in any of such securities or on mortgage of immoveable property. The trustee does neither. He is liable for the principal money and interest.

(f.) The instrument of trust directs the trustee to invest trust-money in any of such securities and to accumulate the dividends thereon. The trustee disregards the direction. He is liable, at the option of the beneficiary, to be charged either with the amount of the principal money and compound interest, or with the amount of such securities as he might have purchased with the trust-money when the investment should have

APPDX. been made, together with the amount of the accumulation which would have arisen from a proper investment of the intermediate dividends.

(g.) Trust-property is invested in one of the securities mentioned in section twenty, clause (a), (b), (c) or (d). The trustee sells such security for some purpose not authorized by the terms of the instrument of trust. He is liable, at the option of the beneficiary, either to replace the security with the intermediate dividends and interest thereon, or to account for the proceeds of the sale with interest thereon.

(h.) The trust-property consists of land. The trustee sells the land to a purchaser for a consideration without notice of the trust. The trustee is liable, at the option of the beneficiary, to purchase other land of equal value to be settled upon the like trust, or to be charged with the proceeds of the sale with interest.

See pp. 181, 190.

As to interest, pp. 178, 291, 313, 314, 318.

24. A trustee who is liable for a loss occasioned by a breach of trust in respect of one portion of the trust-property cannot set-off against his liability a gain which has accrued to another portion of the trust-property through another and distinct breach of trust.

See p. 192.

25. Where a trustee succeeds another, he is not, as such, liable for the acts or defaults of his predecessor.

Non-liability for predecessor's default.

See p. 193.

26. Subject to the provisions of sections thirteen and fifteen, one trustee is not, as such, liable for a breach of trust committed by his co-trustee:

Non-liability for co-trustee's default.

Provided that, in the absence of an express declaration to the contrary in the instrument of trust, a trustee is so liable—

(a) where he has delivered trust-property to his co-trustee without seeing to its proper application:

(b) where he allows his co-trustee to receive trust-property and fails to make due enquiry as to the co-trustee's dealings therewith, or allows him to retain it longer than the circumstances of the case reasonably require:

(c) where he becomes aware of a breach of trust committed or intended by his co-trustee, and either actively conceals it or does not within a reasonable time take proper steps to protect the beneficiary's interest.

A co-trustee who joins in signing a receipt for trust-property and proves that he has not received the same is not answerable, by reason of such signature only, for loss or misapplication of the property by his co-trustee.

Joining in receipt for conformity.

A bequeaths certain property to B and C, and directs them to sell it and invest the proceeds for the benefit of D. B and C accordingly sell the property, and the purchase-money is received by B and retained in his hands. C pays no attention to the matter for two years, and then calls on B to make the investment. B is unable to do so, becomes insolvent, and the purchase-money is lost. C may be compelled to make good the amount.

See p. 193.

27. Where co-trustees jointly commit a breach of trust, or where one of them by his neglect enables the other to commit a breach of trust, each is liable to the beneficiary for the whole of the loss occasioned by such breach.

But as between the trustees themselves, if one be less guilty than another and has had to refund the loss, the former may compel the latter, or his legal representative to the extent of the assets he has received, to make good such loss ; and if all be equally guilty, any one or more of the trustees who has had to refund the loss may compel the others to contribute.

Nothing in this section shall be deemed to authorize a trustee who has been guilty of fraud to institute a suit to compel contribution.

See p. 206.

28. When any beneficiary's interest becomes vested in another person, and the trustee, not having notice of the vesting, pays or delivers trust-property to the person who would have been entitled thereto in the absence of such vesting, the trustee is not liable for the property so paid or delivered.

See p. 208.

29. When the beneficiary's interest is forfeited or awarded by legal adjudication to Government, the trustee is bound to hold the trust-property to the extent of such interest for the benefit of such person in such manner as the Government may direct in this behalf.

See p. 126.

30. Subject to the provisions of the instrument of trust and of sections twenty-three and twenty-six, trustees shall be respectively chargeable only for such moneys, stocks, funds and securities as they respectively actually receive, and shall

APPDX. not be answerable the one for the other of them, nor for any banker, broker or other person in whose hands any trust-property may be placed, nor for the insufficiency or deficiency of any stocks, funds or securities, nor otherwise for involuntary losses.

Trustee cannot delegate.

Explanation.—The appointment of an attorney or proxy to do an act merely ministerial, and involving no independent discretion, is not a delegation within the meaning of this section.

OF THE RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES OF THE BENEFICIARY.

55. The beneficiary has, subject to the provisions of the instrument of trust, a right to the rents and profits of the trust-property.

See p. 268.

When property has been transferred or bequeathed for the benefit of a married woman, so that she shall not have power to deprive herself of her beneficial interest, nothing in the second clause of this section applies to such property during her marriage.

Illustrations.

(a.) Certain Government securities are given to trustees upon trust to accumulate the interest until A attains the age of 24, and then to transfer the gross amount to him. A, on attaining majority, may, as the person exclusively interested in the trust-property, require the trustees to transfer it immediately to him.

Right to proper trustees.

Explanation I.—The following are not proper persons within the meaning of this section :—

A person domiciled abroad : an alien enemy : a person having an interest inconsistent with that of the beneficiary : a person in insolvent circumstances ; and, unless the personal law of the beneficiary allows otherwise, a married woman and a minor.

Explanation II.—When the administration of the trust involves the receipt and custody of money, the number of trustees should be two at least.

Illustrations.

(a.) A, one of several beneficiaries, proves that B, the trustee, has improperly disposed of part of the trust-property, or that the property is in danger from B's being in insolvent circumstances, or that he is incapacitated from acting as trustee. A may obtain a receiver of the trust-property.

(b.) A bequeaths certain jewels to B in trust for C. B dies during A's lifetime ; then A dies. C is entitled to have the property conveyed to a trustee for him.

(c.) A conveys certain property to four trustees in trust for B. Three of the trustees die. B may institute a suit to have three new trustees appointed in the place of the deceased trustees.

(d.) A conveys certain property to three trustees in trust for B. All the trustees disclaim. B may institute a suit to have three trustees appointed in place of the trustees so disclaiming. APPDX.

(e.) A, a trustee for B, refuses to act, or goes to reside permanently out of British India, or is declared an insolvent, or compounds with his creditors, or suffers a co-trustee to commit a breach of trust. B may institute a suit to have A removed and a new trustee appointed in his room.

See p. 284.

61. The beneficiary has a right that his trustee shall be compelled to perform any particular act of his duty as such, and restrained from committing any contemplated or probable breach of trust.

Illustrations.

(a.) A contracts with B to pay him monthly Rs. 100 for the benefit of C. B writes and signs a letter declaring that he will hold in trust for C the money so to be paid. A fails to pay the money in accordance with his contract. C may compel B on a proper indemnity, to allow C to sue on the contract in B's name.

(b.) A is trustee of certain land, with a power to sell the same and pay the proceeds to B and C equally. A is about to make an improvident sale of the land. B may sue on behalf of himself and C for an injunction to restrain A from making the sale.

See p. 287.

62. Where a trustee has wrongfully bought trust-property, the beneficiary has a right to have the property declared subject to the trust or retransferred by the trustee, if it remains in his hands unsold, or, if it has been bought from him by any person with notice of the trust, by such person. But in such case the beneficiary must repay the purchase-money paid by the trustee, with interest, and such other expenses (if any) as he has properly incurred in the preservation of the property; and the trustee or purchaser must (a) account for the nett profits of the property, (b) be charged with an occupation-rent, if he has been in actual possession of the property, and (c) allow the beneficiary to deduct a proportionate part of the purchase-money if the property has been deteriorated by the acts or omissions of the trustee or purchaser.

Nothing in this section—

(a) impairs the right of lessees and others who, before the institution of a suit to have the property declared subject to the trust or retransferred, have contracted in good faith with the trustee or purchaser; or

(b) entitles the beneficiary to have the property declared subject to the trust or retransferred where he, being competent to

APPDX. contract, has himself, without coercion or undue influence having been brought to bear on him, ratified the sale to the trustee with full knowledge of the facts of the case and of his rights as against the trustee.

See p. 289.

63. Where trust-property comes into the hands of a third person inconsistently with the trust, the beneficiary may require him to admit formally, or may institute a suit for a declaration, that the property is comprised in the trust.

Following trust-property—into the hands of third persons ;

Where the trustee has disposed of trust-property, and the money or other property which he has received therefor can be traced in his hands, or the hands of his legal representative or legatee, the beneficiary has, in respect thereof, rights as nearly as may be the same as his rights in respect of the original trust-property.

Illustrations.

(a.) A, a trustee for B of Rs. 10,000, wrongfully invests the Rs. 10,000 in the purchase of certain land. B is entitled to the land.

(b.) A, a trustee, wrongfully purchases land in his own name, partly with his own money, partly with money subject to a trust for B. B is entitled to a charge on the land for the amount of the trust-money so misemployed.

See p. 291.

64. Nothing in section sixty-three entitles the beneficiary to any right in respect of property in the hands of—

Saving of rights of certain transferees.

(a) a transferee in good faith for consideration without having notice of the trust, either when the purchase-money was paid, or when the conveyance was executed, or—

(b) a transferee for consideration from such a transferee.

A judgment-creditor of the trustee attaching and purchasing trust-property is not a transferee for consideration within the meaning of this section.

Nothing in section sixty-three applies to money, currency notes and negotiable instruments in the hands of a bonâ fide holder to whom they have passed in circulation, or shall be deemed to affect the Indian Contract Act, 1872, section 108, or the liability of a person to whom a debt or charge is transferred.

See p. 291.

65. Where a trustee wrongfully sells or otherwise transfers trust-property, and afterwards himself becomes the owner of the property, the property again becomes subject to the trust, notwithstanding any want of notice on the part of intervening transferees in good faith for consideration.

APPDX.

Acquisition by trustee of trust-property wrongfully converted.

trust-property, and afterwards himself becomes the owner of the property, the property again becomes subject to the trust, notwithstanding any want of notice on the part of intervening transferees in good faith for consideration.

See p. 313.

66. Where the trustee wrongfully mingles the trust-property with his own, the beneficiary is entitled to a charge on the whole fund for the amount due to him.

Right in case of bland-property.

with his own, the beneficiary is entitled to a charge on the whole fund for the amount due to him.

See p. 314.

67. If a partner, being a trustee, wrongfully employs trust-property in the business or on the account of the partnership, no other partner is liable therefor in his personal capacity to the beneficiaries, unless he had notice of the breach of trust.

Wrongful employment by partner-trustee of trust-property for partnership purposes.

property in the business or on the account of the partnership, no other partner is liable therefor in his personal capacity to the beneficiaries, unless he had notice of the breach of trust.

The partners having such notice are jointly and severally liable for the breach of trust.

Illustrations.

(a.) A and B are partners. A dies, having bequeathed all his property to B in trust for Z, and appointed B his sole executor. B, instead of winding up the affairs of the partnership, retains all the assets in the business. Z may compel him, as partner, to account for so much of the profits as are derived from A's share of the capital. B is also answerable to Z for the improper employment of A's assets.

(b.) A, a trader, bequeaths his property to B in trust for C, appoints B his sole executor, and dies. B enters into partnership with X and Y in the same trade, and employs A's assets in the partnership-business. B gives an indemnity to X and Y against the claims of C. Here X and Y are jointly liable with B to C as having knowingly become parties to the breach of trust committed by B.

See p. 319.

68. Where one of several beneficiaries—

Liability of beneficiary joining in breach of trust. (a) joins in committing a breach of trust, or

(b) knowingly obtains any advantage therefrom, without the consent of the other beneficiaries, or

(c) becomes aware of a breach of trust committed or intended to be committed, and either actually conceals it, or does not within a reasonable time take proper steps to protect the interests of the other beneficiaries, or

(d) has deceived the trustee, and thereby induced him to commit a breach of trust,

APPDX. — the other beneficiaries are entitled to have all his beneficial interest impounded as against him and all who claim under him (otherwise than as transferees for consideration without notice of the breach) until the loss caused by the breach has been compensated.

When property has been transferred or bequeathed for the benefit of a married woman, so that she shall not have power to deprive herself of her beneficial interest, nothing in this section applies to such property during her marriage.

See p. 322.

Rights and liabilities of beneficiary's transferee.

69. Every person to whom a beneficiary transfers his interest has the rights, and is subject to the liabilities, of the beneficiary in respect of such interest at the date of the transfer.

See p. 324.

CHAPTER VII.

OF VACATING THE OFFICE OF TRUSTEE.

Office how vacated.

70. The office of a trustee is vacated by his death or by his discharge from his office.

See p. 326.

Discharge of trustee.

71. A trustee may be discharged from his office only as follows:—

- (a) by the extinction of the trust;
- (b) by the completion of his duties under the trust;
- (c) by such means as may be prescribed by the instrument of trust;
- (d) by appointment under this Act of a new trustee in his place;
- (e) by consent of himself and the beneficiary, or, where there are more beneficiaries than one, all the beneficiaries being competent to contract, or
- (f) by the Court to which a petition for his discharge is presented under this Act.

See p. 327.

72. Notwithstanding the provisions of section eleven, every trustee may apply by petition to a principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction to be discharged from his office; and if the Court finds that there is sufficient reason for such discharge,

Petition to be discharged from trust.

it may discharge him accordingly, and direct his costs to be paid out of the trust-property. But where there is no such reason, the Court shall not discharge him, unless a proper person can be found to take his place.

APPDX.

See p. 330.

73. Whenever any person appointed a trustee disclaims, or any trustee, either original or substituted, dies, or is for a continuous period of six months absent from British India, or leaves British India for the purpose of residing abroad, or is declared an insolvent, or desires to be discharged from the trust, or refuses or becomes, in the opinion of a principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction, unfit or personally incapable to act in the trust, or accepts an inconsistent trust, a new trustee may be appointed in his place by—

(a) the person nominated for that purpose by the instrument of trust (if any), or

(b) if there be no such person, or no such person able and willing to act, the author of the trust, if he be alive and competent to contract, or the surviving or continuing trustees or trustee for the time being, or legal representative of the last surviving and continuing trustee, or (with the consent of the Court) the retiring trustees, if they all retire simultaneously, or (with the like consent) the last retiring trustee.

Every such appointment shall be by writing under the hand of the person making it.

On an appointment of a new trustee the number of trustees may be increased.

The Official Trustee may, with his consent and by the order of the Court, be appointed under this section, in any case in which only one trustee is to be appointed and such trustee is to be the sole trustee.

The provisions of this section relative to a trustee who is dead include the case of a person nominated trustee in a will but dying before the testator, and those relative to a continuing trustee include a refusing or retiring trustee if willing to act in the execution of the power.

Compare Act XXVII of 1866, s. 34, ante, p. 433; and see p. 333.

74. Whenever any such vacancy or disqualification occurs, and it is found impracticable to appoint a new trustee under section seventy-three, the beneficiary may, without instituting a suit, apply by petition to a principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction for the appointment of a trustee or a new trustee, and the Court may appoint a trustee or a new trustee accordingly.

Appointment by Court.

APPDX.

In appointing new trustees, the Court shall have regard wishes of the person, if any, empowered to appoint new trustees;

 (c) to the question whether the appointment will promote or impede the execution of the trust; and (d) where there are more beneficiaries than one, to the interests of all such beneficiaries.

Compare Act XXVII of 1866, s. 35, ante, p. 434; and as to selecting new trustees, see p. 285.

75. Whenever any new trustee is appointed under section seventy-three or section seventy-four, all Vesting of trust-pro- the trust-property for the time being perty in new trustees. vested in the surviving or continuing trustees or trustee, or in the legal representative of any trustee, shall become vested in such new trustee, either solely or jointly with the surviving or continuing trustees or trustee as the case may require.

Every new trustee so appointed, and every trustee appointed by a Court either before or after the passing Powers of new trus- of this Act, shall have the same powers, tees. authorities and discretions, and shall in all respects act, as if he had been originally nominated a trustee by the author of the trust.

Compare Act XXVII of 1866, s. 36, ante, p. 436.

76. On the death or discharge of one of several co-trustees, the trust survives and the trust-property Survival of trust. passes to the others, unless the instrument of trust expressly declares otherwise.

See p. 335.

CHAPTER VIII.

OF THE EXTINCTION OF TRUSTS.

Trust how extin- 77. A trust is extinguished—guished.

- (a) when its purpose is completely fulfilled; or
- (b) when its purpose becomes unlawful; or
- (c) when the fulfilment of its purpose becomes impossible by destruction of the trust-property or otherwise; or
- (d) when the trust, being revocable, is expressly revoked.

See p. 335.

Revocation of trust. 78. A trust created by will may be APPDX.
revoked at the pleasure of the testator.

A trust otherwise created can be revoked only—

(a) where all the beneficiaries are competent to contract—by their consent ;

(b) where the trust has been declared by a non-testamentary instrument or by word of mouth—in exercise of a power of revocation expressly reserved to the author of the trust ; or

(c) where the trust is for the payment of the debts of the author of the trust, and has not been communicated to the creditors—at the pleasure of the author of the trust.

Illustration.

A conveys property to B in trust to sell the same, and pay out of the proceeds the claim of A's creditors. A reserves no power of revocation. If no communication has been made to the creditors, A may revoke the trust. But if the creditors are parties to the arrangement, the trust cannot be revoked without their consent.

See pp. 53, 68—76 and 336.

Revocation not to defeat what trustees have duly done. 79. No trust can be revoked by the author of the trust so as to defeat or prejudice what the trustees may have duly done in execution of the trust.

See Wilding v. Richards, 1 Coll., 655.

CHAPTER IX.*

OF CERTAIN OBLIGATIONS IN THE NATURE OF TRUSTS.

Where obligation in nature of trust is created. 80. An obligation in the nature of a trust is created in the following cases.

81. Where the owner of property transfers or bequeaths it, and it cannot be inferred consistently with

Where it does not appear that transferor intended to dispose of beneficial interest. the attendant circumstances that he intended to dispose of the beneficial interest therein, the transferee or legatee must hold such property for the benefit of the owner or his legal representative.

Illustrations.

(a.) A conveys land to B without consideration, and declares no trust of any part. It cannot, consistently with the circumstances under which

---

* This Chapter deals with implied, resulting, and constructive trusts. As to these, see Lectures III and IV.

APPENDIX.

the transfer is made, be inferred that A intended to transfer the beneficial interest in the land. B holds the land for the benefit of A.

(b.) A conveys to B two fields, Y and Z, and declares a trust of Y, but says nothing about Z. It cannot, consistently with the circumstances under which the transfer is made, be inferred that A intended to transfer the beneficial interest in Z. B holds Z for the benefit of A.

(c.) A transfers certain stock belonging to him into the joint names of himself and B. It cannot, consistently with the circumstances under which the transfer is made, be inferred that A intended to transfer the beneficial interest in the stock during his life. A and B hold the stock for the benefit of A during his life.

(d.) A makes a gift of certain land to his wife B. She takes the beneficial interest in the land free from any trust in favour of A, for it may be inferred from the circumstances that the gift was for B's benefit.

82. Where property is transferred to one person for a consideration paid or provided by another person, and it appears that such other person did not intend to pay or provide such consideration for the benefit of the transferee, the transferee must hold the property for the benefit of the person paying or providing the consideration.

Nothing in this section shall be deemed to affect the Code of Civil Procedure, section 817, or Act No. XI of 1859 (to improve the law relating to sales of land for arrears of revenue in the Lower Provinces under the Bengal Presidency), section 36.

83. Where a trust is incapable of being executed, or where the trust is completely executed without exhausting the trust-property, the trustee, in the absence of a direction to the contrary, must hold the trust-property, or so much thereof as is unexhausted, for the benefit of the author of the trust or his legal representative.

Illustrations.

(a.) A conveys certain land to B—

“upon trust,” and no trust is declared; or “upon trust to be thereafter declared,” and no such declaration is ever made; or upon trusts that are too vague to be executed; or upon trusts that become incapable of taking effect; or “in trust for C,” and C renounces his interest under the trust.

In each of these cases B holds the land for the benefit of A.

(b.) A transfers Rs. 10,000 in the four per cents. to B, in trust to pay the interest annually accruing due to C for her life. A dies. Then C dies. B holds the fund for the benefit of A's legal representative.

(c.) A conveys land to B upon trust to sell it and apply one moiety of the proceeds for certain charitable purposes, and the other for the maintenance of the worship of an idol. B sells the land, but the charitable purposes wholly fail, and the maintenance of the worship does not exhaust the second moiety of the proceeds. B holds the first moiety and the part unapplied of the second moiety for the benefit of A or his legal representative.

(2.) A bequeaths Rs. 10,000 to B, to be laid out in buying land to be conveyed for purposes which either wholly or partially fail to take effect. B holds for the benefit of A's legal representative the undisposed of interest in the money or land if purchased.

APPDX.

84. Where the owner of property transfers it to another for an illegal purpose, and such purpose is not carried into execution, or the transferee is not as guilty as the transferee, or the effect of permitting the transferee to retain the property might be to defeat the provisions of any law, the transferee must hold the property for the benefit of the transferee.

85. Where a testator bequeaths certain property upon trust, and the purpose of the trust appears on the face of the will to be unlawful, or during the testator's lifetime the legatee agrees with him to apply the property for an unlawful purpose, the legatee must hold the property for the benefit of the testator's legal representative.

Where property is bequeathed, and the revocation of the bequest is prevented by coercion, the legatee must hold the property for the benefit of the testator's legal representative.

86. Where property is transferred in pursuance of a contract which is liable to rescission, or induced by fraud or mistake, the transferee must, on receiving notice to that effect, hold the property for the benefit of the transferee, subject to repayment by the latter of the consideration actually paid.

87. Where a debtor becomes the executor or other legal representative of his creditor, he must hold the debt for the benefit of the persons interested therein.

88. Where a trustee, executor, partner, agent, director of a company, legal adviser, or other person bound in a fiduciary character to protect the interests of another person, by availing himself of his character, gains for himself any pecuniary advantage, or where any person so bound enters into any dealings under circumstances in which his own interests are, or may be, adverse to those of such other person and thereby gains for himself a pecuniary advantage, he must hold for the benefit of such other person the advantage so gained.

Illustrations.

(a) A, an executor, buys at an undervalue from B, a legatee, his claim under the will. B is ignorant of the value of the bequest. A must hold for the benefit of B the difference between the price and value.

APFDX.

(b.) A, a trustee, uses the trust-property for the purpose of his own business. A holds for the benefit of his beneficiary the profits arising from such user.

(c.) A, a trustee, retires from his trust in consideration of his successor paying him a sum of money. A holds such money for the benefit of his beneficiary.

(d.) A, a partner, buys land in his own name with funds belonging to the partnership. A holds such land for the benefit of the partnership.

(e.) A, a partner, employed on behalf of himself and his co-partners in negotiating the terms of a lease, clandestinely stipulates with the lessor for payment to himself of a lakh of rupees. A holds the lakh for the benefit of the partnership.

(f.) A and B are partners. A dies. B, instead of winding up the affairs of the partnership, retains all the assets in the business. B must account to A's legal representative for the profits arising from A's share of the capital.

(g.) A, an agent employed to obtain a lease for B, obtains the lease for himself. A holds the lease for the benefit of B.

(h.) A, a guardian, buys up for himself incumbrances on his ward B's estate at an undervalue. A holds for the benefit of B the incumbrances so bought, and can only charge him with what he has actually paid.

89. Where, by the exercise of undue influence, any advantage is gained in derogation of the interests of another, the person gaining such advantage without consideration, or with notice that such influence has been exercised, must hold the advantage for the benefit of the person whose interests have been so prejudiced.

Advantage gained by exercise of undue influence.

90. Where a tenant-for-life, co-owner, mortgagee or other qualified owner of any property, by availing himself of his position as such, gains an advantage in derogation of the rights of the other persons interested in the property, or where any such owner, as representing all persons interested in such property, gains any advantage, he must hold, for the benefit of all persons so interested, the advantage so gained, but subject to repayment by such persons of their due share of the expenses properly incurred, and to an indemnity by the same persons against liabilities properly contracted in gaining such advantage.

Advantage gained by qualified owner.

Illustrations.

(a.) A, the tenant-for-life of leasehold property, renews the lease in his own name and for his own benefit. A holds the renewed lease for the benefit of all those interested in the old lease.

(b.) A village belongs to a Hindu family. A, one of its members, pays nazrana to Government, and thereby procures his name to be entered as the inámdár of the village. A holds the village for the benefit of himself and the other members.

(c.) A mortgages land to B, who enters into possession. B allows the Government revenue to fall into arrear with a view to the land being put up for sale and his becoming himself the purchaser of it. The land is accordingly sold to B. Subject to the repayment of the amount due on the mortgage, and of his expenses properly incurred as mortgagee, B holds the land for the benefit of A.

91. Where a person acquires property with notice that another person has entered into an existing contract affecting that property, of which specific performance could be enforced, the former must hold the property for the benefit of the latter to the extent necessary to give effect to the contract.

Property acquired with notice of existing contract.

92. Where a person contracts to buy property to be held on trust for certain beneficiaries, and buys the property accordingly, he must hold the property for their benefit to the extent necessary to give effect to the contract.

Purchase by person contracting to buy property to be held on trust.

93. Where creditors compound the debts due to them, and one of such creditors, by a secret arrangement with the debtor, gains an undue advantage over his co-creditors, he must hold for the benefit of such creditors the advantage so gained.

Advantage secretly gained by one of several compounding creditors.

94. In any case not coming within the scope of any of the preceding sections, where there is no trust, but the person having possession of property has not the whole beneficial interest therein, he must hold the property for the benefit of the persons having such interest, or the residue thereof (as the case may be), to the extent necessary to satisfy their just demands.

Constructive trusts in cases not expressly provided for.

Illustrations.

(a.) A, an executor, distributes the assets of his testator B to the legatees without having paid the whole of B's debts. The legatees hold for the benefit of B's creditors, to the extent necessary to satisfy their just demands, the assets so distributed.

(b.) A by mistake assumes the character of a trustee for B, and under colour of the trust receives certain moneys. B may compel him to account for such moneys.

(c.) A makes a gift of a lakh of rupees to B, reserving to himself, with B's assent, power to revoke at pleasure the gift as to Rs. 10,000. The gift is void as to Rs. 10,000, and B holds that sum for the benefit of A.

95. The person holding property in accordance with any of the preceding sections of this chapter must, so far as may be, perform the same duties, and is subject, so far as may be, to the same liabilities and disabilities, as if he were a trustee of the property for the person for whose benefit he holds it:

Obligor's duties, liabilities and disabilities.

Provided that (a) where he rightfully cultivates the property or employs it in trade or business, he is entitled to reasonable remuneration for his trouble, skill and loss of time in such cultivation or employment; and (b) where he holds the property by

APPDX. — virtue of a contract with the person for whose benefit he holds it, or with any one through whom such person claims, he may, without the permission of the Court, buy or become lessee or mortgagee of the property or any part thereof.

96. Nothing contained in this chapter shall impair the rights of transferees in good faith for consideration, or create an obligation in evasion of any law for the time being in force.

Saving of rights of
bonâ fide purchasers.
